350 Passengers Saved When Boat Caught Fire

BALTIMORE, Md., July 5. — Three hundred and fifty passengers were rescued when the steamer Three Rivers of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company burned to the wateredge early to-day in the Chesapeake Bay off Cove Point, 30 miles below Baltimore.

The only known dead according to advices received here early to-day are two negroes, a man and a woman.

The passengers were taken off by the steamer Alleghany of the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company, and the Middlesex, of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company, according to a wireless message from the Alleghany.

Campbellville Youth Had Snow Ball Fight

GUELPH, July 5. — (Canadian Press.)— Yesterday the youth of Campbellville, 20 miles east of this city, engaged in an unseasonable pastime of snowballing on the streets of the village. Last winter while workmen were engaged in getting out gravel in a deep pit near Robinson's lime kilns, the walls caved in and tons of earth fell into the excavation covering up the snow which had lodged there and which was several feet deep. Teamsters at work cleaning out the pit came across the snow and had to cart away several loads of it before they could get at the gravel underneath. It was teamed to the village, where it was dumped.

PETERBOROUGH

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Bridge Closed to Traffic on the Meyersburg Road.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 5.—The bridge at Meyersburg on the Brighton road has been closed to traffic and will be replaced by a cement structure. In the meantime cars and other vehicles using that thoroughfare are obliged to ford the river which is over three feet deep. Some of the heavier autos become stalled in the water and all day yesterday a team of horses was kept at the bridge to pull such cars onto the road.

News Notes

Purdy Pettey, his aunt, Mrs. E. Vermilyea, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moore, accompanied by Jack Haig, will go to Percy Boom to-day for an outing in the Petty cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil McLean, who were recently married were given a reception and shower last night at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Barnum on Front street.

JELLY FISH HUNGRY.

BREMERHAVEN, July 5.—Haddock and herring are being driven from the North Sea by great schools of jelly fish that were swept in from the Atlantic Ocean in 1920. The jelly fish at once made themselves at home, consuming the food in the sea in such large amounts that the other fish are unable to subsist.

STOP BOBBING HAIR.

LONDON, July 5.—Bobbed hair is making a rapid exist from London. Women and girls who have had their hair cut short are now anxious to have it grow out again, hair dressers say. Many are now having their bobbed or shingled hair permanently waved to lessen the "bare" effect. There has been a similar reaction in Paris against bobbing.

POLICE AFTER GUIDES.

PARIS, July 5.—The police spotlight has been turned on Paris' mob of unofficial guides. Men who accost foreign visitors on the streets with knowing smiles and offer to show them "Paris" are being arrested and shown the jail instead. Under the new rules, anyone wishing to act as a guide in Paris must make a formal request for permission to the prefect of police.

NO SECRET MARRIAGES.

TIFFIN, O., July 5.—Secret marriages have meant the loss of a degree to one student and credits to two others at Heidelberg University. Under a college rule, marriage is forbidden to students under a penalty of dismissal. One of the students was dropped from the list of graduates when his secret wedding to a Tiffin school teacher was announced.

FABLES ON HEALTH

The word "tight" could never have been applied to anything worn by Mr. Mann of Anytown.

He wore suspenders, rather than a belt, and couldn't be bothered by such a thing as garters.

It isn't necessary to be either extreme or faddish, however. Just get the word "tight" out of the vocabulary of wearing apparel.

With women it's generally corsets or shoes. Constriction from the former can lead to serious ailments; form the latter to extreme discomfort or, pain.

With men it's belts, hats, shoes garters and neckwear.

Few men consider neckwear when thinking of articles that may be too tight and yet many minor ills and uncomfortable feelings can arise from a tight collar or a tightly tied necktie.

Tight hats can affect the hair growth, checking the circulation in the scalp and tight belts can bring circulatory and other troubles in the abdomen.

Look out for constriction of all sorts.

At best they breed discomfort.

EXERCISE AND ACT GRACEFULLY

Do Not Strain Yourself For Gracefulness, Stretch For It.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 5.—Don't strain for gracefulness; stretch for it!

This is newly announced formula of Miss Gladys Day Snyder, a leading San Francisco instructor in dancing and correct feminine carriage.

"Limberness and muscle control are the fundamental essentials for grace," she declares.

"Stretching is the best mode for obtaining them.

"Consider the house cat or the caged tiger. Deprived of their usual methods of exercising, they stretch. Thus they never lose their suppleness."

Miss Snyder is applying her theory with remarkable success to a large class of beauty aspirants. Ages range from 4 years to decades. "None too young nor too old to profit," she says.

Aid to Health.

Other benefits come from the exercises also, declares the instructress. Health improvement is noted immediately and actual physical defects may be corrected. Among the latter are knock knees, pigeon toes, fallen arches and flat feet, knobby knee caps and weak ankles.

"Correction of any of these faults should be achieved in six months if stretching is done faithfully," Miss Snyder declares.

She does not believe ordinary calisthenics adequate for grace. In fact, she states, if carried too far they may result in a muscle-bound condition—direct antithesis.

"Many women are muscle bound to a greater or lesser extent, though perhaps they do not realize it until they start stretching," explains Miss Snyder.

"For this reason children respond more readily to the system than do their elders. But final maximum benefit is to all."

After a short period of training, Miss Snyder's pupils are capable of postures considered impossible by them prior to the start of the course—postures such as touching the shoulder blade with the foot, or a similar touching of the back of the head.

Best results can be obtained with assistance of a second person, according to the teacher.

Forces Stretches.

"An actual forcing beyond the point at which the girl is able to stretch is essential. Thus, for example, when the leg has been stretched as far as possible in any direction, the other person should actually force it further.

This should be done gently, carefully and with a steady non-jerky motion—but nevertheless firmly. Forcing should not be carried to a point where pain commences, however."

Miss Snyder recommends four stretching exercises to be used, either in conjunction with or independently of other forms of calisthenics.

All of them necessitate the use of some support, approximately waist high. The foot of a bed is useful.

First of Miss Snyder's exercises is with the back to the support and grasping it with both hands, one to each side of the body, palms forward. One foot is then raised until the toe touches the other knee cap. From this position the toe is stretched upward and out as far as possible, and the knee stiffened. When at the maximum height, the second person grasps the leg and forces it further upward, body of the exerciser remaining erect and immovable, knees stiff. After which the leg is lowered to a position horizontal to the floor and held or "sustained" there until muscle fatigue forces it down.

Sideward.

The exercise should then be repeated with the other leg.

The second stretching is executed the same as the foregoing, except that the leg is raised and stretched sideward.

Exercise No. 3 is done from a position facing the support. One foot is then raised to the other knee cap and extended backward until it reaches a maximum height, with knee straight. The second person then forces it further, knee remaining stiff and body erect. After which comes the sustaining, as in exercise 1.

The fourth in the series is done similar to the third, with exception that the knee is bent, lower leg extending upward and the body is inclined backward to the fullest extent.

In this exercise eventual goal should be to touch the back of the head, and then the shoulder with the sole of the foot. Stretching in this exercise is of both body and the leg, grasp being under the leg and over the opposite shoulder.

In all the exercises, every movement should be slow and with endeavor to make the rhythm as graceful as can be.

AUCTION SALE INDIAN RIVER

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

INDIAN RIVER, July 5. — Any man who has charged himself with the task of demonstrating that things are not so good with the farmers of Ontario, could gather material and even inspiration for his mission by attending an auction sale, especially a sale of thoroughbred stock, in this district. James White, who lives on a farm about three miles from this place, disposed of 36 head f purebred Holsteins at auction yesterday for an aggregate of $2200, less than one third of what the same class of animals would have brought if put on the market a few years ago. In 1919 Mr. White held a dispersion sale of thoroughbreds of the same breed, when dairy cows went as high as $300, a vastly different figure from the top price yesterday.

This sale yesterday was held in the very centre of one of the leading dairy districts in Peterboro county, and all the buyers were local men. The cattle were all dehorned and in the pink of condition. Not only that but every animal in the herd has passed the tuberculin test, so that everything was in their favor. The herd sire, of royal lineage and record, with the color and marks of the aristocrat—white, with only slight spots of black—was led out into the ring, but the best persuasive powers of J. R. Battisby, the auctioneer from Campbellford, failed to secure a bid, and the animal remains in Mr. White's possession.

If instead of being accredited, Mr. White's herd had been found to be infected with tuberculosis, the government would have destroyed them, allowing him by way of compensation $100 each for at least the best of the animals. P. B. Nelson, deputy reeve of the Township of Seymour, who acted as sales manager yesterday — his duty being to announce the breeding of each animal — stated to the crowd that in his opinion that the testing of dairy cattle will be made compulsory and there will be no bonus allowed for any that are condemned. Mr. Nelson owns a herd of about 20 accredited Holsteins himself.

In the Indian River district the favorite dairy cow is the Holstein, so that there is no local prejudice against that breed when they are offered for sale.

Those Who Invested.

Among the leading purchasers yesterday with the animals selected by each were the following well-known dairymen:

Joseph Garvey, Douro; Rag Apple Lassie, 4 years old; Lily Cormicokia Dekol, 3 years old; Lassie Cormicok Dekol, 2 years old; Straight Meadow Queen, 2 years old; Quidee Acme, 2 years old; Korndyke Lassie a yearling, Queen Korndyke, 6 months old; Queen Korndyke, 6 months.

W. W. Brown, Peterboro—Quidee Butter Maid, 6 years old; May Maiden, 3 weeks old.

Percy Davidson, Minnie May Helena, six years old.

David Devlin — Minnie Pontiac Clyde, 5 years old.

Nolan Darling—Johan Meadow, Queen, 3 years.

A. Carveth, —Rag Apple Queen Dekol 3 years.

T. Davidson—Rosie Dekol.

James Sergeant—Laurefta Pontiac, 2 years.

Ernest Warner, — Duchess Rag Apple, 2 years.

Charles Boulton—Rosie Rag Apple 2 years; and a male calf of Minnie Pontiac Clyde.

J. J. Breckenridge —Rag Apple Johanna Queen, 2 years, Minnie Cormicokia, 2 years.

J. Calder — Lily Cormicokia, 2 years; Lily Cormicokia Lass, yearling.

J. O'Brien, Indian River—Minnie Dekol yearling.

J .Young, — Rosie Korndyke, 6 months, Ormsby Korndyke 3 months

O. Young—Korndyke Dekol, five months.

Other Sales.

Four brood sows brought an aggregate of $82, the highest priced one going to Richard Sherhan, of Indian River, for $26.

A De Laval separator with a capacity of 1,000 pounds of milk an hour, went for $95.

Some Farm Values.

Mr. White owns a 300-acre farm, the most of which is in pasture. The 100 acres on which his residence stands was obtained from the Crown for $350 an acre over 100 years ago by William Newhall, who also got at the same time a Crown deed for the 700 acres to the north of him. Mr. Newhall afterward sold this latter farm to his brother-in-law for one pound of tea, worth at that time $1. There was pine on the land which would be worth a fortune in these days, but the most of this was burned out of the way as so much rubbish in order to clear the land. Some of the best of the pine, however, was taken out by different lumbermen for masts and made into square timber for the British market, being floated down Indian River to Rice Lake and the Trent River to Lake Ontario. The price paid the owner of the land was comparatively a nominal sum.

HEAD OF GAVEL FOUND ITS MARK

Interesting Sidelight of the Big Convention in New York.

MADISON SQUARE GARDENS, New York, July 55. — (Canadian Press.)— Herman Schoernstein, of New York, suffered concussion of the brain last night when he was struck on the head by Chairman Walsh's gavel as it flew off the handle and bounced into delegates in the Democratic National Convention. Schoernstein was taken to the Convention Hospital after the accident and was unconscious for five minutes, but later his condition was pronounced not serious. The head of the chairman's gavel has been flying off at least once a day under the walloping the chairman had given whacking boards in tense moments.

Democratic National Convention adjourned at 12.15 a.m. until 10.30 o'clock this (Saturday(morning, without reaching a decision on the Presidential candidate. The last ballot taken was the seventieth, and ninth of the day. The standing is as follows:

William G. McAdoo, 528 1-2; Governor Smith, 334 1-2; John W. Davis, 67; Newton D. Baker, 56; Senator Underwood, 37 1-2; Senator Glass, 255; Senator Robinson, 21; Governor Ritchie, 16 1-2.

Just before adjournment a motion was put by the delegate for the effect that the two leading candidates, McAdoo and Smith, in view of the seeming impossibility of breaking the deadlock which exists, should withdraw their names and throw their votes to another candidate, who might obtain favor of the convention.

The resolution was howled down.

THE FINE ARTS.

'Tis true that music's sweet control
Has power to soothe the savage soul,
With zeal the coldest heart inflame,
And patronage unstinted claim.

The painter's genius, Heaven inspired,
By multitudes may be admired,
And live in beauteous scenes portrayed,
By honor's glorious meed repaid.

And art poetic may have charms,
To thrill the soul with fond alarms,
Though destined not, the bard to find,
Of laurel wreath, one leaf entwined.

Brilliant all these, yet pales their light,
Eclipsed by arts more dazzling bright,
Nor may they for a moment hope
With far superior art, to cope.

Even such fine art, as carving slices,
At social fetes, from zero ices,
Or this, of loftier degree,
The master art, of pouring tea!
—Mrs. A. F. Calder.

THE CHEMIST AND THE ROSE.

There was once a chemist who found a rose,
Dewy and fresh in its fragrant bloom.
"I wonder," quoth he, "how this fair flower grows,
And from whence it gathers its sweet perfume.

So he plucked the rose in this belief:
"I will carry it home and search out where,
Deftly hidden in petal or leaf,
Is this fragrance sweet that scents
the air."

Then over his fire with alembic and still
He burned it up, and he boiled it down
With acids and alkalies, until
The rose and its sweet perfume were gone.

'Tis folly indeed that one should care
The sweets of life to analyze.
To drink one's fill of the perfumed
air
Is the only way to be truly wise.
—Walter Learned.

NEWS FROM MADOC

Funeral of Miss Edith Bray —Social Events in Town.

MADOC, July 5.— The funeral of Miss Edith Bray of Belleville, formerly of Madoc, took place on Wednesday, with service in Belleville and interment in Madoc cemetery. Miss Bray was a sister of Mrs. C. G. Wilson and was well known in Madoc. The sympathy of the community is extended to Mrs. Wilson and Miss Lizzie Bray in their bereavement.

The many friends of Mrs. W. H. Hungerford will be pleased to know that she has been pronounced out of danger, and every hope is entertained for her ultimate recovery. Her daughter, Mrs. Macdonald has returned to her home in Toronto.

The summer school has opened with an attendance of about forty students.

On Sunday morning last the Loyal Orange Lodge attended divine service at St. Peter's Presbyterian church. Rev. Mr. McCormick preached a very able sermon which was much appreciated by the visitors.

A School Picnic

The Methodist Sunday School picnic which was held on Tuesday July 1st was a great success in spite of the shower which caught the merry-makers just at the close of the supper hour. Fortunately the bountiful repast had been consumed so everyone was in good humor and did not mind a little wetting. Mr. F. Dafoe kindly loaned his cottage at Moira Lake for the event, and every one present voted it a most enjoyable afternoon.

The Clock-golf tea held on Miss Suttons' lawn yesterday afternoon was another delightful occasion, the perfect weather contributing largely to the enjoyment. A goodly number of ladies and gentlemen tried their skill on the three clocks prepared for their pleasure, and at the same time whetted their appetites for the refreshments which followed.

Mrs. Sutton and Miss Barbara Foote of Norwood motored to town to-day with Mrs. A. Weir.

SATURDAY, JULY 5, 1924.

A RATIONAL HOLIDAY.

Dr. Hastings, the Medical Officer of Health for the city of Toronto, evidently believes that it is not only his duty to look after the health of the citizens when they are at home, but also during the vacation period when many of them are far away from Toronto.

Consequently the M. O. H. issues a vacation bulletin each summer that is full of good advice for those who are departing upon holiday trips.

Dr. Hastings' counsel could be profitably followed by Peterborough people, particularly that portion of his bulletin which points out the folly of dancing the better part of each night, and then expecting to come home benefitted by a vacation.

The practice he complains of is becoming general at most summer resorts, and many young people who should be enjoying the benefit of healthful exercise in the daytime and plenty of sound sleep at night are reversing the process and are devoting the nights to dancing and the best part of the day to catching up with their lost sleep.

Two weeks of that kind of a vacation leave the average man or woman in worse condition physically than at the beginning of the holiday.

On the other hand, the individual who spends the vacation rationally and enjoys to the full the opportunities provided by Ontario's summer resorts for paddling, fishing, sailing and swimming and is satisfied with a moderate amount of dancing, is ready to face another year's work cheerfully and in fit condition.

Dr. Hastings performs a good service in emphasizing this phase of the vacation question.

A PETERBOROUGH REUNION.

Peterborough people who have visited Lindsay during the Old Boys' Reunion this week have returned firmly convinced that Peterborough should have a similar celebration on its own account next summer.

Every visitor has been a convert, and there is much enthusiasm over the prospects of a reunion for this city on similar but even more ambitious lines.

If there is to be anything of this nature undertaken no time should be lost in arranging for the personnel of the organization to take charge of the celebration.

A real reunion lasting a week cannot be planned in a fortnight or two.

To be successful there must be many months of preparation, and the first essential would seem to be the appointment of a permanent secretary who would devote his whole time to preparations for the reunion.

A vast amount of preliminary work that would keep a secretary busy for months would have to be carried out, while, in addition, numerous committees would have to be appointed to take care of the various details.

All of which means that if Peterborough is to have an old home week next summer the preparations for the event would have to be taken in hand and an organization arranged early in the winter.

In fact, just now when the success of other communities in this regard is before the eyes of the people might be an opportune time to launch the proposition and to effect the preliminary organization, thus having the machinery available for use when needed.

A feature of such a celebration might be a pageant showing the arrival in Peterborough of Champlain and his party on their adventurous voyage through the waterway that is now the Trent Canal, or the coming to Scott's Plains, as it was called then, of the Peter Robinson immigrants.

EDUCATION IS NOT ALL.

He was good and straight and respected for 49 years, and then—

Arthur W. Kent, old and broken, was taken to the jail to Ann Arbor, Michigan.

He had been schoolmaster, teacher of history, leader of a Sunday school class, general helper and adviser to young ideas. Now he is at the end of things, for, in a brief two years, he wrecked a lifetime of honor.

Wife became sick. His salary never had been large, as seems the sad lot of the school teacher, and grave need faced him. He fell.

A bogus check was passed. It did not save the wife and it destroyed him. His conscience pricked and he fled from his crime, fled from himself. Into the far places of the country he sped, always with the hand of the law reaching for him.

But he wrote other worthless checks—it was easy to defraud—but they only relieved the body but not the soul. His flight became more desperate. Always, always, the law was but a few steps behind him.

"I never knew happiness in those two years of flight," he says. "I never knew what it was to live blissfully or sleep soundly. Always fearing, always fleeing."

Now the law has caught him—caught him, an old, broken, helpless wreck, body and soul. "I have learned the lesson I have taught so many of my students," he tearfully says. "Education is nothing without moral stability."

Yes, he has learned the truth too late for himself, but in time to point a moral for others.

Education is not all. Character must be its companion, for brains that know not the leash of morality only make crime more hideous.

Poor, wrecked, old Kent knows this now and the best he can do with what is left of him is to offer himself as a terrible example.

SIGNS OF PROSPERITY.

All indications, the Examiner believes, point to the fact that Canada is justified in hoping for an increased national income during the current year.

The price of wheat continues to improve in the world markets, and as one authority puts it, "the materialization of present crop estimates would go a long way toward restoring prosperity, not only to the farmer of the West, but also to the country as a whole, particularly in view of the unfavourable condition of the wheat crop in other countries.

The reports from the West show that the acreage sown to wheat in the Prairie Provinces is about 95 per cent. that of last year, and this slight falling off in wheat is made up by larger acreage of flax, corn, sweet clover and other fodder crops.

The prices are already much better.

No. 1 Northern was quoted at $1.10 this time last year, while current quotations have reached $1.20.

It is fairly safe to assume in connection with the price of different grades that the range of prices will increase relatively with the increase in the price of No. 1 Northern, that is 10c a bushel.

With an estimated crop yield of 441,000,000 bushels the increase so far represents a gain to the farmers of the West of some $44,000,000.

The improvement in prices is not confined to wheat. Oats on July 1st brought 46 cents, as against 43c last year; barley around 70c, in comparison with 52c at the beginning of July, 1923, and rye 78c, as against 63c last year.

With crops anything like last year, it is obvious that the purchasing power of the Western farmers should be greatly increased.

It should be remembered that the increased prices do not increase the cost of production, and therefore represent net profit to the farmer.

A ten-cent increase in wheat will double the profits of many farmers, and this not only refers to the new crop, but to the crop of last year, many millions of bushels of which have still to be marketed.

BRITIAN'S POLITICAL FUTURE.

When the last general election was held in Britain the Conservatives polled about 5,500,000 votes, the Labor Party about 5,000,000, and the Liberals about 4,500,000. The Conservatives resigned control of the Government because they felt they had not a sufficient mandate from the electors to carry on, and the Labor Party accepted responsibility for the Government, although they were weaker than the Conservatives. There has been no factious opposition, but there has been, apparently, a general willingness to allow the Labor Party to make good if it could, says the Christian Guardian. The Conservatives have generally voted against the Government, and the Liberals have generally voted for it, but the tension has been very palpable, and there is a general expectation that the Government will be forced within a few months either to resign or to appeal to the people. The Government's record has been singularly conseryative, and while this has vexed some of the radicals it has certainly helped to strengthen the confidence of the people in the sound common sense of the Labor leaders. Yet they have not nationalized the miners or railways; they have not restored harmony to Europe; they have not abolished unemployment; and they themselves probably would be the first to admit that the miracles they hoped to perform while they were in opposition are beyond their power. What would the result of a new election be? The Conservatives evidently hope to draw from the Liberal Party some voters who are afraid of Socialism; the Labor Party hopes to attract to its ranks a good many Liberals who are really Liberal, and not afraid of a touch of Socialism; and the Liberals insist that the Liberal Party is not dead, but simply awaits a reliable and competent leader, such as Asquith and Lloyd George aimed to be, and might have been, but apparently are not. Whichever party wins, however, Britain will no doubt survive, and continue to do her work as best she may.

NONE SO BLIND AS THOSE WHO WON'T SEE.

It is earnestly to be hoped that the American people are not so absorbed in the circus that is being presented twice daily in Madison Square Gardens that affairs of international moment escape their notice. It will not be well for the peace of the world if the blare of the bands and the raucous shouts of frenzied partisanship drown the deep-toned warning bells that were wafted over the ocean yesterday from Tokio and Lyons.

At the Japanese capital there was a demonstration against the Stars and Stripes which was regarded so seriously in Government circles that it was the cause of a special meeting of the Diet being summoned late at night and the conveying of official apologies and all the excitement that accompanies a diplomatic "incident." Thousands of people in the United States will laugh at the suggestion that serious importance should be attached to such a circumstance. They will put the incident down to the promptings of an unbalanced brain. Yet they would do well not to forget that a crazed student who fired a pistol at Sarajevo because of some fancied grievance kindled the spark that flared into the greatest conflagration of the world's history. It may seem trivial that a few Japanese have committed suicide in protest against what they regard as an insult to their nation, or that the national flag of the United States is trampled on and slashed in dishonor; but these incidents lose their littleness when measured by the yard-stick of their underlying motives.

Japan is obviously deeply stirred by resentment and she takes the means of displaying her feelings in the way in which she thinks she is best able to express her humiliation and her contempt for her enemy. To Western minds with more material standards the idealism of these suicides is incomprehensible. They are none the less real to the Japanese. The flag "incident" in itself may seem stupid to the "Eat-'em-alive-o's" of the United States, but it is deadly serious to the Japanese.

* * * *

From Lyons comes another warning. At the great industrial centre of France are gathered delegates from all parts of the world to a conference of League of Nations societies. There the question of the recent legislation of the United States about Oriental immigration was the topic of debate, and "applause rose from various parts of the auditorium" when the Japanese Ambassador stated the case for his nation. Moreover, the applause was renewed when the head of the delegation from France made a scathing attack on the United States for its action.

There is nothing more dangerous for a people than a feeling of over-confidence in their own prowess. A belief in their ability to conquer all nations that cross their path has proven fatal to more than one great Power. This is a dangerous error for any nation to fall into. The United States has deliberately sought trouble by a piece of legislation that may be of help in its home politics, but which is bitterly resented by the people of a friendly nation. The suicides, the cheerings at Lyons and the flag incident are the reactions to this legislation and they are serious.—Montreal Star.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, July 5. — A resume of receipts and sales at the Union Stock Yards for the week shows that approximately 4,000 cattle of all classes were brought in, around 3,902 calves, 7,426 hogs, and 2,155 sheep and lambs. In addition 21 cars were billed through, comprising 403 cattle, 4 calves, 15 hogs, and 3 sheep.

According to these figures the receipts for the week have been much lighter than for that preceding, and while trade could not be called brisk, it may be said to have held steady at last week's decline. Another thing is that the quality of the cattle offered for sale was very poor, and it has been difficult to realise good prices for them. The bulk of the heavy cattle were sold to exporters, who paid from 7 1-2 to 8 1-4 for them.

The cow trade was fairly active, the best of them selling at from 4 3-4 to 5 cents per pound, with the poorer lots going at relatively lower prices. The demand for heavy bulls has not been very brisk, the bulk of them selling at from 4 cents to 4 1-2 cents.

Good butcher bulls seemed to be wanted, and these brought steady prices. Taken on the whole the market got rid of a lot of inferior cattle during the week, and if the receipts are not overly large next week, and the quality is better, there might be a better tone to the whole market.

Export Cattle.

According to the reports received by the exporting firms, and of which mention was made yesterday, the outlook for export cattle is none too bright, the large and increasing number of Irish and Scottish cattle landing at British ports having a depressing effect on the price. Trading has been fairly heavy in this line, and if prices warrant will likely continue.

Sheep and Lambs.

The run of sheep and lambs, as stated, was light, 2,155, and the price on Monday opened steady with last weeks close, but soon picked up, a few odd lots selling as high as 17c a pound, but this did not hold long, and on Thursday the lamb trade was back again around 15c to 16c for the tops. Starting on 15th July the packers have announced their intention of making a discount on buck lambs of 2.00 a head from the price of the choice ewe lambs. The sheep trade was not affected by the flurry in the lambs and has held steady during the week.

....Calves.

The supply of calves was heavy, and trade very slow and draggy, with a corresponding cut in prices, with the best of them selling around 8c, and an odd lot touching 9c a pound. It looks like a falling off of receipts, coupled with lower prices for next week now that there is a prospect of warmer weather.

The Hog Trade.

Supplies of hogs during the week have been lighter and price a shade more satisfactory to the farmers, or to say the least, have held steady at 8 cents f.o.b., $8.50, fed and watered, and $8.00 off cars. The market, however, closed with a weaker feeling, and if supplies become heavier, which is not unlikly, there will without a doubt be a cut in the prevailing prices.

Butcher Cattle.

Reverting to the cattle trade, it may be said that the prospects for choice butcher steers is favourable, but the heavy green grassy unfinished steers are not wanted and shippers would be well advised to hold them for the present, at least. There is an abundance of grass and the market is not in a receptive mood for this class of cattle.

A PRESENTATION MISS G. TUCKER

MILLBROOK, July 5.—The fine weather on Wednesday afternoon favored the out-of-doors gathering of the "Wide Awakes" Canadian Girls in Training Group, which through the kind hospitality of Mrs. A. J. Brown was held on the lawn of her home, Fallis Line. Mrs. Brown has always been a warm friends giving practical help to the girls on more than one occasion, and has been made an honorary member of the group. Over twenty members and visitors were present on Wednesday for the closing meeting until September.

An element of sadness entered into the occasion, and was difficult to repress at times, as this was the last meeting when Gladys Tucker, a capable officer and willing worker, would be with the group before her removal to her new home at Orono.

During the devotional period, Rev. Arthur H. Barton, of Ottawa, gave the girls a practical and helpful talk, basing his remarks on the four-fold ideal of their organization, found in Luke 2:52, "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with "God and man." Also in ojhn 10:10, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might ave it more abundantly."

At the close of the regular session, Marjorie Sayles, president, read the following address, Jean Burnham, secretary, on behalf of the group, presenting Gladys with a hand mirror, mounted in French ivory:

Miss Gladys Tucker,
Herald of the "Wide Awake" Group.

Dear Gladys—, We, your fellow members of the "Wide Awakes" Canadian Girls in Training Group, wish to tell you how sincerely we regret your removal from our church life, and our home town.

We have had many happy times together in our group meetings where you have always been a help, in our school relationships, in our social recreations, and in many other ways, during the five years you have been our companion, and our friend.

We shall msis you more than we can say, and we know that when our meetings begin next fall, the vacancy left by your removal will be hard to fill.

We ask you to accept this mirror as a token of the love we all feel for you, and hope as you find it useful day by day, it may recall to your mind the girls you chummed with and worked with, in the C.G.I.T. group at Millbrook.

Signed on behalf of the officers and members of the "Wide Awakes" Group.

MARJORIE SAYLES, President.
JEAN BURNHAM, Secretary.

Held Sing Song.

In thanking the girls for their gift Gladys assured them that the sorrow of parting was mutual, and if there was no C.G.I.T. group at Orono she would do her best to help in having one organized as soon as possible.

The singing of "God be with you till we meet again," and the group closing prayer, concluded the formal part of the afternoon's proceedings.

An enthusiastic game of baseball, for which Mr. H. Strong of Peterboro, filled the difficult part of umpire to the satisfaction of all concerned, gave plenty of fun and exercise. Mrs. Brown, assisted by Mrs. H. Strong, served tea on the lawn, her guests bringing healthy appetites to the enjoyment of the good things provided.

A jolly sing-song filled up a half hour very happily when supper was over, and a hearty invitation to "come again" followed the car-loads of guests as they left for home.

Mrs. J. Fitzgerald and her daughter, Miss Maitie of Toronto, are guests of her sisters, Mrs. J. A. Eakins and Mrs. E. Whyte, Messrs. Bruce Fitzgerald of Landsdowne and Douglas, of Toronto, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eakins over the week-end.

Mrs. (Dr.) Gray of Orono is visiting Mrs. A. Kennedy and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Kennedy this week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Brown, Misses Alberta and Jennie Brock, motored to Lindsay on Tuesday for the Old Boys' Reunion.

Mr. and Mrs. J. McBride and Miss Theo McBride motored to Shanty Bay on Sunday and were guests of Rev. C. R. and Mrs. Spencer at the rectory for the day.

Mrs. Osborne and daughter, Miss Greta of Toronto, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Raper and other friends in Millbrook, Cavan and Peterboro recently.

Mrs. B. R. Raper and two children, Leon and Dorothy, are visiting friends in Detroit and Toronto.

Miss Amy Brock, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Brock, Oliver Brock, Mrs. Osborne, and Miss Greta Osborne motored to Lindsay for the holiday and took in the Old Boys' Reunion sports for the day.

NERVOUS DEPRESSION.

Why People Are Low Spirited and Depressed.

Nearly all women and most men suffer at times from fits of depression and low spirits. Everything seems a burden; then come periods of nervous irritability, headaches and weariness. People who suffer this way lack vitality because their blood is poor and nerves are starved in consequence.

The only way the nerves can be reached is through the blood. By enriching the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the starved nerves are supplied with just the elements they need. This is proved by the experience of Mrs. J. E. Dadson, 12th Ave., east, Vancouver, B.C., who says:—"About three years ago I became very weak and nervous. I had pain in my side and back, and also suffered from frequent pains in the back of my head and neck. I was hardly able to do anything about the house. I would wake with a start in the night and my heart would flutter so that it almost chocked me. I tried much doctor's medicine but it did me no perament good. One day I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to give them a trial. These pills produced such a beneficial change in a short time that I kept taking them until I had used a dozen boxes. By this time there was such an improvement in my condition that friends would ask me what I was taking, and of course I was only too pleased to tell them it was Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I am now feeling like a new person and am doing my own housework. eW would not now be without Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the house."

You can get these pills from your druggist, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SUMMER FUR

Summer ermine is used for the sport coats for summer as well as for collars on coats and suits.

NECKPIECES

Many of the new fur neckpieces tie like a cravat and have fringed ends.

may be a blood disease —but they certainly "come to a head" quickly and heal cleanly, when a few drops of Absorbine J —full strength—are applied every few hours.

Absorbine Jr. eases the pain; cleans the sore, destroys pus, kills all germs and starts a healthy healing from the bottom.

Six thousand forest fires in Canada last year. And 5400 of these "were due to smokers, campers and others who use the woods for work or play," the Canadian Forestry Association claims.

Situation is about the same as regards our own forest fires. Camping season is well under way. Be cautious.

FAREWELL

The oldest bank in England (Child & Co.) will pass out of existence, absorbed by a younger financial institution. It did business for over 300 years.

Nothing is permanent. Even the gigantic American trusts will vanish in time—probably be taken over by the people, through their government. We hope you live that long.

CHINESE

Canada recently ordered all its Chinese residents to register with the immigration authorities. They must furnish their personal history and photographs and prove that they are not in the country illegally. It is suspected that, since they look so much alike, when Mr. Link Cuff returns to China Mr. Bow Wow returns on Link Cuff's passports.

BOBBED HEADS HERE TO TO STAY

BOBS ARE BEST.

The pros and cons of the "bobbing" question are treated rather interestingly in an article that relates the different opinions of noted screen favorites anent a question which occupies a major portion of the time and attention of the feminine population of the North American Continent at the present time. The lady who writes the article, Adela Rogers St. Johns, says with finality: "Bobbed hair has come to stay forever and ever. Any and every attempt to stop its establishment as a permanent institution among women has failed completely. This is the unanimous opinion of the screen stars who have done so much to make bobbed hair fashionable. . . . There is no longer any quarrel between the women about bobbed hair. It is simply a question of becomingness. Bobbing your hair no longer takes on breathless moments of trembling and strange forebodings. Those are things of the past. Today the only debate is over its suitability to your style, and whether or not your husband will let you.

"The greatest advantage of short hair is its supreme comfort. If men had to go around for a few weeks with a great wad of heavy hair pinned by piercing wire hair-pins to the base of their brains, or weighing heavily upon the tops of their skulls, they wouldn't be so quick to condemn women to wear long hair.

"Long or short hair has nothing to do with femininity. It cannot be confused in any way with mannish dressing, because most bobbed hair is arranged in the most alluring and feminine way possible. Women spend more time and attention on their hair, and it is the most feminine types who have their hair bobbed.

"Bobbed hair symbolizes the progress of woman in the twentieth century toward more freedom, more worth-while achievement and more time devoted to what is under the skull instead of on top of it.

"Bobbed hair makes a woman much more comely than a pile of hair. It lends her youth and does not necessarily detract from her dignity. In England, women with bobbed hair are in the majority. In time, ten or twenty years from now, there may be no woman without bobbed hair."

Opinions of various movie stars follow:

Rod LaRocque declares that "short hair is sensible, comfortable and beautiful. Tight corsets, tighter shoes and long hair all make for discomfort. No woman can be beautiful and uncomfortable."

"I'm for bobbed hair every time," says Reginald Denny. "Women can spend their time to better advantage cultivating what is under the scalp than what is over it. I never knew a husband yet who didn't have to sit around and wait for his wife to get ready whenever they were going out."

Douglas Fairbanks evidently adopts a canny attitude, perhaps on account of the fact that press despatches have not yet recorded the clipping of Mary's locks. He says: "What do I think of bobbed hair? I think it is beautiful on some, but sensible for all. Therefore some women look beautiful with bobbed hair, while others look . . . just sensible."

Bebe Daniels: "My hair is long, but I prefer the bobbed. The only reason I don't bob mine is that I am required to play so many parts calling for long hair, and I do not like wigs. I think the bob very becoming to most girls. As for becoming bald because of bobbing, I think that is what they call 'bunk.' The hair grows thicker following the scissors."

Marion Davies says: "No matter what may be said against bobbed hair and the bobbed-hair girl, it is a style that has come to stay and no amount of silly prejudice is going to drive the girl who has once enjoyed the freedom and comfort of short locks back to the unsanitary and uncomfortable mode of long hair."

Mae Murray thinks that "long hair is either a sign of vanity or the result of an old-fashioned mind," and Betty Blythe says she has felt five years younger since she bobbed hers. "In Paris I shopped for hats, but found none for sale for women with long hair. So to be in the swim of the present vogue is one reason I bobbed my hair. It makes one feel youthful, for the childish, close line of the head is youth itself."

Lucien, favorite New York hairdresser to women of the stage, says: "I do not believe that bobbed hair will ever become passe. It is convenient, comfortable and it gives the appearance of youth. I am sure the fashion was started by the hairdressers to increase the sales of hair and hair goods. The business of making and selling wigs, switches and transformations is most lucrative."

HOME LIFE

A book for your phonograph records is nice. That's what everybody will say. But a record is ne'er in the same section twice. You simply can't keep them that way.

You purchase the book and you have a set place for all of the records you've got. You tell the fam'ly thy're easy to trace and then, when you try, they're not.

For Tommy will take, from a new numbered nook, a tune that's as sweet as can be. He'll play it, then put it right back in the book where some other tune's scheduled to be.

The baby, perhaps, finds the book on the floor where sister has left it at night. He'll play it, then put it right back in the book where some other tune's scheduled to be.

The records were filed—but they're not any more, for they're playthings to this little mite.

The book may protect all the records on hand and keep them from cracking or breaking. But keeping them filed you will soon understand, is a terribly hard undertaking.

TEETHING TROUBLES

Baby's teething time is a time of worry and anxiety to most mothers. The little ones become cross; peevish; their little stomach becomes deranged and constipation and colic sets in. To make the teething period easy on baby the stomach and bowels must be kept sweet and regular. This can be done by the use of Baby's Own Tablets— the ideal laxative for little ones. The Tablets are a sure relief for all the minor ailments of childhood such as constipation, colic, indigestion, colds and simple fevers. They always do good—never harm. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams 'Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MAXWELL
How You Can Prove The Good Maxwell Is The Best Buy
We say—and owners back us—that the good Maxwell is the best buy on the market today.
This straight-from-the-shoulder statement is made without qualification, largely because of four vital considerations:
Fuel economy, tire economy, maintenance economy and resale value.
These are four factors that must, necessarily, play a big part in the purchase of a motor car, if the choice is to be a wise one. We suggest you compare the good Maxwell on this basis, even with cars selling at a higher price.

THE CORNER COP

You've all heard that whistle that scares ya to death; you've all brought your car to a stop. You've all surely trembled while holding your breath. What for? Why, the old corner cop!

Consider this fellow who rules, in the street, the traffic that passes all day. He tells you to "stop" or he tells you to "go" as he passes the dreary hours away.

Perhaps you have broken a law of the street. The cop is the reason you're caught. A judge, in the morning, you're likely to greet, and you pay for the lesson that's taught.

You walk out of court and you're cussing the cop till it ruins your blamed indigestion. But, listen, old man, you wilfl find, if you stop, there's another real side to the question.

The fellow who's guarding the corners all day is living in danger and strife. Consider the fact that he's working all day and his work is protecting your life.

CUTTINGS EGGS

LIFTING POWER OF LOVE.

Love lifts up the lowest to the highest, places the lowly born by the side of the bright particular star. It binds us to earth; and when our loved one has been taken from us, it lifts us to heaven. Who shall tell its glories and its victories? Without it, a life passed is like a year gone by without any summer—cold, chilly, unfruitful, without pleasure or charm. With it, the worst state is endurable. The palace is but a stable or an outhouse without it—a very prison; the very prison when the loved one shares it is a palace. Such is particular love. When that, upon the freeing of our souls from this "muddy vesture of decay" which encloses it, has grown into general love for our fellows, and love of adoration for our Maker, we shall not be far off paradise, for indeed heaven's harmony is universal love.—Hain Friswell.

NOISES IN YOU RECEIVER

Loose connections or badly soldered joints are the greatest causes of the exasperating noises you get in your phones.

If there is any corrosion in the joints, a scratchy noise results. If the prongs of the tubes do not fit properly, or they are corroded, it is another cause for scratchy noises.

Loose binding posts cause the same noise. Loose phone connections are another annoyance.

The remedy lies in tightening all binding psts and resoldering all loose joints with the use of as little flux as possible.

WHEAT.

This years world wheat crop may be 500 million bushels less than in 1923, some of the Chicago grain experts believe. Backward weather doesn't bring bumper crops.

Nature is turning the tide in the farmer's direction. She balances everything, it's just a matter of time. Farmers close to nature, know it. Thats' why they never curtail their planting and cultivation. As a class they seem always to be expecting short corps.

Dark Teeth Bleached In Three Minutes

You have always longed for flashing white teeth. And now, at last you can have them—easily, quickly and safely! For scientists have discovered a remarkable new treatment which often in only three minutes bleaches dull dingy dicolorations from the teeth, leaving them clear, sparkling white and lustrous. This new treatment, called Bleachodent Combination, consists of a mild safe liquid and a new kind of paste. The liquid curdles and softens the stains, while the paste removes them, and if used daily prevents the formation of future stains. You simply brush teeth with a few drops of the liquid—then use the paste. Almost before you realize it, unsightly surface stains disappear and the teeth take on a dazzling new whiteness and lustre. First application usually leaves teeth whiter than with ten times the scouring by old-fashioned methods. Bleachodent Combination is harmless—does not affect enamel as its mild ingredients are intended to act only on surface stains—not on enamel itself. Especially beneficial for children's teeth which stain easily. Get Bleachodent Combination today for a few cents. Be sure you ask for Bleachodent Combination. At all good dealers. IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Armstrong Family Held a Re-union on the Old Homestead.

MILLBROOK, July 5. — On Dominion Day the Armstrong family held a re-union, about two hundred guests gathering at the old homestead, two miles west of Carmel Church.

The home farm was first settled by Arthur Armstrong, Sr., who with his wife, whose maiden name was Mary Macfarlane, and his family, came out to Canada in the early '30's, from County Tyrone, Ireland. His son, the late Mr. D. S. Armstrong, who came with his parents from Ireland when about eleven years old, lived on the homestead for nearly seventy years, and his son, Mr. David L. Armstrong, still resides on the land cleared from the virgin forest by his grandfather

The afternoon was spent in renewing old acquaintances, and in making new friends among the relatives, some of whom were meeting for the first time. Baseball and other games engaged the energies of the younger element. The well-laden tea tables were laid out of doors. Rev. G. S. Gervan asked the Divine blessing, and, in relays, the guests were accommodated and the appetites of all fully satisfied.

Social intercourse, games, reminiscences of former meetings and of family happenings, etc., filled out the remainder of the evening until as darkness gathered, the final adieus were said, and the happy event brought to a close.

Among those present were:

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING

THEN

Why have heart failure because the iron and steel business has been so dull lately? In May, the output of pig iron dropped a lot. But, at that, it was almost as much as in May of 1913, one of the best pre-war banner years.

The nation is gradually adjusting itself to peace-time production, after abnormal war-time activity.

"GAS."

It gives one a headache to contemplate statistics about sales of gasoline. The American people have been using a fourth more gasoline than a year ago. Sales are reported as over 600 million gallons a month for the whole country. This is especially interesting and important if you own GOOD oil stocks.

OFFSPRING.

A Rhode Island woman, who died recently at 82, left 85 direct descendants. If everybody were as prolific, in a few generations the earth would be too crowded for any one to lie down.

Why waste time wondering why we die? The answer is, to make room for newcomers. Life is a journey between two unknown stations. We don't know where our souls came from. And some are not so sure about where they'll go after their hearts stop beating.

GAMBLERS.

Do you play the market? In one month nearly 14 million shares of stocks change hands on the New York Stock Exchange. A big figure, yes. But it's over 11 million shares less than in the same month, May, of last year—and nearly 18 million shares less than in May, 1922.

The public is in a cautious mood, taking few chances. That's a healthy condition, will help restore business to normal. When money doesn't flow into speculation, it does flow into sure things—production.

FLYING.

Soon you'll be able to fly by muscle power, no motor required. So predicts Woltereck, the German engineer.

He doesn't expect the flying machine to be a glider limited in range. Rather, he thinks, it will be propelled like a bicycle.

Such a machine is possible. But it wouldn't sell widely in our country. People are too lazy and too thrifty with their time. Reflects how quickly they turned from the man-propelled bicycle to motor-propelled auto.

SOUSED.

Lit up by moonshine, a Chicago man draws his $125 savings from the bank, stations himself on a corner and begins handing out $1 apiece to all comers. He gets rid of $65 when they take him away in the patrol wagon.

One good feature of liquor was that it made people generous and spread good-fellowship. No substitute has been found. Otherwise, bootleggers might not be so busy.

AGO.

Forty cents a day was considered satisfactory pay for a long day's work when I was a young fellow, reminisces Warner Bailey of Concord, N.H. He's an old-timer—painted the first sewing machine made by its inventor, Elias Howe. Having mastered the painter's trade, Bailey worked for 38 cents a day.

However—

He paid only 50 cents a month for board.

The more we make, the more we have to pay. Our gain comes in a steadily advancing standard of living. We buy and use 1000 times as many things as when Bailey was young.

NAPOLEON.

Napoleon's early ambition was to be a writer. Short stories in his hand writing are pronounced authentic by experts.

Later he chose the sword instead of the pen. And his career proves that the pen is not always mightier than the sword. It is, in peace. But, so far, the pen is not mighty enough to keep the sword sheathed. And it will not be as long as patriotism is intensified into a form of insanity.

NATURE PUT IRON FOR YOUR BLOOD

in the husks of grains and the peels and skins of fruits and vegetables but modern methods of cookery throw all these things away—hence the alarming increase in anaemia—iron starvation of the blood, with its never ending trend of symptoms of nervous irritability, general weakness, fatigue, disturbed digestion, headaches, pains across the back, etc.

ATTRACTIONS OF ALGONQUIN PARK MUCH ENHANCED

Many New Lakes Within Easy Reach of Angler Can Now Be Cruised

COSTS REDUCED

MONTREAL, July 3 (Canadian Press). — The attractions of Algonquin Park have been enhanced by bringing many new lakes within easy reach of the angler, while a seven-days' cruise through this reserve amid the Highlands of Ontario—woodland, lakeland, river and stream—can be made approximately for $55.00 to $190.00, explained A. S. McLean, general superintendent of National hotels, in his address with Rod and Line in Algonquin Park, over the radio from Station CKCH, Ottawa, last night.

The trout fishing in this playground on Ontario was described by Mr .McLean as being better than it has been for the past four years; parties pushing into the heart of the Highlands have returned to the Highland Inn with fine strings of square tails running up to five pounds in weight. But it is the cruises which are proving the most popular among the lovers of the great out of doors as they provide the opportunity for fishing for lake and speckled trout and bass, according to the whim or fancy of the visitors. The trips last from ten to twenty-one days, varying with the time devoted to fishing or sport with the camera or reel.

The seventy cruises are making particular appeal ,the cost thereof, including canoe, tent and cooking outfit, blankets, provisions, packs, and the services of a guide or guides, according to the size of the party, ranging from $55.00 for one person with guide to $190.00 for a party of four and three guides.

The cost of the ramble can be reduced, if preferred, by dispensing with the services of the guides.

One of these cruises was described by Mr. McLean, and it is declared to be one of the most attractive through the park, offering plenty of sport, excellent glimpses of some of the most beautiful scenery of the Highlands, and just sufficient thrill to make a general appeal.

Leaving Joe Lake the route runs via Island Lake and the Otter Slides into White Trout Lake, then over into Merchants, where by lingering a while, one may be almost certain of picking up a 1 to 20 pounder.

A short portage brings one to Green Lake, which is convenient for a side trip into Red Rock Lake for trolling for speckled trout.

Leaving this lake a short portage leads to the Big Opeongo, which offers the finest trout fishing to be had in the whole reserve.

MEET MR. ASHER!

Here he is, folks! You have been wanting to meet "Lone Wolf" Asher, master of disguises and Sherlock he lux of the prohibition forces, for a long time now. But he never would consent to pose for a picture. Fact is he tried to smash the camera to get it back. But Asher, terror of cameramen and bootleggers in many cities, is a meek man at home. His wife makes him get up And he didn't for this one, either. at 7:30 every morning, no matter how late he worked the night before, and help her with the household duties.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE TURNING TIDE.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: At last the tide is beginning to turn in the ranks of the Prohibitionists themselves. Two sensational occurrences of this last week in June will surely have a profound and far-reaching effect. The Social Workers of America met in Toronto. The special speakers chosen by the committee to be invited to address them were a woman, the Deputy Attorney-General of the United States, and the Rev. W. A. Cameron, an eminent Baptist divine.

The former made it clear that Prohibition in the United States was not a success, because the conscience of the people was not behind it. Why? Because compulsion eliminates conscience. It strives to do away with the rule of the world by conscience, and to substitute Force for it.

It is true that a collossal failure and a terrible set-back to Christianity and civilization had to be enacted before this great truth made itself manifest, and that, too, the very foundation of Christ's teaching. This woman's speech, coming from a member of the department charged with enforcement, was a tremendous blow, but it had to come, or the U. S. go under.

The Rev. W. A. Cameron was no less explicit. Reformation, he said, cannot come by compulsion. It is impossible. It is unChristian. It is hopeless. Many of your readers read the reports of these addresses, and will corroborate my statements.

There is no royal road to anything worth having, and certainly not to goodness. Compulsion would mean the death of the churches.

J. H. BURNHAM.

Peterboro, July 2, 1924.

To the Editor, of The Examiner,
Peterboro.

Dear Sir,—Enclosed you will find copy of letter which I have forwarded to Port Hope Guide in reference to item in last Friday's issue which I am also enclosing and which has been the cause of much misunderstanding through this district re July 12th celebration.

Your truly,
E. F. REID,
County Master.

"Arrangements are well under way for the Orange celebration to be held in Oshawa on July 12, and several thousand members of the Order from a wide area are expected to be there for the big annual event. The principal arrangements are being made by strong committees from the Oshawa L.O.L. Lodges, Nos. 686 and 2167 and F. J. Hopkins is chairman and A, G. Jinks is secretary of the general committee.

Speaking to the Oshawa Telegram Thursday morning Mr. Jinks stated that invitations to sister lodges, extending to Belleville on the east, West York, on the west and the entire north country in this district, had been sent out, and already numerous acceptances had been sent in. The lodges east of Oshawa, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Brighton, Colborne, and Trenton, will be here strong and it is anticipated that Belleville will also send a large representation. Other towns that are sure to come to Oshawa for the twelfth are Lindsay, Peterboro, Millbrook, Port Perry, Utica, Whitby and York County, west of Toronto, will help to swell the number.

Arrangements for the speakers are not yet completed, but Jinks said that some of the most prominent members of the Order will be there for the occasion. The parade details are also still in the making, but it will be featured by a number of special prizes and will conclude at Alexandra Park where the speaking and events will take place."

Letter to the Guide

The Weekly Guide,
Port Hope,
Ontario.

Dear Sirs,

In your issue of Friday, June 27th last, appeared on item re Orange Celebration in the City of Oshawa on the coming 12th of July, which gave the public to understand that Peterboro Orangemen were going to celebrate in Oshawa. I believe your item was copied from the Oshawa Telegram and gave the views of Bro. A. G. Jinks, Secretary of Oshawa's Celebration Committee.

Now Peterboro Orangemen are putting on the usual 4th year celebration in Peterboro and have never, at any time, had any intention of going to Oshawa this year and Mr. Jinks is perfectly aware of that fact.

The counties of Northumberland Durham, Victoria and Peterboro have had an arrangement whereby, for the last 30 years alternate celebrations have been held in Cobourg, Peterboro, Port Hope and Lindsay and the brethren at Peterbro, not having any notice that any county wished to discontinue this arrangement, went ahead and made arrangements as in former years, and prospects at this writing are for the best celebration we have ever had. It is true it may not be the biggest, owing to the fact that Oshawa brethren saw fit to arrange a celebration in Peterboro's year, but, if Oshawa had asked the four counties to be allowed to celebrate alternately with them, we believe an agreement would have been made that would have assured Oshawa of a much bigger representation than will be the case under present circumstances.

However, while we wish our brethren in Oshawa the best of luck and hope they have a real good day we cannot possibly be with them this year and from answers which we have received to 160 invitations which we sent out, we know that lodges are coming to Peterboro from Blairton, Havelock, Norwood, Campbellford, Hastings, Roseneath, Omemee, Emily, Lindsay, Fenelon Falls, Kirkfield, Lakefield, and many others and the Peterboro brethren are fully expecting the other three counties to send their quota as per our 30 year old agreement.

Our parade will leave Central Park at 1 p.m. and after marching through the principal streets, will disperse at King Edward Park, after which a programme of Baseball, Football and Horse Races will be run off in the Exhibition Park.

Thanking you in advance, and trusting you will give this letter the same prominence as you gave the Oshawa item, I remain,

Yours truly,
E. F. REID,
County Master,
West Peterboro.

GOOD OLD BOOKS STAY.

NEW YORK, July 5.—The old-standbys in the world of literature—books by Jane Austen, George Eliot, Thackeray, Dickens and William James—rarely are allowed to rest for long on the shelves of the New York Public Library, according to Miss Isabel Cooper, head of the circulating department.

HONOR PONY RIDERS.

SALT LAKE CITY, July 5.—The fearless pony riders of the old west have been commemorated by a bronze tablet placed on the site of an old pony express station here. The tablet, erected by the Daughters of the American Revolution, bears this inscription: "Placed in Tribute to the Personnel of That Gallant Enterprise."

ANTELOPE DECREASE.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Antelope game animals are decreasing in the United States at an alarming rate, a recent census shows. There are only approximately 22,000 antelopes left in 16 of the western states, it has been reported. Special protective measures are to be adopted.

IMAGE NEEDS SHAVE.

SUNBURY, Pa., July 5. — Grass whiskers have begun to grow on Shikellimy's Face, a rock profile on a hill near here. The big stone face, a historic feature of the mountains, was said to have resembled the head of the great Indian chief who ruled the Susquehanna valley for many years.

HEART DISEASE NOT SO COMMON AS IS THOUGHT.

Main Cause Is Rheumatic Fever, Says Dr. Parkinson, Great London Authority.

There is a world of good cheer and encouragement to those who imagine they have, or have been told they have, heart disease ,in the emphatic declaration of Dr. John Parkinson of London, England, in his address to the general gathering of the Canadian Medical Association in annual concention in Ottawa. Dr. Parkinson speaks with the authority of experience, for he is a physician in charge of the cardiographic department of the London Hospital, physician to out patients of the National Heart Hospital, and visiting cardiographist to the Ministry of Pensions.

Dr. Parkinson stated that a great range of troubles are placed under the heading of heart diseases wrongfully. There are many alleged causes of heart disease, such as nervous strain, and so on, which do not really cause permanent damage to the heart. "The athletic heart," like the strained heart, is a myth; and the tobacco smoker may go blazing ahead with the full knowledge that tobacco has nothing to do with heart disease.

Dr. Parkinson states emphatically that the evidence of tobacco causing permanent disease of the heart is very small indeed. It is easy to show that the early reported cases were due to something else. Smoking has a slight effect in increasing the heart rate and raising the blood pressure, but this occurs during the actual smoking and for some time afterwards. There is no good evidence that it causes permanent injury to the heart.

The main cause of heart disease, according to this eminent British authority, is rheumatic fever, and such complaints as palpitation, dizziness and fainting weakness need not necessarily give an impression that heart disease is present.

AL. RITCHIE PULLS TEN TONS BY NECK

Strong Man With Aid of Overland Pulls Parade of Wagons By Neck.

Al. Ritchie, the strong man, who is making a circuit of theatres throughout Canada, uses a standard stock Overland model 91 touring car in his sensational street parades. Ritchie stands in the back seat, braces his body, then with a rope around the back of his neck pulls a load of from 10 to 15 tons.

"Tex," as he is better known, arranged to use the Overland car for this sensational demonstration of power and strength because of the great and steady flowing power of the Overland motor, its smooth running qualities and because of its wonderfully strong rear end and axle.

"I see the billboards are advertising Overland as the car with the most power," said Tex, when asked why he selected this car for his demonstration.

Quite True.

"This is literally true. It is about universally recognized that the engine in the new Overland steadily produces the most power of any of the light-weight cars.

Terrific Strain.

"It is a terrific strain both on the car and upon me, to pull up-grade a load of 10 or 12 tons. The rope which I have around my neck buries itself into the muscles and I must have a car that can develop sufficient power from a dead start to pull the weight that is behind me. That car must have a steady clutch, a clutch that does not grip and jerk, and it must have an engine which can get down and pull.

"I have been offered other cars for the demonstration, but from past experience I know that the Overland is the only car in the light car class that can deliver the steady power that is needed, and that is the reason I always arrange to use an Overland when one is available.

"In a recent demonstration I pulled the entire rear end out of a car. It wasn't an Overland, I might say, and with the unusually strong rear end that the Overland now has, its big axle and wonderful power plant, I never worry when I am standing in the back seat of an Overland and give the signal to go."

Advice from One Woman to Another on a very important hygienic subject

Immaculacy, charm, exquisiteness under circumstances which most women find exceedingly trying

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Graduate Nurse

Charm, Exquisiteness, Immaculacy, under all and every condition EVERY day! Yet, under old methods the average woman spent at least 1-6th of her time in a state of discomfort, uncertainty—and frequently embarrassment.

THIS is a subject which only a woman can understand, and on which only an expert can advise with authority. I speak as both.

I, too, experienced the handicap which confronts women in social, business or professional life. As a practicing nurse I know how to lighten it.

For science has now perfected a product which helps women live an active life without interruption. Its convenience and efficiency are amazing, for it solves a special problem in a very simple way.

THIS NEW PRODUCT IS CALLED "KOTEX"

It was perfected during the war to provide a softer, more absorbent surgical dressing. Kotex is five times more absorbent than cotton.

After the war its makers felt that Kotex would be of infinite value to women—that it would effectually solve their greatest problem. And it has.

Women have only to hear of Kotex to appreciate what it means in comfort, convenience and relief from embarrassment. It is being adopted everywhere.

Cobourg Concert Band went to Lindsay yesterday to take part in the big band tatoo and concert there which takes place in connection with the celebration of Old Home Week.

Remained Open Yesterday.

Cobourg stores remained open yesterday instead of observing the usual Wednesday half-holiday, as Dominion Day, which was a general holiday, was observed the day before. Citizens of both town and country regarded this as a movement in the right direction. There is a growing feeling that holidays, as well as everything else, may be overdone.

ANOTHER GIRL BANDIT.

BELGRADE, July 5. — Jugo-Slavia's girl bandit does not have bobbed hair! Her hair is, however carefully marcelled. Known as the "silken woman" because of her extravagance in dress, she was captured at the head of a band of brigands that have been terrorizing the countryside. Neither she nor her fellow prisoners will reveal her name.

NEWS DOWNEYVILLE

Hail Does Considerable Damage to the Strawberry Crop.

DOWNEYVILLE, July 4.—A storm passed over this section of the country Tuesday evening with heavy hail. The hail did considerable damage, and it is not known yet just how much, but next day it looked as if everything was driven into the ground. The local strawberries which looked so promising are all mashed in the ground, and the damage to them is considerable.

A Large Funeral.

The funeral of the late George O'Connell was held from the family residence, Lot 3, Concession 10, Emily, and was largely attended. Requim Mass was chanted by Rev. Father Galvin in St. Luke's Church. The pallbearers were Messsrs. Bernard Murray, Daniel O'Neill, Neil Murray, Neil Powers, James Beggott and Patrick O'Neill. Among those who attended were Mr. and Mrs. E. Roach, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Conway-O'Brien.

St. Basil's Church, Toronto, was the scene of a very pretty wedding Tuesday, June 24th, when Miss Mollie O'Brien, eldest daughter of Mrs. Amelia and the late James O'Brien, was united in marriage to Mr. James Conway of Bobcaygeon. The bride wore a pretty white satin dress with white georgette hat and carried a corsage bouquet of ophelia roses and lily-of-the-valley, and was assisted by her sister Anna, who was gowned in yellow georgette with hat to match and carried a corsage bouquet of sweet peas. The groom was ably assisted by his brother Hugh of Buffalo. The groom's gift to the bride was a string of pearls; to the bridesmaid, a wrist watch, and groomsman, a set of cuff-links. The ceremony was performed by Rev. P. J. McGuire of Peterborough, assisted by Rev. Father Galvin of Downeyville, also Rev. Fathers Player and Roche in the sanctuary. The wedding march was played by Jules Brazil, while Miss Nan Harnett rendered a solo. The reception was held at the home of the bride's mother on Brantford avenue, which was tastefully decorated with pink and white peonies. The bride was a graduate of St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, and was organist in St. Luke's Church here, where she formerly resided and is well known in this locality.

EXQUISITE IN DESIGN

Staunton Semi-Trimmed Wallpaper is marked by that fine quality which has distinguished the products of the Staunton industry for 67 years past. The 1923-4 Staunton line embraces a wonderful range of new and original designs in modish colorings and exquisite finishes.

WHETHER you employ the paperhanger or whether you do the job yourself, you can now redecorate your rooms quicker, better and at less cost than formerly.

Staunton Semi-Trimmed Wallpaper simplifies the job throughout. Its advantages over the old-fashioned papers are obvious at a glance.

Semi-trimming eliminates all the old, troublesome and uncertain methods of trimming. No scissors, knife, or straightedge are required. You simply give the ends of the roll a rap on table or floor, and the selvage falls off, leaving the paper perfectly trimmed to a thousandth part of an inch. Think of the time and trouble saved—of the litter and muss you avoid—of how semi-trimmed wallpaper reduces the paperhanger's time and cost.

And above all, think of the perfect job that results. No white edges, no imperfect seams — just a beautiful design which looks like one piece on the wall.

FARM NEWS

RADIAL LINES WOULD BENEFIT CAMPBELFORD

Announcement by Sir Henry Thornton Revives Hope of Trent Town.

ASK AND RECEIVE

The Earliest Settlers Are Still Ten Miles From a Railroad.

By ALEX. McGREGOR.

The announcement of Sir Henry Thornton, which appeared in the despatches of Saturday, to the effect that it is proposed to spend one and a-half million dollars on radial roads this year, has revived the interest that Campbellford has for so long taken in this problem. There is for this district a ray of hope, too, in the intimation by Sir Henry that part of this money is to be expended on radial lines in Eastern Ontario. There is to be no favoritism, and, for once, the western part of the province is not to get all the best of it.

When Hon. R. Cooke, M.L.A., who represents the Ontario Cabinet on the Hydro Commission, spoke here last week, he stated that if this district wanted anything from the Commission it would have to ask for it just as Western Ontario had done, that section having been importunate to the point of aggressiveness. "Ask," said Mr. Cooke, but it was noticed that he failed to add the assurance that the people would receive what they desired.

More Roads Needed.

It is conceded that a large stretch of country in Northumberland County, comprising some of the best agricultural lands in the province, is inadequately supplied with railway facilities Warkworth and Roseneath, both flourishing centres, favorably located, enjoy situations of "splendid isolation," their only communication with the outer world being by country highways.

The country around Codrington, including the farm on which Major Belford, M.L.A., resides, was settled 120 years ago by some of the best pioneer stock that ever entered the primæval forest in search of a home. Codrington's nearest railway is at Campbellford, 10 miles away. There are other villages between there and the lake front whose position with regard to railway facilities are still worse.

Proposed Railway Routes.

Campbellford has asked the Hydro Commission for action in the matter, but, so far, nothing has come of the requests. And now the town proposes to take a leaf from the book of Western Ontario and become aggressive. Three routes have been suggested for the proposed radial road, the one which appears to be most in favor running from Campbellford through Seymour township to Meyersburg, thence through Percy to Warkworth, and from that point to Roseneath in Alnwich, thence to Burnley in Haldimond, and to Centreton in the same township, and from that point through Baltimore, in Hamilton township, to Cobourg. At Cobourg the new road would connect with the radial already built from Toronto to Bowmanville and which is to be extended to Cobourg.

A Long Road to Cobourg.

A crow, with the proper sense of direction in a flight from Campbellford to Cobourg, could probably cover the distance in a trifle over 30 miles. By auto or horse-drawn vehicle it is 40 miles, but by railway it is 64 miles. The resident of Campbellford, who wishes to go to the county town, travels 32 miles in one direction to Belleville and then proceeds 32 miles to Cobourg. His first hour and a-half on the train gets him nowhere so far as his destination is concerned. A quicker trip may be made by way of Peterborough, but this entails a change of cars at the latter city and at Port Hope.

Following the Highway.

Another route suggested is that taken by vehicles from this town to Cobourg. This would take in Meyersburg, Norham (which is only a short distance from Warkworth), Morganston, Castleton, Vernonville and Grafton. The townships interested in this route would be Seymour, Percy, Cramahe, Haldimond and Hamilton.

A Probable Conflict.

It is likely that the residents near Codrington, including the farm settlement in Brighton township, above referred to, and which is the home of Major Belford, would favor a line to the village to Brighton, and from that place to Cobourg. That village, however, is already served by the two steam roads on the lake front.

To Open North Country.

Campbellford is only 12 miles from the junction of the C.N.R. and C.P.R. at Bonar Law. A radial from here to the latter place would link up this town with a new region rich in minerals and timber.

The Necessary Steps.

These are some of the problems that the Campbellford Chamber of Commerce have on hand and in which they are assured of the co-operation of the Town Council. The first step required, in order to get a radial road, is to lay the matter before the Hydro Commission. An engineer will be sent to look over the ground so as to ascertain the approximate cost of construction and the prospect of the new venture being a paying proposition. If his report is favorable, the different municipalities can draw up by-laws, giving the ratepayers a chance to vote on the question of issuing debentures for a period not to exceed 40 years, to meet the initial cost of construction.

If the road pays from the start the profits should be sufficient to meet the annual payments on the debentures, so that the chances are that the road would cost the ratepayers nothing. When it is paid for, it will be turned over to the municipalities and may be operated by a commission, just as any other public utility is managed.

HOW TO MAKE POULTRY LICE WALK A PLANK

There Are Twenty-Eight Distinct Species to do Battle With in Henhouse.

AFFECT ALL FOWL

Discouragement Must Not Interfere With Work of Saving the Flock.

There are twenty-eight distinct species of lice that live upon or within the feathers, or upon the skin, of birds. There are seven species found on fowls alone; two on pigeons, three on ducks, four on geese, two on turkeys, two on guineas, and two on peafowl. The two very common parasites—the chicken mite and the chicken louse, probably do more damage than all the rest.

Various species of bird lice affect all our domestic fowl—hens, geese, ducks, turkeys, peafowl, guineas and pigeons They are permanent parasites, spending their lives on the bodies of the fowl, and can not live for more than a few days at most when removed from the fowl.

Fowl lice differ from mammalian lice and will remain on mammals but a short time. Mammalian lice have a piercing organ with which they suck the blood, while those that affect poultry have a biting mouth with which they bite and chew their food. They confine their operations to eating the plumage and dry scales of the skin.

Going After the Blood-Sucking Mites.

The big question is, how to get rid of the vermin. The Department of Agriculture, after trying various treatments for the destruction of chicken mites, with good, bad and indifferent results, concluded that fumigation of poultry house is unsatisfactory, and a stiff whitewash alone had very little value. Pure heavy coal-tar creosote oil was entirely efficient, but gasoline was no good. While kerosene was moderately efficient, it lacked the body and lasting effect of heavier oils.

The Department recommends heavy oils from coal tar and wood tar, or such oils diluted with a lighter oil, such as kerosene, so that not less than 20 per cent of the mixture is heavy oil. This will successfully control chicken mites, provided the premises are thoroughly sprayed and the materials used plentifully.

A heavy mineral-oil emulsion containing at least 20 per cent oil in the actual spray, will be efficient under similar conditions.

Mites feed during the night, and go in hiding in cracks and crevices during the day. Therefore, dust baths are of little value, since probably only a few mites will be on the fowl during the daytime. Mites are readily destroyed if their hiding places can be discovered.

How Poultry Lice May Be Controlled.

Poultry lice are more or less a necessary evil and about all that can be done is to keep them in control by repeated treatment. That, at least, is the belief of many poultrymen, but I cannot see why poultry should not be entirely free from lice and kept so.

For years it has been maintained that where poultry houses are cleaned regularly, and where every pen is disinfected with a reliable coal-tar preparation, and this treatment repeated every month of the year, lice and mites will be greatly reduced in numbers and there will be very little trouble with these pests during the summer. The Department highly recommends sodium fluorid and declares one application will destroy all lice present.

The nest bug looks so much like the regular bedbug that it is quite frequently taken for it. While it is not a real bedbug, it belongs to that family. Its home is in the nests of fowls, and it will not long remain on the human body.

It has a long, sharp beak with which it punctures the skin and sucks the blood of the fowl. It is common in the nests of sitting hens, and is so cruel in its attacks upon fowls that it frequently drives them from their nests.

To check this parasite, the nests should be sprayed once a month with either kerosene emulsion or some coal-tar product. New nesting material should be supplied, and then the nests should be sprinkled with a reliable insect powder or tobacco dust.

Grease and oil should never be used on the bodies or feathers of sitting hens, as the least trace upon the eggs would destroy the germ.

Nuts To Crack

CHINESE FINANCE.

In the Flowery Kingdom, large transactions are paid in gold ingots stamped with the names of the bankers, but the currency of the country consists of taels and cash, of fluctuating values. They made the tael thinner and thinner until a stack of one hundred was barely an inch in height. In like manner, the common cash which is a brass coin with a round, square or triangular hole in the middle, and worth but small fractions of our cent, is of variable thickness. Almost any transaction involving such medium of exchange is a puzzle in itself; for example:

Suppose eleven coins with round hole are worth 15 bits, while even square ones are worth 16 bits, and eleven of triangular shape are worth 17 bits. Who can tell how many square, round or triangular pieces of cash little Ting Ling will have to pay the merchant for articles he has just purchased for eleven bits?

(Answer on the next Farm Page.)

There are millions of worms in my garden—
Short and fat, and long and slim;
They are all there but the early worm,
And the early bird got him.

Two Moons in the Sky Taken as a Bad Omen

OMEMEE, July 5. — An Omemee resident is in receipt of a letter from her sister in Moose Jaw, in which she states that the general topic in the West is the unusual occurrence of two moons which are registered to appear in the month of July. The Westerners have become very pessimistic over the matter, and, upon looking up the records, not that not since 1814 have two new moons appeared in the one month, and during that summer snow fell in July. The crops grew rapidly but nothing matured. Just now, everything looks bright for a good crop in this section, and the people should be optimistic until there is need to worry.

FIELD DAY OF AYRSHIRE MEN

Menie District Breeders Club Decide on Holding Big Affair on August 15.

FIRST IN CANADA.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 5.—Members of the Ayrshire Breeders' Club of the Menie district met in the Windsor Hotel on Thursday night and decided to hold a field day on August 15. The location was not decided upon, but the affair will be held either at the farm of Alex. Hume and Son, Burnbrae, or at the home of Charles Macoun, in West Seymour. Both gentlemen own large herds of purebred Ayrshires.

The programme, so far as arranged, provides for addresses by Professor Rothswell of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa; H. Boileau of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa; District Representative Atkin of Stirling, the former being the official in Northumberland and the latter in Hastings county.

The Menie District Club is the first organization of stockbreeders ever formed in the Dominion of Canada, and its membership includes some of the leading farmers in Seymour township. It has been in existence for 14 years. Alex. Hume, who retired from the presidency last year, had held that office for seven years. John Locke is now president, and holds the same position in the Seymour Agricultural Society.

SHOWERS HELP IN BAILIEBORO

Crops at a Standstill Until Given New Life by Beneficient Rain.

SWEET CLOVER CUT.

BAILIEBORO, July 5.—The showers that have fallen during the past few days were sufficient to do untold good to the farm crops and gardens.

The crops had been nearly at a standstill for over two weeks previous to the rains, and were sorely in need of moisture. But now already a great improvement can be noticed, as the grain and hay have grown considerably and have taken on a different color. Before the rains, the oats and barley especially were beginning to show a poor color, and many of the blades were turning a delicate yellow.

Some of the farmers have cut their sweet clover, but, as yet, there has been practically no red clover or timothy cut down. It is expected that haying will be in full swing next week.

Buckwheat has been selling at one dollar and twenty-five cents a bushel this spring, and possibly on account of the exceedingly high price, as well as the late spring, making it nearly impossible for the farmers to get all of their spring crop sown, many of the farmers are sowing considerable portions of their land with buckwheat. Most of them claim that the grain makes splendid feed for both hogs and cattle when mixed with oats, ground and feed in chop.

Mr. George Bonner and daughter, Ruby, have returned from the West, where they have been visiting for the past few weeks. Mr. Bonner states that there has been an abundance of rainfall in the different parts that he visited while there. He also stated that although they were very late in getting their spring crop sowed, the crops are looking fine, and are a splendid color. They expect that they will be at least two weeks later this year in getting started to harvest them.

EAST EMILY FARMS

Strawberries Plentiful and Cheaper—Rains Helped Crops Wonderfully.

EAST EMILY, July 5.—Strawberries are very plentiful in this district at present. They are selling at 15c, or two boxes for 25c, this week, and it is hoped that next week they will be cheaper still.

The farmers are very pleased with the recent rains as the field peas are blooming, and with the help of the rain they hope for a bountiful crop. Some farmers have already got some of their hay cut.

There are prospects of a bountiful crop of raspberries this season, as every bush seems to have a heavy load of bloom.

COWS FED MINERALS.

Cows are being fed mineral mixture to correct mineral deficiencies which may exist in their grain and hay rations. Equal parts of ground limestone, rac rock phosphate and salt are mixed in the proportion of four pounds to 10 pounds of grain.

SIDE LINE FARM PAYS DIVIDEND TO ITS OWNERS

Ranges From Flowers for Decoration Day to Angel-Food Cake.

NUT RAISING

Specialists in All Businesses Have Side-Lines for Dull Days.

An "eye, ear, nose and throat specialist" told me the other day that the patients in his eye-glass department were enough to make that part of his business offset the current expenses connected with his office, says M. C. Rhoads. A druggist told me that the sale of hair-nets paid him enough in a year to offset his taxes. A dry-goods merchant, who specialized on a wonderful notion counter, told me that the profits from this counter offset the risk they had to run on some up-to-the-minute merchandise.

Just so have some farmers been figuring side-lines in the last year or so when taxes, reduced crop prices and high wages have brought his legitimate profits down. All over the country it takes only a little investigation to find that farmers are paying special heed to one or many side-lines that are proving worth while.

"Yes, those rows of flowers do beautify the grounds," said a farmer to me the other day, when I questioned the care of several long rows of peonies, iris, snowball bushes and bridal-wreath clumps. "And they do require a little care, but figure out the profit they bring in to us. You see all those flowers bloom in this locality about Dominion Day. The papers in town, through a small ad, tell the townspeople that our flowers can be purchased for much less than conservatory prices for that day, and by telephone and personal calls our flowers are sold at little or no expense. It might surprise you to know that we sold over $80 worth of flowers last year. We have standing orders for Sunday bouquets that we deliver with our Saturday produce, also. This side-line makes our place lovely in summer and the profit is no small item. Dahlia, peony and gladioli bulbs increase rapidly and sell well, and we have even sold a great deal of flower seed in bulk."

"We had long rows of rhubarb on this farm, planted by a former owner," another farmer told me. "It looked as if that family must either have had an abnormal appetite for rhubarb, or had miscalculated its rapid growth. But we have now found it a source of real income. We get a good price for every stalk of rhubarb that our patch grows. And this is the way we handle our grape crop: Every farmer knows that grapes must be disposed of quickly after they are picked or they mildew. Often a farmer has little time to get to town with them, but grape-juice is nearly always salable and brings us a better profit than the grapes on the stem. Often your wild grapes that grow along the timber fences, and the elder-berries, can be utilized in this way also."

"I never get below a certain price for eggs," a farmer's wife told me. "No matter what the current price is, I always make them net me so much."

I looked my astonishment, and she explained: "As soon as they drop to a low price I make cake and salad dressing. I found small oblong angel-food cakes about the size of a one-loaf bread pan were good sellers. Pint jars of salad dressing sell well, too. Friday afternoon and Saturday morning I work up my eggs into these two articles and through an in-town store I sell direct to customers. Special orders receive special attention and command special prices. Last summer I served real country cream-and-egg ice-cream and angel-food cake, and found my egg prices rivalled the high winter price."

"Besides the corn acreage on this farm we have a hundred acres in timber," another farmer told me. "And there are many nut trees. Of course, the wooded land proves a popular picnic ground. Our family goes nutting with a purpose. We gather all the butternuts, hickory nuts and walnuts on our trees. We sack them carefully, run the walnuts through the corn-grinder to hull them, and almost every picnic party in the fall departs with a sack of our nuts at 'picked' prices. Our income from this source last year was $56."

Pick out a side-line you can carry on without neglecting your main work. In other words, stop putting all the eggs in one basket.

CAVAN CROP GOOD.

CAVAN, July 5.—The rains of last week have revived everything and gardens are coming along splendidly while there is also great improvement in the hay crop in the last few days. Corn is coming along rapidly too.

D. Wood has the contract for cutting down the hill and gravelling the road on the quarter line on the tenth concession. He has several teams engaged and men to dig out the big stones.

TWEED FOLK PLEASED.

TWEED, July 5.—Mr. S. G. Way, after a trip through the country around Tweed, says he has never seen such prosperous-looking crops. Seeding was late on account of the spring rains, but the weather since has been ideal. The strawberry crop has been wonderful. Orders were being taken here for berries at 10c a box.

Hay Record.

Mr. Harford Tufts is taking twenty loads of hay off a field which produced only twelve last year.

QUARANTINE WIDENED.

Quarantine has been extended in New England against the gipsy moth and the brown tail moth. This is to bring under control the additional farm areas reached by these pests during the last season.

PERHAPS FISH WILL HELP TO GROW TOMATOES

It's Easier to Raise Children Than Vegetables, Says Bessie Wills.

ALL YEAR TO TRY

"No Trespassing" Signs on Garden May Offend the Good Bugs.

It is one thing to be told that it is our duty to raise vegetables on every idle spot of ground, but it is another thing to do it, for raising vegetables is a fine art, and there are as many different methods of raising them as there are of raising children. It is easier to raise children, as you have the entire year to experiment on them, but if one vegetable method fails, you have to wait until the next season to try out another.

My earnest ambition has been to raise a bushel of tomatoes on one vine. It has been done. Photographs prove it and people have told me they know people who have accomplished the feat. Every method I have tried has been a failure, only a few delicate tomatoes being the result.

One year, following directions, I carefully nipped off all the suckers and most of the leaves, tying up the bare, pitiful stalks to posts, like unto the ancient martyrs. No bushel of tomatoes.

Next year, listening to other advice, the vines were permitted to sprawl over the ground, near to old Mother Nature. Still a distressing lack of fruit.

Last spring, feeling stubborn about the matter, I made further inquiries and was told to use judgment about pinching and under no circumstances should the roots be disturbed; and no hilling up. So we let 'em respectfully alone. My own judgment must have been very poor, as all blossoms left, withered and dropped off in their infancy. As a result the reduction man offered his advice, telling me earnestly that, at one time in his life he had spent days dancing attendance on tomato vines, and at once he knowingly proceeded to pinch off all the suckers, as he said that would throw the strength into the stalks. Late in the summer, w proudly ate three or four anemic-looking tomatoes.

Thinking the truck man must have the best method, I told him my tale of woe. He looked at my poor plants and gave them a scornful kick, asking me what I could expect when the dirt had not been hilled up about their roots. I gasped! "Also," said he, "how could you expect tomatoes when all the ends of the vines where tomatoes are naturally supposed to grow, have been nipped off?" Think of it!

Then scornfully he kicked my poor cucumbers, that hadn't the strenght to withstand a kick, and spoke scathingly of the ignorant person that had advised the pinching off of all false blossoms. Poor cucumbers! Their mortality is so great. Flourishing one moment, limp and perishing the next. I was informed that their weak condition may have been caused by a destructive insect biting at their roots and it would be wise to hunt for same with a lantern at night. Well, maybe I will —some cheerful night!

The truck gardener advised me to have more of the proper kinds of insects to act as pollenizing agents. (Read a book on botany.) But just how can one know the proper manner for encouraging the bee? Not knowing bee language, painful misunderstanding might be the result. If I place "No Trespassing" signs, who is going to explain to the proper insects that only destructive insects are being warned? The good ones might feel touchy and leave, while the naughty ones held high revel under the signs. Bugs are as fond of vegetables as we are, and it is a race who gets them finally.

If one is wise, he will cultivate the acquaintance of the birds. Be careful though! The granite pan that is good enough for the sparrow, the robin may pass by with scorn, and go where are offered marble baths of a superior make. They are also finicky about their real estate, so bird-houses, these days, must live up to the bird requirements if you wish them rented for the season.

It is a good subject for mental arithmetic and will open one's eyes to try and figure the number of bugs a big bird will eat in a day if the tiniest bird will dispose of—well the number has slipped my mind, but the scientific account mentioned an astonishing total.

Toads must be treated with utmost respect, for they, too, are the gardener's little helpers, bugs forming their chief diet. No toad ever sees me shudder at his homeliness or hears me speak sharply. They live on my premises, rent free.

Head lettuce, like all things most desired, is not to be depended upon. It's tricky! I have worked, with aching back, transplanting the tiny plants, setting their roots straight in deep holes! I have been drenched by rain and been muddy and grubby, giving them special attention, enduring the hottest of hot suns on my poor head, while I placed sunshades over them during the heat of the day. And was all my labor appreciated? It was not. Most of the heads shot up into tall stalks, defiantly; and, to exasperate me the more, I would find at the end of the season, in undesirable suburbs of the garden, beautifully compact heads grown from carelessly dropped seed.

So there you are. If it were not for the bean and Swiss chard, I might give up the struggle of raising vegetables on any little plot of ground. Consider the pole bean! Such an affectionate clinging vine, always dependable. Put a bean, eye side down, n the garden, cover it, stick in a pole near by and your work is practically finished, except for eating the beans.

Swiss chard is another solace when you have grown bitter toward other vegetables. Like hope, it springs eternal. You can't snub Swiss chard, cut it ever so often. But although we may be fairly fond of Swiss chard an pole beans, contrary human nature turns toward the difficult with longing.

Some way, somehow, I must find a method, a sure one this time, that will enable me to raise a bushel of tomatoes on one vine. It seems that fish heads may be what is necessary for me to use. I was told in good faith to go to a fish market, get a number of fish heads, put one in the bottom of each hole where the tomato plant is to grow, put some earth on top of said fish, pour in a dipperful of warm water and then tenderly tuck in the tomato plant and wait happily for my reward. The result is said to be something marvellous and it surely ought to be. I shall try fish heads next year.

Skunks Killed Chickens In Wholesale Slaughter

WARSAW, July 5.—Skunks have been busy. They think nothing of going right into hen houses. A few days ago a skunk killed several young turkeys and some chickens in a farm hen house. On Saturday night it returned and killed every chicken but five; then visited another hen house, and murdered nearly all the chickens, and several ducks. If they killed only what they ate it would be bad enough, but they leave their dead lying where the killing took place.

CONDITIONS OF COUNTRY WRONG

CHARGE $35 A H.P.

By ALEX. McGREGOR.

The estimated cost of building a Hydro transmission line through the townships to serve the farmers, is $2,000 a mile, according to the statement made in a recent public address in Campbellford by Hon. R. Cooke, M.L.A., a member of the Commission. On an average, it is impossible to get more than three customers to a mile, so that, in order to make the extension pay, it is necessary to charge the farmers a rate of $35 per horse-power, which seems excessive when compared with the prevailing prices for light and power in the towns and cities.

Mr. Cooke admits that this price is practically prohibitive, but adds that for this the natural conditions of the country, and not the Commission, are responsible. These conditions the Hydro people are trying to overcome so as to bring the price of electric energy within reach of the farmer.

Mr. Horkins' Solution.

Leave it to T. J. Horkins of Campbellford to find a solution of any public problem that may arise. Mr. Horkins says that the use of electricity will never become general in the matter until its introduction is made a municipal affair, that is, decided by townships. If a municipality, by a majority vote, decides in favor of electricity, then the cost should be spread over the entire township instead of being fastened upon the actual consumers. Mr. Horkins adds that some of the money now spent on bringing to Canada undesirable immigrants from Southern Europe could be used to lessen the cost of these rural lines.

Is Solution Logical.

After all, in spite of any objection that can be urged against Mr. Horkins' suggestion, does it not look like the logical solution of a problem that has been a contentious point in Ontario for years? There is really nothing different in the principle than that which obtains in others matters of public interest.

Residents on a certain street in a town, or city, petition for the construction of a sewer. Suppose 75 per cent of the ratepayers want the improvement; well, the other 25 per cent are opposed to it. The sewer is put in, but all are required to pay for it on the same basis, whether they connect their residences with it or not, although, as the law now stands, they can be compelled to make the connection.

Ratepayers in a municipality may decide by a majority vote for the issue of debentures to build a new High School. Perhaps such an institution will never be of any direct benefit to the minority, who may never send a child to it, but all are required to pay their share just the same.

If a municipality votes in favor of a bonus to an industry the same will applies.

The township that, by a majority, favors the construction of an electric railway, pledges its credit to guarantee the bonds to meet the initial cost of outlay. Here, again, the minority are required to do their part, although those opposed to the road may never ride on it or send a pound of frieght over it. But the road is there; it can be used by everyone on the same terms, and the chances are that those opposed to the road at the outset will come to take a proprietory interest in it, and in the end patronize it. This would, undoubtedly, be the result if electrical energy were distributed among the farmers on the same basis.

Improve Rural Conditions.

The Ontario Government is professedly anxious to induce Canadians to remain on the farm. Improving living conditions in the rural sections will go a long way in accomplishing this end. Why should the buildings in the urban centres be flooded with electric light, while the farmer gropes his way through his barns and among his stock at night, his only illumination being the light furnished by a smoky lantern?

It is, perhaps, the overworked women on the farms of Ontario who, contrasting their lot with that of their town friends, long most ardently for a home where there are no lamp glasses to be polished daily, where the electric washing-machine can be operated, and where the electric iron and range takes the place of the wood fires that make the temperature of the farm kitchen almost unendurable during the summer season.

WOMEN DISCUSS WAYS TO MAKE OVER KITCHENS

Running Water Surprisingly Cheap and Wonderfully Helpful on the Farm.

LOTS OF LIGHT

Many Splendid Ideas Brought Out at a Round-Table Talk.

By DORIS W. McCRAY.

The other day a group of women met to talk about making over kitchens. After partaking of an unusually good picnic dinner and the usual exchange of recipes, we began the regular meeting. The group of thirteen women represented nine different school districts.

Our specialist first asked the women which they wanted most, light or water in the kitchen. She told of one woman who had a sink and running water put into her kitchen for $6, another for $8, each confessing that she could have afforded it long ago had she known how small the expense would be. Several women present who had had electricity installed, pointed out its advantages, and said they used the power not only for light, but for running their various machines. The relative cost of acetylene, electric light from a farm plant, and light from the high-power line were discussed.

How Much Window Space.

Brackets over the sink and worktable to hold lamps where they would give best light for evening work were then recommended. Our specialist said the glass area in a kitchen should be 20 per cent. of the floor area; for instance, a room measuring ten by twelve feet would have 120 square feet in the floor, and therefore the windows should total twenty-four square feet of glass. She mentioned white walls as making the room seem lighter and larger; but light gray or tan walls are preferable because softer in tone and easier to keep clean in a room where canning, separating and some of the heavy tasks incident to butchering are done. Our hostess stated that she likes her white kitchen and finds it little trouble to keep clean, but she has so small children, and her summer kitchen (in the basement) accommodates separator, washer and meals for harvesters.

The Best Flooring.

Samples of flooring, including oiled hard maple, varnished hard pine, inlaid and printed linoleum, were then shown. The oiled floor is good when a little oil is used and it is rubbed well into the grain of the wood, using much pressure Women who had different floors told of their advantages and disadvantages, linoleum was in favor as the easiest to clean and the prettiest to look at. The method of preserving it is to give it three coats of good grade floor varnish every other year. She had seen a linoleum fourteen years in use which had been given this care and it was in fine condition. After the figures have worn off the printed linoleum, two coats of paint and one of varnish were advised. A worn ingrain carpet treated with a filler, paint, and varnish makes a good substitute for linoleum.

Mop-wringers then came up for discussion and it was remarked that one never sees a janitor wringing a mop by hand.

Kitchen Arrangement Discussed.

There was more truth than poetry in the humorous cartoon showing the woman in an old-fashioned kitchen, walking several rods during the making of an apple pie. At our meeting a kitchen plan was shown and the lines of travel traced which the owner would walk during the preparation of meals. The plan was then re-arranged by means of a few changes which would save many hours of work and miles of travel during the year. We then adjourned to our hostess' kitchen and watched her make a pot of coffee, walking just eight steps, while our specialist told how in the old kitchen of her girlhood home, she had walked eighty steps in performing the same task, while a little thought in arrangement of materials would have saved time and steps. The advantages of tea carts, wheel trays, and tables on castors were discussed. Our hostess explained the advantages of her kitchen which she planned just as she wanted it when they built the house a few years ago. It is a most convenient kitchen for a country home.

We then filled out questionnaires which set us thinking about our own kitchens. The questions concerned water supply, light, ventilation, floor and wall finishes, kind of fuel, storage space, equipment and floor plan. Questions about equipment were worded something like this: "Do you have a refrigerator, high stool, comfortable chair, dish-drainer, gasoline iron, carpet-sweeper, vacuum-cleaner, wheel tray, power washer, electric iron, mop-wringer, fireless cooker, pressure cooker, dumb-waiter?"

Iceless refrigerators, those which lower into a hole beneath the cellar floor, were favored, since they would also serve as dumb-waiters for carrying fruit jars up and down cellar. The price of these refrigerators ranges from $35 to $45, and in some cases they have been copied by the home carpenter. A hole two feet deep in the cellar floor was suggested as a cool place in which to keep milk. A window-box is handy for the less cold part of winter, the box being attached to the sill so that when the window is raised the food can be put into it to keep cool.

Other kitchen problems were talked over, and I am sure every one of us went home and improved our own kitchens, if only to move the salt box and the coffee canister nearer the stove.

CHAMP MILK PRODUCER.

Grace Koningen, purebred Holstein-Friesian cow, bred and owned by the Montana State College of Agriculture, has won the milk producing record bd cows 10 years old and over. She produced in one year 32,294.4 pounds of milk and 1051.9 pounds of butterfat, equal to 1314.8 pounds of butter.

NO NECESSITY FOR WORRY IN THIS DISTRICT

President of Campbellford Cheese Board Believes Crops Will Be Average.

CUTTING ALFALFA

CAMPBELLFORD, July 5.—R. Innis, president of the cheese board and one of Seymour's leading farmers, told The Examiner the other day that there was no cause for worry over the agricultural outlook. From present indications there will be an average crop at least of everything. Some of the farmers in the district have started cutting their alfalfa and the yield will be satisfactory. Clover meadows will soon be ready for the mowers, and while the hay is shorter than usual the growth is thick and there is really no cause to complain.

Weather conditions for the growing crops have been ideal for the past month, although at the time Mr. Innis spoke, rain was needed. This came in abundance Saturday afternoon and night, and the moisture was not absorbed too quickly as the weather turned cold after the downfall.

Corn, potatoes, and all kinds of garden stuff, crops that were not affected by the late season, all give promise of an abundant yield.

Eggs here are selling for 25c, creamery butter 26c, dairy butter 33 to 35c, wool still brings 28 cents, and home-grown strawberries are 20c a box.

IF HENRY FORD BOUGHT A FARM

PUT IN SILO

Suppose Henry Ford should buy your farm. The first thing he would do would be to see whether it had a silo on it. If not—then he would build one. If it had—he would take out pencil and paper and see how many cows or how much stock the farm is supporting now, and by how many he could increase the number of head as far as space in the barn is concerned. Nine chances out of ten are that he would be able to keep quite a few more cows than you do.

"But how could he do it?" you may say.

Efficiency, of course. In the first place, silage gives a much higher feeding value, at much less cost, than any heavy grain ration. Dairy farmers fully realize that now. Beef men are beginning to realize it. Over a dozen experiment stations have tried it out and all with the same results. Steers fed silage compared with those fed no silage, without exception, bring a much greater profit.

Then, too, the crop put into the silo suffers less loss in feeding value than if stored in any other way. You can bet Henry wouldn't overlook this.

Storage Costs Low For Silage.

And here is something that may never have occurred to many of us—the storage costs are less for silage than for hay. This may not seem important, but it is. Professor E. S. Savage says eight tons of silage can be stored in the same space as one ton of hay. He says this does not fully answer the question, and that the cost of space must be considered. He refers to observations made on more than 100 farms, which give an accurate estimate as to cost charges for the use of farm buildings, and by averaging figures for the various yeafs, the cost of storage per ton of silage is found to be thirty-two cents, and per ton of alfalfa hay $1.08.

"There are 354 pounds of total digestible nutrients in a ton of silage," Mr. Savage states, "and 1,032 pounds in a ton of alfalfa hay. Thus, it is easy to calculate that the cost of storing 100 pounds of total digestible nutrients as silage is nine cents and as alfalfa hay, nine and one-half cents since digestible nutrients, their cost on this basis would be somewhat greater. Thus, the figures are favorable to silage. They are much more favorable when it is considered that silage has a feeding value in addition to that shown by its content of total digestible nutrients—a special value in furnishing succulence, in promoting health and in keeping up milk production."

From this, if you have a silo, you may draw the following conclusion:

"Full use of my silo, or the building of an additional one, will enable me to raise less hay and more corn, and at the same time keep more animals on the acreage I possess at present. In this way I can enlarge my herd, and increase my business."

"If I build a silo, I can either feed more cows, or sell some hay as a cash crop. At any rate, I'll be money ahead."

CURE FOR "PINK EYE."

Flies spread keratitis, or "pink eye," among cattle. To prevent blindness from this disease, the diseased animals should be quarantined and their eyes washed with a 3 per cent solution of baracic acid or a 2 per cent solution of nitrate of silver.

BEWARE COCKLE BURS.

Green cockle but plants are poisonous. They should be eliminated from the vicinity of the pasture. All animals need in greens is about 1½ pounds to every 100 pounds of live weight.

Paul In Possession

By RUBY AYRES

Copyright, 1924, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate

The story thus far:

When John Collinge died, he left behind him his adopted daughter, Wanda Griffin, a headstrong, passionate and overbearing girl, and his son Paul, with whom he had quarrelled, and who had gone abroad.

After the death, Paul comes home for the reading of the will, and to Wanda's surprise she finds she is disinherited, and that he is the heir.

Paul dislikes Wanda intensely because of her behaviour, and tells her that she must leave the house immediately; she refuses and, in order to stay there, pretends to be ill.

At last matters reach a crisis, and Paul orders Wanda out of the house She goes up to London with Mrs Garnet, her one friend, with whom she is to live.

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT.

XIX—WANDA IS UNHAPPY.

There was perhaps a no more unhappy woman in the whole of London than Wanda Griffin the first morning she woke to find herself in the small overcrowded bedroom which had been allotted to her in Mrs. Garnet's flat.

The room was pretty in a vapid, overcrowded fashion, with too much pink of the wrong shade about it, and too many ornaments and small pictures.

Clare Garnet was the sort of woman who looked upon a bare room as "unfurnished," and who loved a great many possessions.

The window was too heavily curtained, and although Wanda had opened it as wide as possible when she went to bed, there seemed no air after the high, large rooms of Grey Chumley, and the vast expanse of open country.

Wanda wondered how she would ever be able to stand it; she felt like a wild bird who has been cruelly caught and put into a cage many sizes too small.

She had lived all her life in the country, with the exception of a few short visits to London, and once or twice to Paris with old John Collinge, but they had been invariably in the winter months, when the air had been colder and keener.

Wanda got out of bed and looked at her watch. Only half-past six She knew by experience that Clare was always a late riser, and she wondered what time breakfast would be ready.

She opened the door and looked out on to the landing, which was dark and narrow, and smelt airless.

She drew a deep breath as if she were choking.

"How on earth can people live in places like this from choice?" she asked herself desperately, as she went back to her room and began to dress.

She felt that she must get out of doors or die, so she put on her hat and crept quietly down the stairs.

Clare's was a first-floor flat, so it was easy enough for Wanda to find her way, and she reached the main front entrance without meeting any one; then she stood still for a moment and looked up and down the street.

A newspaper boy was walking along on the other side of the road whistling dolefully, and on a neighboring doorstep a thin tabby cat sat licking a dusty paw.

Wanda shivered. And down at Grey Chumley the sun was shining on dew-refreshed grass and unfolding flowers. She closed her eyes with a little throb of home sickness. How would she ever get used to living anywhere else? What a fool she had been to quarrel so often with Paul!

He looked travel worn and slightly dissipated, and he stared at Wanda rather too openly as he waited for his luggage to be unloaded.

Wanda heard him say "Number 2 it is, on the first floor," as she turned to walk down the street, then suddenly she stopped. Number 2 was Clare's flat. She spoke to the man impulsively.

"I think there is some mistake. I live at No. 2 flat," she said.

He smiled rather amusedly.

Wanda flushed; his eyes, with their open admiration, disconcerted her.

"I am staying with Mrs. Garnet," she said, rather shortly.

The man laughed.

"Really. Well, I happen to be her brother."

"Oh!" There was a moment of mutual embarrassment, then Wanda laughed with him.

"I never knew she had a brother," she said confidingly.

"No, you wouldn't," he said casually.

"She's not very proud of me. I'm the black sheep of the family."

"Oh!" Wanda's interest deepened "Well, there was nobody up when I came out just now," she said naively. "Perhaps I had better come back with you."

"I think that's an excellent idea."

He spoke to the taxi-driver, then followed her up the stone staircase.

He was a good-looking man, "too good looking," Wanda told herself with a shade of irritation, as she realized that he was just the type of man whom Clare ought to have for a brother; somehow he seemed to suit the pretty, too crowded rooms, and the eternal smell of rosewater which followed Clare wherever she went.

He was of middle height, with black, sleek hair and brown eyes.

Very handsome eyes, but a shade too confident.

"And his clothes are a shade too well cut, and he's just a shade too much of everything," Wanda thought, as she opened the door with the latch-key she had taken from the hallstand on her way out, and preceded him into the flat.

REV. WHATTAM TO MOVE TO OSHAWA

Was a Former Pastor of Mark Street Methodist Church of This City.

The appended item refers to the Rev. R. A. Whattam, former pastor of Mark Street Methodist Church, who, this year, moves from Colbourne to Oshawa:—

A very enjoyable social time was spent in the Methodist Sunday School Hall on Monday evening, June 23, for Rev. R. A. and Mrs. Whattam who are leaving shortly for their new pastorate in Oshawa.

We are sorry to lose Mr. and Mrs. Whattam from our midst, but we know what is to be our loss will be another's gain.

The first part of the evening was taken up by a programme ably presided over by Mrs. Moore, president of W.M.S., and Mrs. Quinn, president of Ladies' Aid.

The programme was made up as follows:—Instrumental duet, Mrs. Wilson and Master Clare; solo, Mrs. Vandervoort; reading, Mrs. E. O. Coyle; duet, Mesdames Beyer and Fleming; reading, Mrs. S. D. Dudley; duet, Mrs. Vandervoort and Mr. Moore; reading, Mrs. Sinclair; solo, Mrs. Byers; reading, Mrs. Brintnell; solo, Mrs. Fleming; quintette, Mrs. Whattam, Mrs. Colton, Miss Clarke, Messrs Finkle and Moore; all of which was very much enjoyed.

At the conclusion of the programme Miss Clarke said: "I have a very pleasant task to perform, and yet, in many respects, not so pleasant for you all know we are going to lose Mrs. Whattam from our choir, and I am sure, all the members of the choir appreciate what your services have meant to us all during the past five years. As organist, I cannot find words to express my appreciation of the wonderful help you have been to me, rarely missing a practice or Sunday service and so often, when I was at a complete loss to know what to sing, Mrs. Whattam usually had a selection in mind. I am sure we do not realize just to what extent we shall miss you and I hope the next choir with which you are associated will enjoy having you as much as we.

"On behalf of the choir I present you with these candlesticks, and hope you will have as much pleasure using them as we have in giving them, and that they will bring to you thoughts of the friends in the Colborne choir whom, I am sure, will often think of you."

This was followed by the presentation of a silver basket filled with white honeysuckles and reflector, and an address by Mrs. Quinn to Rev R. A. and Mrs. Whattam.

To Rev. R. A. and Mrs. Whattam:

"Dear Mr. and Mrs. Whattam.—Five years ago we met here and greeted you as our incoming pastor in joyful anticipation o the advancement o our work here in Colborne Methodist Church. We now look back over those five years in happy retrospect, feeling that your work has not been in vain, but rather has been most abundantly blessed of God in every department o our church.

"We note with humble thankfulenss the firm grip you have taken on our dear young people, looking to the strengthening of our foundations in years to come.

"We look back at the glorious revivals under your leadership with their splendid ingathering of precious souls at your faithful, earnest and never-ceasing labors, and most of all to those who have been bereaved, of your Christ-like ministrations in the dark hours.

"We note with humble pride our beautiful church home, with its splendid Sunday School appointments, all redecorated and re-painted within and without during your pastorate; the splendid memorial to our boys, for which you so earnestly worked; the happy and long-to-be-remembered centenary celebrations of last year, and your constant efforts to advance God's cause in our church and community, for which we are all deeply grateful. And now comes the parting of the ways. We pray our Heavenly Father that He will go with you both in your new field of labor, and continue His blessing on you in greater abundance.

"Dear Mr. and Mrs. Whattam, on behalf of the Ladies' Aid and the Women's Missionary Society of the Colborne Methodist Church, we would ask you to accept this small gift as a token of our sincere love for you and Mr. Whattam, and we trust that as you use it you may always consider it full of pleasant memories of your friends in Colborne.

Signed on behalf of Ladies' Aid,
A. E. QUINN, Pres.
On behalf of W.M.S.,
LAVINIA MOORE, Pres.

Mr. and Mrs. Whattam replied in a few well-chosen words, thanking the Colborne friends for the many kindnesses shown them during their stay here.

All joined in singing "Blest be the tie that binds," after which refreshments were served.

Stationed at Oshawa.

Rev. R. A. Whattam leaves next week for his new field of labor in the flourishing young city of Oshawa. His long pastorate in Colborne has been a most successful one, and his wholehearted devotion to the young people of the community has endeared him to all classes.

Mrs. Whattam has also been very active in the different branches of church work, especially in the choir where she rendered splendid service.

Mr. Whattam will deliver his farewell address next Sunday evening.

BUGHOUSE.

Many of our young people have acquired the "moving picture mind." All life to them is a series of snapshots with no chance for a time exposure. Hence they cannot think straight on any subject. They are a bundle of transient impressions and confused ideas.

President Faunce of Brown University says this. It is now idea, vivid and correct. Modern life is a kaleidoscope of fleeting impressions. The old-timers had fewer things of interest and got closer to things basic. Ours is a generation of surface thinkers.

WHITE ON RED

The bright red sweater or blazer jacket is most striking with the white silk skirt and the white felt hat.

LITTLE OF EVERYTHING

DOWN.

Prices are dropping in nearly every important country except Germany and other places where money has been issued in such vast amounts that a rise in its buying power is impossible.

Wholesale prices, for instance, have been slipping in America. In England they are falling at a rate of 25 per cent. a year and now average only 75 per cent. higher than in 1914, compared with 226 per cent. in 1920.

It's a world movement—downward. How far?

POWER.

A small loop radio set receives so little actual energy while it's being used that, in 35 years of continuous operation, it would barely equal the energy used by a fly in climbing an inch up a wall. So says a General Electric research man.

This is about the last word in getting a lot out of a minute bit of power. Future man will work similar marvels with other forms of power, especially fuel. We use only a small fraction of the energy stored in coal. The bulk of it goes up the chimney.

SWEET.

Cheap sugar for housewives this coming canning season, predicts Federal Sugar Refining Co. It says the day of high-priced sugar is over unless there is another world war. You recall how high sugar was a few years ago. You wonder if prices of other commodities will also toboggan. Nothing is impossible—especially prices.

ANKLES.

Unfashionable to have thin ankles, announces Paul Poiret, the French fashion dictator. He says the ideal feminine ankle measures four inches around. To be in the swim, smaller ankles must be padded.

This is one style that will get to Paul's front door and no farther. The thin ankle is a womanly ideal because, like small ears and dainty fingers, it's supposed to indicate fine breeding.

K. K. K.

The Ku Klux Klan gained nearly half a million in membership during its 1923 fiscal year. The Klan is entrenched in 43 states.

We are approaching the first presidental election in which the Klan is apt to function on a national scale. It is the premier Great Unknown Factor in politics. And it may have more influence on the election than any third party movement.

YANKS.

America's population is gaining at the rate of one and three-quarter millions a year. That has been the sus. We are close to a total of 114 rate of increase since the 1920 census millions now. It helps the farmer, more mouths to feed. His main problem has been over-production of food.

In 50 years at the present rate of increase, we'll be 200 millions as strong. If all immigration bars were brown, we'd have the 200 millions as fast as steamships could bring them. China could send that many and not miss them.

OUT

Grimm's giant, who squeezed a stone until water ran out, had nothing on the Japs. They expect to solve their problem of oil supply by extracting petroleum from shale in Manchuria.

Shale oil already is a big industry in Scotland. It will be, later, in America when underground pools of oil are exhausted. Oil-bearing shale exits in fabulous quantities in many of our western states. In a pinch we could go back to taking oil from coal as they used to—that's how it got the name "coal oil." Alcohol also awaits. There is no such thing as exhaustion of natural resources with modern scientists in the laboratory.

TEST MOTOR FUEL AIDS

The Bureau of Standards has offered to test all forms of motor fuel aids that have recently been put on the market. The rush of such tonics followed the announcement of the production of ethyl gas for preventing carbon knocks and otherwise improving the motor's power.

The outstanding buying choice this year is "Closed Car Comforts at Open Car Cost." The Coach alone provides them. It is exclusive to Hudson and Essex. Everyone knows it gives highest closed car value. And because no other type or car shares its position it is the largest selling 6-cylinder closed car in the world.

Balloon Tires Now Enhance World's Greatest Value

Naturally when balloon tires had established their superiority Hudson and Essex would adopt them. They are now standard equipment. They add an even greater measure of riding ease, steadiness and good looks to the notable values of the Coach.

You see the Coach everywhere in increasing numbers. Everyone wants closed car comforts. They will no longer accept half-utility when all-year usefulness and comforts cost no more in the Coach.

Consider how the growing trend to closed cars affects resale values. The diminishing demand for open cars means far faster depreciation in that type. As the wanted type, the Coach maintains exceptionally high resale value.

In workmanship, materials and design both Hudson and Essex are of one quality—built in the same factories, under the same patents. Your choice between them will rest solely on the price you want to pay.

RUDYARD KIPLING TALKS ON LIFE TO RHODES SCHOLARS

Will Deal With Communities Sick of Self-love

FORMULA UNIQUE

No Folly Unthinkable, No Adventure Inconceivable Now

"You will be delivered to life in a world where, at the worst, no horror is now incredible, no folly unthinkable, no adventure inconceivable."

Rudyard Kipling in these words told the Rhodes scholars at the annual dinner of the Rhodes trustees at Oxford, of the world into which they are soon to launch.

"At the best," he continued, "you will have to deal, and be dealt with, by communities impatient of nature, idolatrous of mechanisms, and sick of self-love to the point, almost, of doubting their own perfections.

"The gods, whom they lecture, alone know what these folk will do or think. And here let me put before you the seductive possibility that some of you may end your days in refuges for the mentally afflicted—not because you will necessarily be any more insane than you are at present, but because you will have preached democracy to democracies resolute that never again shall their peace be troubled by Demos.

"It is an asset towards prosperity," he said, "even for those whose lot will be cast altogether in one land, to get full and first-hand information about the men they will meet later.

"You know the formula better than I. The style of a man's play, plus the normal range of his vices, divided by the square of his work, and multiplied by the co-efficient of his nationality, gives, not only his potential resistance under breaking strain, but indicates, within a few points, how far he may be trusted to pull off a losing game.

"When the symptoms of the middle-aged failings of toleration, impartiality, or broadmindedness break out on a young man it is a sure sign of early death, or—of a leaning towards practical politics.

"There is but one means by which you can miss prosperity, and that is, if you try to get the better of the gods who sell everything at a price."

Coroner's Jury Gives Murder Verdict in Bungalow Tragedy

The inquest at Pevensey in Miss Emily Beilby Kaye, the victim of the Crumbles bungalow tragedy, ended in a verdict of "Wilful murder" against Patrick Mahon, who was committed for trial last week by the Hailsham Bench.

Sir Bernard Spilsbury again gave evidence, agreeing, in reply to a question by the coroner, that death might have been due to suffocation.

SAFE IN HARBOR AFTER 5 MONTHS

After a voyage lasting 149 days, during which she had her top gallant mast and mizzentop masts carried away, the sailing ship Garthgarry, 1,416 tons, has reached Queenstown, Ireland.

She left Iquique, Chili, on January 9 with a cargo of nitrate, and on arrival was very short of provisions.

MONEY TO RESTORE ANCIENT CHURCH

Lord Forteviot of Dupplin, has given £10,000 for the restoration of the ancient Church of St. John's, Perth, as a city and county war memorial.

St. John's Church, which is mentioned as far back as the twelfth century, has been several times renovated. In this church on May 11, 1559, John Knox preached the famous sermon which was followed by the destruction of the monasteries.

FIRE DRILL FOR FACTORY WORKERS

New Bill is Introduced by British Home Secretary

Fire drill for all factories in Great Britain once in three months is one of many new conditions for securing the health and safety of workers, which are contained in the Government's Factories Bill, introduced by Mr. Henderson, Home Secretary.

It is proposed that the total hours of work for women and young persons shall not exceed nine a day or forty-eight a week.

Women and young persons are not to lift or move any weight heavy enough to be likely to cause them injury, and the Secretary of State will have power to prescribe the maximum weights which they may lift.

Government inspectors are given power to enforce provisions which have hitherto been left to local authorities; and factories and all workshops of all kinds are brought into the one control.

OMNIBUS RECORDS MADE IN LONDON

During Whitsun 12,804,000 passengers were carried by the London General Omnibus Company—an increase of 3,185,000 over last Whitsun.

On one day 5,300,000 passengers were carried. This is the highest total in the history of the company for any one day. On Sunday the number was 3,024,000, and on Bank Holiday 4,480,000.

One thousand omnibuses were on the services running to Wembley, and these routes carried 260,000 people on Saturday and Monday. Epping Forest services accounted for 70,000.

There are 199 inhabited canal boats in the Port of London.

ETERNAL HILLS AS WAR MEMORIAL

Range of Twelve Mountains Dedicated To Heroes

GIANT PEAKS

Form One of Most Magnificent Landscapes in England

Amid the clouds of the wind-swept rocky summit of the Great Gable, nearly 3,000 ft. high, in the heart of the Cumberland Lakeland, a range of twelve mountains, covering 3,000 acres, was dedicated to the memory of the twenty members of the Fell and Rock-climbing Club who lost their lives in the war.

These mountains, whose peaks tower from 2,000 to 3,000 ft., have been purchased by the club from Mr. H. W. Walker, of Seascale (Cumberland) for the nominal sum of £400, and presented to the National Trust, following the movement begun by Lord Leconfield, who gave the upper cone of Scafell Pike.

Mr. Walker, who sold the peaks after being in possession of them for only a few months, is an old climber and a former member of the Fell Club, whose 450 members raised the money by subscription.

The Peaks which form this everlasting memorial, present what is one of the most magnificent landscapes in the country. They are Great Gable, Kirkfell, Green Gable, Base Brown, Lingmell, Broad Crag, Great End, Glaramara, Stonythwaite Fell, Grey Knotts, Allen Crags, and Brandreth.

Names of the Fallen.

J. S. Bainbridge, J. G. Bean, H. S. P. Blair, A. J. Clay, J. N. Fletcher, W. H. B. Gross, E. Hartley, S. W. Herford, S. F. Jeffcoat, E. B. Lees, S. J. Linzell, L. J. Oppenheimer, A. J. Prichard, A. M. Rimer, R. B. Sanderson, H. L. Slingsby, G. C. Turner, B. H. Witty, J. H. Whitworth, C. S. Worthington.

The tablet itself, which weighs 44 lb., was carried up on the back of one of the Fell Club members—a feat of endurance. Behind it, in the living rock, is an envelope of lead containing a record of the day's ceremony.

The upper half of the tablet comprises a relief map of the Fells, and under that is the following inscription:

In glorious and happy memory of those whose names are inscribed below, members of this club, who died for their country in the European War 1914-1918 (nineteen fourteen-eighteen), these Fells were acquired by their fellow members and by them vested in the National Trust for the use and enjoyment of our land for all time.

To attend the ceremony between 200 and 300 people toiled for three to four hours up the slope of the mountain.

The unveiling ceremony was performed by Dr. A. W. Wakefield, a member of the Mount Everest Expedition in 1922. While one minute's silence was observed he removed the Union Jack flown by H.M.S. Burham in the Battle of Jutland.

GUARDIANS' CLERK BREAKS INTO VERSE

Chairman Replied in Rhyme to Ode of Sympathy

Rev. J. G. Dixon, chairman of Caistor (Lincs.) Board of Guardians, who received from A. A. Padley, the clerk, a poetic vote of sympathy, when asked for his own original rhyming letter, replied:—

Alas! the rubbish can't be found,
Its ashes wil enrich the ground,
So short the life of scraps of paper,
Though written to the Clerk of Caistor.

O. . . reporter, thou com'st like a wolf on the fold,
With thy note-book and pencil of cedar, not gold:
And you ask me to say if it's true every time,
That when I answer a letter I write it in rhyme.
It's hard to refuse your insidious request,
Or send away empty so pleasant a guest;
But to tell you the truth I am not given to rhymes,
And my efforts at verse are not pleasant at times.

He added that he did not think the poetic art flourished amongst the guardians.

FINANCIERS MADE CLEAN-UP; SHAREHOLDERS IN WOE

Cotton Mill Market Rigged and Huge Profits Taken

GREAT DISTRESS

Calls on Shares Now Drive Many to Verge of Want

Shareholders in Lancashire cotton mil companies are anxious as to their position under the continued depression which the slight improvement in the market is not removing. But for the most desperate remedies—some of which are placing in pawn for years any possible sources of revenue—scores of concerns would follow those which are already in desperate straits. The number of these is much greater than the public is permitted to know.

So serious has the position become that in many cases shares can be had for nothing, so as to relieve holders from periodic calls which are driving previously well-to-do people to the verge of want.

It is while the trade is in this parlous condition that the suspicion is slowly forcing itself on the minds of the sufferers that the state of affairs is deliberately being made worse by some of those whose policy of grab brought about the recent fictitious boom. In that period men with big capital rigged the mill market and then, by unloading on those whom they had deluded by the glitter of unreal prosperity, slipped away with the hard earned money of decent people. It is known that one little knot of financiers got clear away with close on thirty millions between them.

These "investors" are now suspected of applying the screw and forcing companies into arrangements from which they themselves will profit.

Train Robbery in Ireland; £5,000 Taken From Bank Official

A Bank of Ireland official, Mr. Vernon, of Tuam, was robbed of a large sum of money when travelling by train from Tuam to Athenry.

When the train reached Balygunin, the intervening station, three armed men who were standing on the platform walked into the carriage where Mr. Vernon and his assistant were, "covered" them with revolvers, and took the metal box in which the money was.

It is stated the sum taken would be between £4,000 and £5,000. The raiders escaped, and are now being searched for by troops.

CAPTAIN SWIMS OUT TO INSPECT PITCH

After five days the Severn flood remained so deep on the Worcestershire Cricket Grounds, that the Rev. G. W. Gillingham, the captain of the Club and Ground Team, dived from the members' pavilion and swam over the pitch.

The secretary had previously entered the dressing rooms by boat to rescue submerged and saturated bags and clothing.

SMALL DIVIDEND FOR HIS CREDITORS

At a meeting of the creditors of the late Sir John Stewart, Bart., of Fingask Castle, Dundee, the trustee reported the estimated assets at £52,-267, less preferential debts £18,185, leaving £34,081.

Ordinary liabilities amounted to £506,723, leaving an apparent deficiency of £562,641, and showing a probable dividend of 1s. 1d. per £, subject to expenses and contingencies.

Sir John, who was a large whisky merchant in Dundee, died by his own hand in Fngask Castle.

NO BATTERY VALVE NEW RADIO DEVICE

A foremost British wireless engineer holds the view that the discovery by a Russian scientist of a crystal which will oscillate at short wavelengths is of paramount importance to broadcatchers. "It may be that this oscillating crystal is the first step towards the dream of all valve set workers—the cold filament or 'no-battery' valve," he told a reporter.

"It is unlikely that the extremely clever device of M. Lossev, the discoverer, will be a serious competitor to the valve in broadcasting yet.

"I am unable to say definitely, for instance, until fresh developments are made, whether an oscillating crystal set will give an immediate amplification of serious value.

"From my own knowledge of this particular type of crystal, however, I think that the receptive range of the 'no-valve' set will be increased to two or three times the present crystal range."

M. Lossev's experiments began, he added, during the later stages of the war, when Russia was faced with a very serious shortage of valves.

DUKE OF ARGYLL AS MASON'S HELPER

The Duke of Argyll was seen every day last week in the grounds of Inverary Castle, Loch Fyneside, minus his coat and waistcoat and with his shirt sleeves rolled up, carrying heavy stones and acting as assistant to skilled stone-masons erecting a belfy to house a fine peal of bells.

DOG'S VIGIL BY MASTER'S BODY

The story of a terrier's all-night vigil in a thunderstorm beside the body of his master, who had committed suicide, was told at the inquest on Charles Morris, farm tenant, of Middletown, near Welshpool.

Morris left home with the dog, and as he did not return a search party set out in the storm and found the dog barking beneath a tree. Morris was not found, and the party returned home.

Cobden's House for Liberal Party

A party of delegates from the British National Liberal Federation, who recently made a pilgrimage to the picturesque churchyard at West Lavington, Sussex, where Richard Cobden, the apostle of Free Trade, is buried, met with a very pleasant surprise. They were met by Mrs. Fisher Unwin, Cobden's youngest daughter, and entertained at Dunford House, which stands on the old farmhouse where Cobden was born in 1804. Mrs. Unwin announced that Dunford is to be presented to the Liberal Party by herself and her husband in memory of her father to be used for meetings and discussions on Free Trade, Peace and Good-Will.

LONDON THIEF HID WEALTH IN CUSHION

Hundred Thousand Pounds in Notes Instead of Feathers

USED AS PILLOW

"Bludger Bills" Jewels Sold To Satify Claims

Jewels belonging to "Bludger Bill's" wife have been sold in Paris and realized £2,500. "Bludger Bill," or William Warren, was for years London's premier thief and swindler. He posed as an eccentric millionaire and owned a magnificently furnished flat near Hyde Park.

One of Warren's peculiarities was that whenever he went out to dine he always sat on a special cushion which his chauffeur placed in position for him. After the meal the cushion was taken back to the motor-car and on the journey home he always sat on it. When at home it rested on the seat of his favorite chair, and at night it served as a pillow.

It was not known until shortly before his arrest recently in Paris, where he was subsequently sentenced to five years for swindling, that the cushion was Waren's secret repository of his wealth.

He would not bank his money, but placed it in notes in the cushion so that they would always be close to him. More than once the cushion contained more than £100,000 in notes, but although Warren was an associate of the most expert thieves in the world, they at no time guessed where he secreted his money.

"Bludger Bill's" motor-car and his wife's jewels were sold in order to defray claims amounting to about £23,000 made against him by Sir Walter Cockerline, the Hull shipowner, and the French Treasury.

CRIMEAN VETERAN DEAD IN LONDON

Captain Duncan McNeill of Colonsay, believed to be the last of the Scots Greys officers who served with the regiment in the Crimean War, died in London, aged 88.

He joined the Scots Greys in 1854, and was present at the battle of the Tchernya and the fall of Sebastopol.

In his day Captain McNeill was a fine rider to hounds and a noted shot. He was a brother to the late General Sir John McNeill, V.C., for many years Equerry to Queen Victoria.

PAINTER RECLUSE ANOTHER TURNER

Masterpieces of Collings Draw London Critics' Praise

If Charles John Collings were not a recluse, living and working in the solitude of the Canadian Rockies, shunning rather than seeking publicity, and painting for his own satisfaction and for that of a few discerning patrons who have "found him out," there can be little doubt that he would rank with the greatest water-color painters of all times—the compeer of Turner, with whom he has so much in common, both as regards vision and technique.

In some respects the exhibition of Mr. Collings's water-colors of "The Canadian Rockies," at the Carroll Gallery, in George street, Hanover square, proves this modern artist to be even superior to Turner.

Thanks to his highly developed sense of design, the flowing arabesque of his contours, and the alternating tenderness and rich accentuation of his color, these water-colors far exceed Turner's as regards decorative effectiveness.

Mr. Collings, in his landscapes, knows how to find and to accentuate decorative rhythm without falsifying the colors and forms of nature.

No living painter could have invested the tree trunks of "The Pillared Forest" with such richness of hue and energy of growth without appreciably departing from truth beyond the point of legitimate emphasis.

His palette, too, has an infinitely greater range than Turner's, now tender and sweet, like the turquoise, pale mauve and chrysoprase of "Spring in the Selkirks," now triumphant, like the pure lapis lazuli of the mountains in "At the Head of Shuswap Lake," or, again, sad and solemn like the grey-green and olive of "Solitude," or infinitely subtle and delicate, like the tones of grass and earth making themselves felt under "The Last of Winter Snow." But every touch he places on the paper is as precious as a jewel.

WON FORTUNE ON DERBY WINNER AND LOST IT ON OAKS

Experts report that there was little wagering done on the race for the Oaks compared with the heavy betting done on the Derby. The aggregate, say the bookmakers, was relatively "a bagatelle."

Yet, the man mentioned as a winner of £20,000 over Sansovino invested every penny of it on Plack—and lost it!

MODERN FURNITURE MADE IN WOODS

Craftsmen of Great Skill Use Old-time Tools

Deep in the woods which surround the Prime Minister's country house, Chequers, a few miles from Wendover (Bucks), there are men who make modern furniture with tools that might have been used 1,000 years ago.

In each of the wigwams there is a lathe of the most primitive sort—a marvellous combination of branches of trees and pieces of wire. Motive power is supplied by means of a long and supple branch fixed to a tree stump outside the workshop.

In spite of its quaintness, one of these lathes can turn out as many as a gross of chair-legs in a day, each as smoothly turned as though by modern machinery.

Most of the craftsmen of the woods are elderly men who speak little and are proud of their skill. The oldest of them all refuses to be parted from his work. He takes his meals at his lathe and sleeps beside it at night.

PRIZE OF £10,000 WON BY WOMAN

Mrs. Ethel Bliss, of Willows Cottage, Riverside, Egham, has won £10,000 in Duggan's Derby Scheme for the Neath Hospital, Dublin. She is the wife of a coach at Oxford and the mother of six children.

A daughter told an extraordinary story of how her mother arrived at her decision. The competition was to place in order of merit ten famous Derby winners.

Mrs. Bliss cut out the names of the Derby winners and placed them singly within the leaves of a book. After offering a prayer she drew the names out and let them remain in her order of drawing, although tempted to make a change in two instances, especially as Humorist was late in the list.

GALSWORTHY AND LITERARY CRITICS

Mr. Galsworthy, at a recent meeting said:—"Critics are very like mosquitoes! they will have your blood. I know a lady who, after an operation, came to with the words, 'I don't want to be a self-supporting, independent, economic agent; I want to be loved!' The literary man comes to under the knives of the critics with the words, 'I don't want to be a double-barrelled, copper-plated artist, I want to be read.'"

WAR SACRIFICES BEING FORGOTTEN

Lloyd George Makes Interesting Speech at Memorial Unveiling

Mr. Lloyd George, unveiling a war memorial tablet at Merton House Schol, Penmaenmawr, said in the course of his address:

I have never criticized conscientious objectors, and I certainly should not dare to do so now, for this is their day.

I have this to say for those young men who laid down their lives, that the conscience that impelled its possessor at the call of duty to face torture and death is put to a severer strain than the conscience that induces one to escape those terrors.

I have seen these war memorials everywhere I go. Cynic and sceptic may ask to what purpose are they raised. The answer is what would have happened to all that is best in Europe if the sacrifices had not been made. As it was, it was a much nearer thing than I care to ponder over even now.

Although it is not five years since the struggle for freedom was closed in Europe, we are forgetting the sacrifices that were made, and what was achieved through those sacrifices.

LEAP TO DEATH IN RACING CAR AT 104 MILES AN HOUR

Terrible Accident at Brooklands During Crowded Meeting

JUST DISAPPEARED

Remarkable Gyrations of Automobile Which Flew Off Track

J. A. Toop, an enthusiastic amateur racing motorist, was killed at Brooklands during the seventh race of a very crowded meeting.

The car he was driving, a large Peugot, owned by C. G. Brocklebank, left the banking of the track at 104 miles an hour and ploughed its way through 100 yards of dense fir plantation on the outer slopes of the embankment. Although many thousands watched the race, few knew of the mishap until it was announced that the three remaining races were abandoned.

Only a handful of spectators saw what happened, and none can explain the cause of it. The car simply disappeared.

There was no evidence of a burst tire or a skid. The track of the wheels led in a straight line for the top of the embankment.

Eye-witnesses state that when it reached the top of the banking, the car seemed to leap into the air. A clump of firs in its path was untouched, suggesting that the car jumped right over it. Farther on the car's path through the plantation was marked by destroyed trees. Some had been uprooted and others cut clean in two.

Mr. Toop was thrown clear of the car. His body was found under a wild rose bush about 30 yards from the wreckage. The car was upside down with its nose buried in the undergrowth. The front axle was lying about 15 yards away. The wheels were found in different parts of the plantation.

Mr. Toop was known on the Brooklands track before the war as a skilled racing driver. He returned to England a few months ago after several years' Army service in India.

DUBLIN CABBY ONLY FEW DAYS RICH

William Browne, the Dublin cabdriver, who recently was declared by the Irish Courts to be heir to an estate of over £80,000, died yesterday in a Dublin nursing home before he was able to enjoy any of the fruits of his unexpected inheritance.

Some months ago Browne casually noticed an advertisement in a newspaper for the heirs of Mrs. Lewis, of Kilcullen, County Kildare, who died intestate, and, recognising her as a distant relative, he got his claim taken up, and won his case.

Pending the completion of legal formalities, the Court granted him an advance of £250. He continued to drive his cab up to a few days ago, when he was taken seriously ill. He leaves a family.

J. H. THOMAS INJURED.

While Mr. J. H. Thomas was adjusting the luggage-carrier on his motor-car on Saturday in preparation for his trip to the south coast to recuperate after his recent attack of pleurisy, the tips of two of his fingers were caught and crushed.

GIRL BURIED ON HER WEDDING DAY

Suicide's After Engagement Broken Off by Miner

After her engagement to Richard Welsh, a young miner, had been broken off in a manner described by the coroner as "brutal," May Laidlaw, aged 18, of Stanley, Durham County, drowned herself in a reservoir.

Witnesses at the inquest said that Welsh's father visited the Laidlaws' home and said to the girl: "Dick tells me that you have put the names in." She replied, "Yes"; and then he said, "Here are your rings; my son wants nothing more to do with you. I am the boss."

Later the same night, it was added, father and son passed the girl in the street and ignored her.

Welsh senior told the coroner that he only wanted the wedding postponed until his son earned more money.

Asked why he did not tell his sweetheart himself, the son said he "was afraid he would lose courage."

Returning a verdict of suicide while temporarily insane, the coroner said the conduct of Richard Welsh had been contemptible.

The girl's funeral took place on the day, which she had hoped would be her wedding day.

PET SNAKE KEPT IN OWNER'S POCKET

People standing at Camberwell Gate had a fright when they saw a large grass snake writhing slowly round a side turning.

The mystery of where it had come from was soon solved when a man came up, claimed it as his property.

The snake, he informed the bystanders, was his dearest pet and had lived in his pocket for over four years.

NEW CATHEDRAL AT LIVERPOOL UNIQUE ARCHITECTURAL WORK

Masterpiece Designed by Youth of 21, Who Beat His Teacher in Competition, Will Be Consecrated in Presence of King and Queen

The consecration of Liverpool Cathedral on July 19 will be attended by the King and Queen, and will be an event of unique interest and importance. Liverpool will be the first Anglican Cathedral dedicated in England for over 700 years. Salisbury was the last. It is the site of a cathedral that is dedicated, not the building itself, which explains why, although there are more recent cathedrals than Salisbury, this is the first dedication since the 13th century, Liverpool Cathedral being built on new ground instead of on the site of an old church. These novel circumstances are causing the ecclesiastical authorities much perturbation. A committee has been sitting with the object of digging up precedents and arranging the ceremony.

Liverpool Cathedral will be the biggest ecclesiastical building in Great Britain, and the fourth largest cathedral in the world. It will be 100 ft. longer than St. Paul's, 80 ft. longer than Canterbury, 87 feet longer than York Minster, and 111 feet longer than Westminster Abbey. Its architecture is unique and impressive, and the architect, Mr. Gilbert Scott, was only 21 when his design was accepted in open competition.

The committee, however, being doubtful whether such a youth could carry out the work, joined with him the late Mr. Bodley. The whole connection of young Scott with the cathedral is romantic and interesting. The grandson of a famous architect, Sir Gilbert Scott, R.A., who gave to London two fine buildings—St. Pancras Station and the Foreign Office—the present Gilbert Scott was a pupil in an architect's office in his early twenties when the competition for the Liverpool Cathedral was announced.

His master, the late Mr. Temple Moore, well known as a good church architect, decided to enter the competition. So did the pupil, but that, without informing his master, and Scott carried out the immense drawings required during the short hours he was free from office. No wonder he was occasionally rather late in the mornings and received the gentle reprimands of his courteous employer, who supposed he was using his spare time as young men usually do!

It is easy, therefore, to imagine the astonishment of the master, as indeed of the world at large, when it was found that the young pupil had won the open competition for the largest, and most imaginative, and what has proved in many ways the most important building of our time. The windows of the cathedral and its decorations will be superb. It will cost some £2,000,000, which is being raised by public subscription.

It will contain one of the most beautiful books in the world, in which will be recorded the names of the 35,000 men from the Liverpool district who gave their lives for the country in the war. And it is a remarkable example of the true civic spirit. In the cathedral stained glass windows have been erected to commemorate the deeds of women notable for their good works.

Long-lost Will Proves Claim to Very Big Fortune

Over a million pounds, including valuable property in the West-end of London, in Bath and in Devon, is believed to be the value of the vast fortune which may be claimed through the discovery of a long-lost will in South Africa.

The will was found among documents dating back to 1790 in the attic of her house by Mrs. Bishoff, an old resident of Philippopolis, Orange Free State.

The will had been made by a Mrs. Sarah Mullins, of Bath, and papers with it referring to properties mention the names of Jeffreys, Mullins, and Baine.

John F. Kebby, of London, N., claims to be an heir at law.

"Beyond doubt this newly-found will refers to property to which we claim a right," he said.

The family trace their descent from William Hayman, a Somerset yeoman, who died in 1739; and it is held that James Kebby, an immediate ancestor of Mr. J. F. Kebby's, became heir-at-law to the estate under Hayman's will.

"It is difficult offhand to assess the value of the whole property involved, but there is a million sterling in Chancery. Evidence in support of our case is held by different descendants of the Kebby line, but the main issue narrows down to the claims of the families of two brothers, and that is where I come in."

MOTHER DIES AND SON IS ARRESTED

Illness Followed Supper Taken on Return from Theatre

Mrs. James Rae King, wife of the Vice-Moderator of the High Constables of Edinburgh, died in mysterious circumstances at the end of last month, and her son, William Lawrie King, aged twenty-two, has been arrested.

The case has caused a sensation in Murrayfield, one of the best residential quarters of Edinburgh, where the family lives. James Rae King is a prominent chartered accountant.

It is stated that Mr. and Mrs. King went to a theatre on May 30 and became violently ill after supper which consisted of coffee, bread and butter, and cheese.

Mr. King recovered, but his wife become steadily worse, and at two o'clock in the morning she died in agony.

Woman Pastor in Solemnising Wedding Omits the Word 'Obey'

Mrs. "Peter" Pickles is the first woman pastor to solemnize a wedding in North England. She officiated at the marriage of Elizabeth Alice Elkington and John Lloyd Worswick at the Stanley Congregational Church, Liverpool.

The bride, while promising to be faithful and affectionate, was not asked to promise to "obey." Apart from this the usual marriage service was followed.

Mrs. Pickles read the service in a clear and confident voice. She wore a black silk gown and a small black felt hat. She is the widow of the late Rev. Albert Pickles, and succeeded to the ministry at Stanley Church on the invitation of the congregation.

STONE AGE CIPHER MAY NOW BE READ

At Coldrum and Addington Park, Kent, is a group of huge stones, remains of much disturbed structures of a sacred and sepulchral character of the latest phase of the New Stone Age—about 2,000 B.C.

A scrutiny of the surface of these stones, and of the stones at Stonehenge, has revealed that they have been artificially sculptured with circular cups or cavities, set in a precisely geometrical manner.

Similar "cupped" surfaces have long been known in the north of England and elsewhere, but only last week, for the first time, were they observed on the Kentish and Wiltshire megaliths. Mr. Ludovic McL. Mann, the discoverer, claims to have found the key to the reading of these ancient non-alphabetic scribings.

A floating bridge to link up Harwich and Felixstowe is proposed.

ORPHAN'S GIFT TO EXPRESS GRATITUDE

Thomas Pescod Exercised Self-Denial to Make Legacy

A fine story of an orphan's gratitude for a start in life lies behind the announcement that the late Thomas Pescod, of Guildford, has left half his estate, about £600, to the Reedham Orphanage at Purley, Surrey.

Fifty-eight years ago Mr. Pescod was taken into the orphanage, and was brought up there until old enough to go out into the world and earn his own living.

He went to South Africa, and there managed to save enough money to return to England and start a little hosiery shop in London, for the latter part of the time in Oxford street.

In 1919 he retired and went to live at Worplesdon, near Guildford.

Throughout his life he retained a warm affection for the orphanage, and visited it whenever possible.

The headmaster of the Orphanage told a reporter yesterday that Mr. Pescod always had a great idea of doing what he could in return for what was done for him.

"He knew we were as poor as church mice," he said, "and that the 300 girls and boys here were having their chances in life hampered by the lack of financial aid.

"When he retired to Guildford he lived in a very modest way, and refused to break into his little capital for fear there should be nothing left for us.

"He certainly lived as far as possible without those things which most people regard as the necessities of life. About a year ago I had a talk to him about it, and I noticed his well-worn suit. He said he had not had a new one since he retired, and did not intend to have another."

SHILLING SHOCKERS ARE NOT BANNED

A report that Bath's new public library has banned best sellers is denied.

As a proof that the story is untrue, Major-General Bradshaw, of the library committee, states that the works of Miss Ethel M. Dell are admitted to the library.

He invites readers of popular novels to send along any best sellers for which they may have no further use.

MOLTEN METAL TO FIGHT AIR RAIDS

Winged Incendiary Rocket Tested in Yorkshire, Produces Results

Tests of a winged incendiary rocket which, it is claimed, will spread a rain of molten metal over an area of five to eight miles, were carried out recently in the quietude of the village of North Ferriby, Yorkshire.

The inventor, Ernest Welch, of Chelsea, declares that the bursting of the rocket would destroy any aeroplane or, indeed, anything within range, penetrating even steel or asbestos.

The tests were carried out in open country, and the police had notified the public of the danger of being in proximity. Miniature rockets were used, as it was asserted that the full-sized apparatus would have destroyed the whole village.

Only privileged persons were permitted to be present. The miniature rockets when fired produced bursts of molten metal, which gave a grim picture of future possibilities.

CHILDREN'S GOLDEN AGE AT PRESENT

Addressing the Berks, Bucks, and Oxon Jeverill Foresters Federation, at Slough, the High Chief Ranger, Mr. Walker, said that this was the children's golden age. Every movement, political, social, and national, was to uplift the children, and make life for them better than that experienced by the men and women of today when they were young.

A healty juvenile movement was necessary to the adult friendly societies, which were the most valuable assets of the country.

There is no Poultry Food quite so good as Purina, Come and we will tell you why, and give you some very informing literature.

BOARD OF WORKS HELD A MEETING

More Street Paving—Weeds in Vacant Lots Must Be Taken Care of.

The Board decided to advertise for tenders for paving Antrim street, from George to Water streets; Murray street from George to 130 feet east of Water street; Simcoe street from Water street east; and for resurfacing George street south.

Ald. Phelan stated that Water St. from the Railway crossing to Langton street, was in very bad shape, and suggested that the city continue its construction to the city limits on Water street without gutter or curb.

The proposal was generally accepted as a feasible proposition in view of the fact it was one of the worst streets in the city, and it was only a matter of paving a couple more blocks to pave water street to the city limits.

City Engineer Parsons was instructed to submit estimates on the cost of the work, and the board will also advertise for tenders as usual.

His Worship stated that he had received a complaint from a McDonnel street resident in reference to weeds growing on vacant lots in that locality. If they were objectionable and the seeds should spread to lawns in the vicinity, something should be done, he remarked.

Chairman Morrison interjected that weeds are growing on vacant lots all over the city.

"We have a bylaw to enforce the cutting of weeds," stated Ald Stocker.

Mr. Parsons asked if the city could not go ahead and cut the weeds and send the bill to the owners.

The Police Department have jurisdiction, remarked Ald. Meyers.

Ald. Maher explained that it was the custom for the police to look after the lots and to notify the City Engineer if they were not cut.

Mayor Turner closed the discussion by stating that he would speak to Chief Newhall in the morning.

Ald. Stocker sponsored a motion providing for the underbrushing of Dunlop street, which carried. He pointed out that the road is in an ideal shape to allow motor accidents to occur.

The chairman brought up several minor matters which he and the City Engineer have under consideration.

When the matter of oiling certain streets was suggested, the chairman explained that the oil is being distributed as fairly as possible, in keeping with the city's appropriation for the purpose.

There were present at the meeting Ald. Morrison (chairman), Ald. Phelan, Jones, Turner, Meyers, Stocker, McIntyre, Crowe, Fife and Maher.

RICE LAKE FISH TRUE TO TRIBE

RESORTS ARE BUSY.

Fishing from Hastings up the Trent River and along Rice Lake is reported better this summer than for years. Satisfactory and often very heavy catches have left pleasant memories with those who spent their early vacations at the resorts on these waters. Many a box of 'lunge and bass packed in ice have already crossed the border weighting down motor cars either in the tonneau or securely tied between the tail lamps. The fishing beds around Hiawatha have provided a large part of these catches, which were desinted for Buffalo, Lockport, Peoria, Cleveland and many other cities in the northern States.

The long-ranging automobiles have brought the Trent and Kawartha districts comparatively close to Buffalo, and this trip offers no obstacles to tourists. The roads are excellent down to the water's edge, where new cottages have been erected during the last few years. Hastings itself is a summer resort, easily accessible from the Kingston road and the Peterborough highway. Four miles up the stream Joe Monette's "Maple Leaf Inn," enlarged this season for its increasing popularity, sits out on a projecting point on the north shore catching every breeze that blows down from Rice Lake. This is especially favored by angiers, most of them from the United States. It is easily reached from Peterborough both by automobile and train.

A mile further up stream on the south shore is Trent Valley Lodge, which has already had a big list of visitors this summer. The new resort on Margaret's Island is another sign of the widespread conviction that the Rice Lake fishing grounds are now among the best in the province for 'lunge and bass.

Extensions to the Hiawatha resort have failed to leave spare room this season, and reports from the Indian settlement indicate that the available accommodation is mostly booked up ahead for the entire season. Harwood, Gore's Landing and Bewdley are enjoying their usual summer activities, and in brief the whole district is a veritable summer resort, even Peterborough itself, although it apparently does not realize that fact from being so much at home or from some deficiency that overlooks an asset inviting exploitation.

SERIOUSLY HURT WHEN HIT BY CAR

DRIVERS CAUTIONED.

Miss A. Patterson, 508 Belmont avenue, was seriously injured when alighting from a north bound street car at the corner of Park and Hunter streets, at 10 p.m., on Thursday evening last.

As Miss Patteson was walking around the rear of the car to reach the west side of Park street, she was struck by an auto driven by Mr. N. D. Seaton, of 313 Frederick avenue.

The injured girl was immediately removed to Dr. Waite's office where first aid treatment was rendered, and is now lying at the Nicholls Hospital suffering with a double break of an ankle bone, and a general shakeup as a result of the accident.

Mr. John McCann, superintendent of the Peterboro Radial Railway, in speaking to the Examiner this morning, remarked that this accident ought to serve as a lesson to the public. "People are not careful enough in walking from the street cars to the sidewalk, and motorists should slow up and always be on the look out in passing the blind end of a street car when it is stopped."

Several motormen present stated that car drivers are too anxious to shoot by stopping street cars, and remarked that it is miraculous how some have just escaped meeting an approching auto in passing around the rear of a street car after alighting.

LEGAL BILL WAS UP LAST EVENING

Communiction From Mr. R. R. Hall Relative to Account Was Received.

The Finance Committee held a meeting last night, and besides certifying accounts and going through other routine procedure in preparation for the regular meeting of the whole Council on Monday next, the matter of paying Mr. R. R. Hall, K.C., for his services in the defence of the police department in the police investigation was the subject of a prolonged discussion.

A communication from Mr. Hall was read, in which he pointed out his reasons for asking the city to pay his account of $550.00. The letter mentioned that in connection with the Canadian General and Quaker Oats assessment matters, in which he acted for the city, his claim was reduced from $500.00 to $300.00 in compliance with the request of the city. It further explained that the investigation was an attempt to attach liability to members of the police force on certain charges made, which were proved unfounded. The amount claimed is fair and just, considering the time and work involved and the importance of the issue, the letter concludes.

Ald. Stocker—"We didn't engage Mr. Hall to defend anybody."

Ald. Crowe — "It appears to me they could have informed the Council. Can they at any time order legal talent to conduct an investigation?"

Chairman Ald. Phelan—"I would think not."

Ald. Stocker—"The Utilities Commission always consult us. Out of common courtesy they should have obtained our permission."

Chairman Phelan—"Their expenditures are under our control."

Ald. Crowe—"That is all I want to know."

Ald. Stocker—"I move the communication be received."

Ald. Crowe—"I second that motion."

Ald. McIntyre — "I move an amendment to the motion in order that this matter may be left over so that the Chairman, Mayor and City Solicitor may make a report to the Council."

Mayor J. J. Turner seconded the amendment and the chairman explained that a committee had investigated and decided to take no action.

Ald. Stocker—"It seems funny if they can spend $500.00 whenever they like."

Chairman—"The Commission did the hiring and the bill was rendered to us a year or so later. I don't think we have to pay it."

Ald. Maher—"The Mayor at the time had no opportunity of saying yes or no."

Chairman—"If we establish a precedent and pay this bill, the Commission can at any time hire outside legal talent."

At this stage of the meeting Alderman Fife introduced an entirely new line of thought. He suggested that a compromise would have to be effected between the City Council and the Police Commission in order that both these bodies could give their best services to the public. These grievances that have developed between these two bodies the last year or so cannot be healed, unless a new leaf is turned over, so that we can co-operate, he concluded.

Ald. Stocker—"There is only one way we can get co-operation and we are settled on that point."

Ald. Crowe (to Ald. Fife)—"Did you ever try to co-operate with them?"

On the casting vote of Chairman Alderman Phelan, the motion carried and the communication was received.

Rotary Club Hats.

The Chairman pointed out that 100 big hats with Peterboro printed on the front of them were purchased and worn by the members in Toronto. He stated that the Rotarians, while not begging, were of opinion that the city should pay for them in view of the free advertising gained by the city as a result.

The members of the committee, after some hesitation, decided that the city should not bear the expense and no action was taken. A resolution to that effect carried unanimously.

On Wednesday evening the Parks Committee recommended that the Council rent that part of Riverside Park between the bridge and the ball grounds to the Maple Leaf Show for the week of July 7 to 12 for the purpose of conducting a carnival. A representative of the show obtained the approval of the Finance Committee last night so that he would be able to advertise and prepart for the occasion with an assurance that the matter would receive the Council's consent.

There were present at last night's meeting Alderman Phelan (chairman), Aldermen Morrison, McIntyre, Turner, Crowe and Fife.

Mark Street Social Was Well Attended

A very successful strawberry and ice cream social was held last evening in the grounds used as a rink by the residents of Mark street in East City, under the auspices of the various departments of the Mark street Methodist church. There was a good attendance during the evening. Rev. R. Bamforth, pastor of the church, acted as general convenor.

Mrs. A. Throop, president of the Ladies' Aid Society, had charge of the sale of home-made cooking, and the Sunday school department, in charge of the superintendent, Mrs. T. W. Oke, supervised the sale of ice cream, soft drinks and strawberries. Excellent music was provided during the evening by the band of the Salvation Army.

PUBLIC ADVISED TO BUY BERRIES

Local Growers and Retailers Consider Offerings of Next Monday and Wednesday Will be Best.

CROP IS ABUNDANT.

Strawberry growers and also the retail fruitmen offered the advice this morning that householders should not delay too long the purchase of whatever quantities of strawberries they require for preserving.

Monday and Wednesday will be the big "picking days," according to one informant, a retailer, who recalled that last year women held out for lower prices so long that the brief season had passed before they realised it, and they had to forego their usual preserving.

An Examiner reporter visited one of the largest strawberry patches in this district yesterday. One thousand boxes a day of select fruit is not an unusual production of this garden, and this season the crop is exceptionally heavy.

The owner turned back the second and third year bushes to expose the wealth of fruit still to ripen. Most of it seemed to be only beginning form.

"We should have berries for several weeks from the look of that," said the gardener, "but it all depends on the weather. If we get showers like those of the last week, our output should continue for some time; but a dry, hot spell will wither the crop."

Prices in the stores this morning were two boxes for 25 cents.

"That's the best we can do so far," said the retailer, "and I don't know that we will be able to do much better. My advice is to buy next week. Monday and Wednesday should be the big days. Of course, you never can tell what will happen. There might be a lot of berries shipped in here, and you cant tell what the local growers will do, but from experience and from the present outlook the people shouldn't lose anything by buying early next week and they will get the best of the fruit."

The Examiner's Stirling correspondent wrote that the price of the berries there had dropped on Thursday to three boxes for a quarter, "the lowest in several years."

BOATS COLLIDED IN TORONTO BAY

Panic Nearly Took Place on Steamer Modjeska, Which Was Bound For Hamilton With Excursion.

TORONTO, July 5.—(Canadian Press.)—When the steamer Toronto collided in Toronto bay with the steamer Modjeska, bound from Hamilton with a picnic party of women and children, a panic was nearly caused shortly after eight o'clock this morning. Passengers rushed for the life preservers and their screams could be heard ashore, but quiet was quickly restored when it was seen the boat was in no danger, although considerable damage was done. Both vessels are owned by the Canada Steamship Lines.

The Hamilton vessel was backing out from the slip at the foot of Yong street. The Toronto was turning about to proceed to the coal dock some distance west when she ran into the Modjeska, hitting her about fifteen feet from the stern. the bow of the larger ship driving in the timbers of the Modjeska and denting the side from top to a point near the water line. The boat was rocked to one side, women and children thrown about and the crew working in the holds were also tossed by the force of the impact. Both vessels stopped, the Toronto reversing and backing away from the Modjeska, which proceeded to her slip under her own power.

French Clinging to the Reparations Commission

PARIS, July 5. —(Canadian Press.)—The moral pact of continuous collaboration which Herriott announced he had brought back from his Chequers Court conference with the British Prime Minister seems to be already in a bad way. The most serious point of difference between the British and French viewpoints concern the identity of the body which is to decide when Germany shall have defaulted in her engagements.

The French newspapers refuse to admit that the proposals of the Dawes plan are outside the Versailles Treaty and declare that the British intention to replace the reparations commission by another body is unjustified, as is the British argument that French cling to reparations commission because they control it.

47 Tons of German Toys Shipped to the States

BROCKVILLE, July 5.—(Canadian Press).—Forty-seven tons of toys manufactured in Germany were taken aboard the freighter Brandon, in bond here, yesterday for transhipment at Chicago to St. Louis and other cities in the Western States. The goods were received at Maine Port and travelled over the C.P.R. to Brockville.

NEW POTATOES ARE COMING IN

Perhaps the most interesting factor in the local markets just at present is the fratifyingly low quotation on strawberries. Whether the fruit that have made the shortcake famous will descend any lower in price this season is problematical, but just at present they may be purchased much cheaper than at the same time last year.

Two boxes for a quarter is the regular charge although some stores are charging as high as 20 cents a box for big, red fruit.

The supply in local gardens is said to be exceptionally large this year. Evidently the retarded growth of the berries has flowered now into a real, rich harvest.

One of the local fruit stores has the advance guard of the cherry crop. "Sweet cherries" at 20 cents a pound are being sold. The first baskets from the Niagara district are expected next week.

A plentiful crop of new potatoes is also recorded in the district. The local supply, up to date, has been mainly recruited from the Niagara and Warkworth and Belleville sections. In the stores, 59c and 60c a peck is asked. A price of $5.00 per barrel is the wholesale quotation.

Cabbages from local gardens are also in the stores, and a few tomatoes from a district hothouse. Field tomatoes from the Leamington section nare expected in the city next week also, and there are green peas from Niagara. New beans have not yet made their appearance.

Gooseberries are a bright green reminder of summer, selling at 15 cents a quart. Imported plums and apricots and peaches have been joined by the latest arrival, pears, selling at a nickel apiece.

Canteloupes are slightly decreased in price, and there are pehpers from Mississippi and watermelon all the way from Georgia, at 1.50 to $2.25 apiece. Chard is 10 cents a bunch.

Prices of dairy products are firming up slightly, and there is a little advance in the wholesale prices of live and dressed hogs.

CHIEF NEWHALL ISSUES WARNING

Police Department Ready to Commence a Crusade Against Obnoxious Weeds.

During the past week some citizens learned that the Police Department had an earnest desire to enforce the City Dog By-law. As a result, last Thursday was proclaimed canine day and many prominent citizens were hailed into the police court.

Another such crusade against obnoxious weeds may be made in the near future and the public will not be able to offer as an excuse that they have not been notified or had no opportunity of abating the nuisance.

Chief Newhall stated that the department have kept tab on the neglected lots about the city, pointing out that the west part of the city was the worst in this regard.

It is a little early yet for prosecutions under the obnoxious weeds by-law as no harm can arise until the seeds have formed and begin to spread. However, it is the intention of the Chief to make a general clean-up, when the proper time comes and wishes the public to receive a warning before hand.

J. GATES FIRED SHOT

Borrowed Police Gun to Destroy Stray Dog From Ashburnham.

Armed with a revolver he borrowed from the police, James Gates took up the role of executioner yesterday, despatching the stray dog of which Rev. Mr. Bousfield had complained in police court.

"As soon as I read about it in the paper I went right over," he said. "That was the first I knew of it."

Mr. Gates finds that some dog owners resent his summer employment by the city. "They're getting saucy, that's what they are. You saw where I had forty up the other day, well there'll be another twenty right away unless they take out a license. Some of the first lot I warned twice, but they didn't pay any attention. Now, I'm giving the others fair warning to take out a license for their dogs. It makes it easier for me if they do, and besides I don't like to prosecute.

ST. JOHN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL AT PICNIC

Large Attendance and a Good Programme Provided.

St. John's annual Sunday School picnic for the main school was held yesterday afternoon at Nichol's Oval The weather was excellent, the attendance large and the spirit of fun and of good-will left nothing to be desired. A departure was made from the custom of previous years in two respects. Nichol's Oval was chosen because of its convenience and because of the advantages of the ground for a variety of games. Instead of the children bringing their own baskets as heretofore the Sunday school provided abundance of refreshments. The Commissariat was in charge of a committee consisting of Mrs. L. Deyman, as convenor, Miss Marjorie Turner and Miss Dorothy Ecobichon. This committee was supported by generous assistance from the church Women's Association and others who provided the cakes and other essentials as well as helping with the work of preparation and distribution. In fact almost the entire supply for the day was furnished by the church without cost to the Sunday school.

The Womens' Friendly Bible Class are to be specially mentioned in this connection. Prizes were secured by means of a gift from Mrs. A. E. Coulthard as well as contributions from Mr. F. S. Mann and Mr. C. Coleman. Sacks and rope were furnished by Mr. R. Denne and Mr. S. Coleman.

Part of the afternoon was spent in baseball and cricket. The Sunday school boys played the choir boys in cricket, the later winning 35 runs to 29 in six wickets. The following contests were in charge of Mr. Bert Graham who had to assist him Mr. F.S. Mann and Mr. J .Collis as starters and Mr. R. Carveth and Miss Helen Morphet as stoppers with Rev. M. R. Kingsford judging.

Girls and boys under 11 years engaged in a tug-of-war which was won by the girls. In a tugging contest between those over 11 years so great was the strain that the rope gave away and both sides won.

The prize winners are as follows:

Boys, 9 years, first, Max Comstock second, Gordon McIntyre.

Girls, 10 years, first, Helen Rogers, second, Alice Shurety.

Phospho-Cod The Quickest and Surest Way to Get Your Iron and Vitamines

One tablespoonful of PHOSPHO-COD contains as much iron as half a pound of Raisins or a quart of Spinach or a quarter of a pound of Carrots. It contains the extract of Cod Livers—the concentrated extract—not the greasy oil. This extract is like the extract of beef, it contains the essence, the concentrated, nourishing part. Cod Livers are the richest of all known substances in vitamines, and there is more concentrated energy in one tablespoonful of PHOSPHO-COD than in three cakes of yeast. In each tablespoonful of PHOSPHO-COD over one-third is Solution of Hypophosphites. Hypophospites contain other of the salts needed by the body, such as lime, sodium, potassium and Manganese. PHOSPHO-COD contains a liberal percentage of Glycerine which has been proven to be one of the most healing substances known to science, acting directly on inflamed or ulcerated membranes of the stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder as it does on the irritated surface of the skin. Glycerine and Rose Water as an external lotion has been used for generations to heal and soften milady's hands and face, and heal and soothe the irritated skin. Internally its action is the same on the bronchial tubes and throat, making it most valuable for coughs and colds. PHOSPHO-COD contains Wild Cherry extract, a splendid appetizing tonic made from the bark of the wild cherry tree, and it makes the delicate, picky appetite a thing of the past, and gives you a desire for food that is healthy and substantial. PHOPHO-COD contains Pepsin, which is the most valuable to all stomach remedies known to medical science, and helps you to digest the food you eat, reducing it to a liquid state, so that it can be assimilated into your blood to carry nourishment to every part of the body. From your blood your nerve power is born ,and through your nerves comes your happiness, ambition and power to do and to accomplish the full joy of living. PHOSPHO-COD contains ten drops of Port Wine in each tablespoonful; this is used to keep it from fermenting and also because Port Wine contains nourishment that is valuable in the process of making blood. These are a few of the reasons why you should get your Iron and Vitamines from PHOSPHO-COD in preference to any other way, because it contains more of them and costs you less for what it gives than any other method, product or preparation you can secure. Calvin Coolidge in a Serious Condition

WASHINGTON, July 5.—(United Press).—Calvin Coolidge, Jr., 16 years old, youngest son of the President and Mrs. Coolidge, lies in a hushed room in the White House fighting off the creeping threat of a dangerous attack of blood poisoning.

By the order of the President, no formal bulletins on his condition were issued by physicians, but it was understood to-day that the boy's serious condition has changed little during the night. It is believed that the crisis will be reached to-day.

Major Coupal, the White House physician, and Dr. Joel T. Boone, medical officer of the Mayflower, and a nurse were on duty at the bedside all night. There were signs of activity all through the early hours of the morning, and on several occasions Mr. Coolidge was seen walking restlessly.

World Tennis Title Won For Britian -- Big League Doubleheaders

KATHLEEN McKANE THRILLED SPECTATORS WHEN SHE TOOK WORLD TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP

SCORE WAS 4-6, 6-4, 6-4.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 5.—(Canadian Press).—The tennis title that Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, the French star, has held against all the world since the close of the war, passed yesterday afternoon to a British champion, Miss Kathleen McKane, when in a magnificent, thrilling match, she triumphed by a narrow margin over the champion woman player of the United States, Miss Helen Wills. The score was 4-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Mlle. Lenglen had reached the semi-finals in the Wimbledon tournament but was forbidden by her doctors to continue further play and thus was unable to defend her title.

Miss McKane, to win the championship yesterday, had to make an uphill struggle, as Miss Wills, after taking the first set, led in the second at 4 games to 1. When her cause became desperate, Miss McKane was wise enough to throw aside the conservative methods and caution that usually characterize her play. Venturing everything, she abandoned the back court and rushed to the net at every opportunity, gaining her end for 5 games in succession, and with them won the second set.

Miss Wills fought doggedly for every point, but she fought cautiously and caution could not avail against Miss McKane when she was taking brave risks and succeeding with them. In the final set the United States champion won what seemed to be the critical fifth game, and led at three games to two, but the British woman would not be denied her victory. Once more she evened the score, passed her rival, and then won out.

From the back of the court, the strokes and strategy of the two players seemed equally effective. Miss Wills, perhaps, got off more brilliant shots than the British girl, who lacks the strength of arm that she possesses. It was Miss Wills who was forcing the pace most of the time, but it was Miss McKane who got about the court faster. And this was an important advantage, for each of them saw to it that the other kept running from one side of the court to the other.

Passing shots of rare beauty and fine nicety of execution were frequent off the racquets of both players. From mid-court each drove furiously, thrusting long shots close to the side-lines and corners with a sureness of aim that seemed much like that of Mlle. Lenglen, who was well enough to watch from the stands.

But it was at the net that Miss McKane was superior. That was enough to defeat the young Californian.

Ever restrained, or seeming so, Miss Wills played safe in her volleying. She slapped at the ball too softly, and the fleet-footed British player was often able to reach it on the bounce and return it. On the other hand, when Miss McKane got possession of the fore-court and smashed a return she smashed to kill, and Miss Wills was seldom able even to get her racquet near the hard-hit ball.

Both players called upon their best strokes and used all their speed in keeping the battle one of real championship calibre. Miss McKane yesterday was Miss McKane at her very best, and Miss Wills was much better than she had ever before been in her six weeks on British courts. At times she was close to the very height of her best game.

INDIANS TROUNCED LAKEFIELD OUTFIT

Red Skins Were Unbeatable and Turned in a Sparkling Game Both at Bat and on the Field.

LAKEFIELD, July 5.—In an East Peterboro League game played last evening in Lakefield, the Curve Lake Indians, with healthy war clubs, battered the Lakefield crew all over the field and won handily by the score of 13 to 3. It was the best game of the season. They were going at a whirlwind speed and nothing could check them. They turned in the nicest fielding game ever seen in Lakefield, and the large crowd that turned out to see the game were well pleased and will be talking about the wonderful catches the Indians made for the next couple of months. Lakefield were severely handicapped by the loss of several players who were ill and unable to take part in the game. Doughty, on the mound for them, was hit hard and often by the Indians, but had his team-mates given him any support the game would have been much closer. Madden Taylor, who pitched for the Indians, turned in a nice game. He had a great number of strikeouts, and the few hits that he was touched for were kept well scattererd. The Indians got the drop on the Lakefield crew when they scored two in the first inning and six in the second, while they blanked the northerners in the first two innings and allowed them two in the third. The Indians went scoreless in the third and fourth, but netted three in the fifth and two in the sixth, while Lakefield came through with one lone tally in the fifth.

The teams lined up as follows:

Umpires—Sam Taylor at the plate and Dr. Gibson on the bases.

Score by innings:

ENGLAND'S OLYMPIC HOPEFULS

On the track in the past, the British have as a rule, shone best in the longer distances, but this year they are pinning most of their hopes to winning in the sprints.

In the quarter mile one of the best in the island, is Guy Butler, who as a school boy, won in 1919 in less than 50 seconds. He is now stronger than when at school and is expected to give a good account of himself.

H. B. Stallard, who did such wonders in 1921 as a runner in the 1500-meter races, is again Britain's best bet. However, Stallard has been so busy going after a doctor's degree that he may have gone stale as a runner.

Two Cambridge students, D. G. Lowe and E. D. Mountain, will enter for the 800-meter races. They have good records at colleges as runners. In the hurdles F. G. Gaby, at present British champion, and L. F. Partridge are the two men most likely entries for big honors.

In the field events the best English bet is M. C. Nokes, who is claimed to be a wonder with the hammer throwing game.

As in previous international contests the British will in most of their hopes to H. M. Abrahams, who is the greatest sprinter and long jumper in the country.

YANKEES LOST $50,000 PLAYER THROUGH SLIDE

Outfielder Combs Injured When He Started a Late Slide For First.

DANGEROUS PLAY.

A belated slide has, for the time being, robbed the New York Americans of the services of one of the greatest young players to break into the majors in years.

I have reference to Outfielder Earl Combs, for whom the Yankees paid something like $50,000 last winter to the Louisville club of the American Association.

Recently in a game at Cleveland he started a late slide into the plate, his spikes caught, and his leg was so badly injured that it was necessary to carry him off the field.

* * *

The feet-first slide is a dangerous play unless perfectly executed. Done improperly, it invariably results in injury.

A majority of players find it necessary to slow up a bit prior to the slide, so they may properly position themselves before hitting the dirt.

Of all the great base runners I have ever seen in action, Cobb, I believe, is the only one to start his slide at full speed.

Most necessary of all, in order to get the full advantage of the slide, is to properly gauge the distance. It is imperative that the runner go into the bag at full speed, and yet be able to so hook into the base that he will not overslide.

* * *

The late slide is the bugbear of baseball. It means that the player must hit the dirt without giving thought to distance and position. Usually the spikes catch in the turf and the player suffers a leg injury.

* * *

Combs could have scored standing up. In running to the plate he so judged the play that he did not believe it necessary to slide. One of his teammates, thinking Combs was to be thrown out, yelled slide as he was almost on the plate.

Seeking to obey orders, he slid into the plate late, didn't have time to rate his speed or distance and, as a result, will probably be out the rest of the season.

* * *

His loss, coming at a time when his services are badly needed, will be sorely felt by the New York club. A fine fielder, very fast, and a great hitter, Combs would have been a regular from the start on any club other than the Yankees.

* * *

Joining a club that had won a pennant and a world series, it was only natural that he didn't have much of a chance to break into the lineup, despite his admitted ability.

Baseball managers are superstitious. They follow precedent closely. Seldom will they tempt fate.

Working along these lines, Miller Huggins started the season with the lineup that had won for him a world's championship. That's merely common sense.

The suspension of Bob Meusel gave Earl Combs his big chance. Had he not been injured he would have been rated a star by the close of the season.

* * *

Perhaps, some time, someone will invent a substitute for the spike, which although necessary to the game is the cause of many serious injuries.

WAS DEFEATED.

LIGHTER BALL IN GOLF PLAY BY NEXT YEAR

U. S. Will Adopt Lighter and Bigger Missile For Tournaments.

SUCCESS DOUBTFUL.

Hight Scorers Like to Swat the Smaller Pill With Its Long Yardage.

The bigger and lighter golf ball will cease to be a conversational subject after the current season. By spring it will be a reality, and in the major tournaments next year it will be compulsory. This much was admitted by an official of the U.S.G.A. in the writer's presence at Detroit three week ago, says Joe Williams.

Among the great army of duffers there is no plaintive plea for a change. The habitually high scorers rather like the smaller, far-flying sphere which yields them amazing yardage, when a good hit is registered. Even the promise that the new ball will simplify the hit because it is bigger and therefore easier to "get up" leaves them cold and singularly unmoved. At best the duffer doesn't get a very long hit off the tee, or with his in-between shots, and any change in balls designed to curtail distance is not likely to win

Luckily the duffer may do as he pleases about the new ball. He isn't good enough to play in the major tournaments and the U.S.G.A. explains its stand on the grounds that the balls are getting more lively each year, and that a stop must be made somewhere in order to preserve the original character and purpose of the present courses.

However, it is by no means positive that the bigger and lighter ball will solve the problem. Being lighter it will not fly as far, naturally, but whether it will be satisfactory in other respects is questionable. It would have been interesting to study the characteristics of the new ball in the open championship at Oakland Hills recently when the wind blew a stiff gale across the course. Few of the stars could control the heavy ball in the wind, and none of the leaders was able to equal par on the day of the finals. With a light, short-flying ball many of them might still be trying to finish, and the scores would, we fear, have mounted into the hundreds.

Be that as it may, the cloth has been cut, and the new ball is definitely on its way. It may turn out to be just the thing the doctor ordered, and again it may be an awful bust.

BETHANY TEAM WON.

Nestleton, in the East Durham League, Lost 9 to 4.

BETHANY, July 5.—The Bethany baseball team treated the Nestleton nine to another defeat in the East Durham League on Thursday evening. The issue was never in doubt Bethany practically scoring at will. The final stood 9 to 4 in favor of the home team. Ryley for Bethany ptiched a good game and was never in trouble and air tight support behind him would have left the score shorter for Nestleton. The pitcher for the visiting team worked under a heavy handicap a boil being noticed on the back of his neck and under the circumstances he did remarkably well.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

MRS. WOODCHUCK MAKES MUSH

"My, my! I never knew that corn meal swelled up so."

"Please give me ten cents worth of corn meal," said Mrs. Woodchuck, waddling into the little store in the woods.

"Certainly, ma'am," said Nick. "Here's a nice package already put up, and it's just ten cents."

"Then I'll take it," said Mrs. Woodchuck. "These children of mine have such big appetites I can't fill them. I'm going to fatten them up and then let them seek their own fortunes in the world. Corn meal mush, I hear, is very good. I read it in the newspaper last night."

So away waddled Mrs. Woodchuck carrying her corn meal under her arm.

"I'll make a lot and it will last awhile," she remarked to herself when she got home, and putting on her kitchen apron she got out the biggest kettle she could find.

Indeed, it was so big that the groundhog lady made her apple butter in it in the fall, and she also used it for making bread each week.

And, indeed, it was whispered around through the Green Woods and the Meadow that on wash-days the neighbors heard Mrs. Woodchuck getting out her big kettle and putting it away again. Do you suppose she could have used it for a wash-tub, too?

Well, anyway, she hauled out her great big kettle and filled it with water and put it on the stove and when it started to boil, she slowly stirred in the whole 10-cent box of corn meal.

Pretty soon the corn meal began to swell, and it went blup, blup, making big bubbles on top that burst with a splash as much as to say, "Stand away, everybody, we need more room."

Mrs. Woodchuck began to notice that the mush was clear up to the top of the kettle and running over the edge.

"My, my! I'll have to get another kettle!" she cried. "If I don't I'll have corn meal mush all over my clean stove."

So she ladled out about half the kettleful into another pan and then she had two kettles on the stove.

Blup, blup, blup! they went, the two kettles of mush did, and the first thing she knew, the mush was up to the top of both of them, and starting to boil over like everything.

"Oh, Wally, run and borrow Mrs. Bunny's kettle. Hurry!" cried Mrs. Woodchuck," or my stove will be ruined."

So away went Wally and came back with Mrs. Bunny's kettle.

Mrs. Woodchuck ladled out the mush until Mrs. Bunny's kettle was full, too. And then there were three kettles on the stove boiling and going blup, blup, blup, all over everything.

"My, my! I never knew that corn meal swelled up so," cried Mrs. Woodchuck. "Why, I do believe it's still rising. I'll have to get another kettle. Wobbly, run and get Mrs. Muskrat's kettle at once."

Wobbly did. But still it was not enough. And before the afternoon was over, Mrs. Woodchuck had every kettle in the Green Woods and the Meadow full of mush. And not only the stove but the tables and sink and chairs were covered.

And there were pans to set it out in to cool. They had to be borrowed, too.

Such a time! And such a lot of mush! Mrs. Woodchuck couldn't turn her children out into the world at all after that. She had to keep them at home all summer to eat up all the mush.

Long, long ago Barbara wanted to be a dancer. She was only seven then but when she grew older she went in for professional dancing, and the leading stages and ball rooms of the country knew her well.

Then Became Writer

It was about that time that Miss La Marr decided to become a writer of fiction. She wrote. And because she had something to say, because she knew life as it had been opened to her during her dancing career editors bought what she wrote, and asked for more.

For now Barbara had decided to become an actress. Strange, indeed it had not occurred to her before. Dancers usually go into the movies.

Authors Should be Homely

The Fox company, that had sponsored her first venture as a writer of scenarios, now sponsored her film debut, and like Barbara's other careers—what a past this woman has!—it began auspiciously. So auspiciously, in fact, that after Barbara played with Anita Stewart in "Harriet and the Piper," Douglas Fairbanks selected her for a part in his "Three Musketeers."

BARBARA LA MARR and RAMON NOVARRO in "Thy Name is Woman," at the Capitol, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Rex Ingram saw her in this production, and with his uncanny gift for picking embryo stars, picked Barbara. She played Antoinette de Mauban in Ingram's production of "The Prisoner of Zenda," and the Metro director was so pleased that he allotted her the leading feminine role in "Trifling Women." Since then she has appeared in Reginald Barker's "The Eternal Struggle," and Fred Niblo's "Strangers of the Night," Metro pictures that established her among the leading favorites of the screen.

Reverse the Parts

It is a coincidence that now brings together as co-featured players in Fred Niblo's production of "Thy Name is Woman," two who made their first bid for film fame from obscurity in that Ingram production of "The Prisoner of Zenda." With Miss La Marr in that picture was Ramon Novarro, who played Rupert of Hentzau. The pair who gained fame as villainous conspirators now appear as hero and heroine—the romantic Spanish lovers of the new Niblo picture.

It will be shown here next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Capitol Theatre.

AT THE ROYAL.

SNAPPY COMEDY FEATURE FOR THE ROYAL MONDAY

Engaging Personality and Record for Clean Living Makes Him Popular Everywhere.

Bryant Washburn has achieved a life-long ambition—to star in his own productions—and his first offering is "Try and Get it."

Mr. Washburn is probably one of the most popular stars in the world to-day; his engaging personality, record for clean living, and for consistently good work, all have won for him a host of admirers who will go to see a picture in which he appears, no matter at what trouble or expense.

In this picture, which will be shown at the Royal Theatre for three days beginning next Monday, he is cast in a role that fits him down to the ground—that of a young chap who is set out to collect a bill which is a standing joke around the office. Though he is a mild-mannered individual he has stick-to-it-iveness to a degree, and the result is he wins out where others, more aggressive, fail.

Mr. Washburn is half Danish and half own East Yankee. He tried farming as a boy but finally got a job as an usher in the old Chicago opera house and later a position as "walking gentleman" in a play with George Fawcett as star. Afterwards he was in stock and finally entered pictures via Essanay.

His greatest hit in those days was in "Skinner's Dress Suit." Finally he starred with Paramount, and after that went to England and made an independent production, "The Road to London." Since then he has been free-lancing, and now he has his own organization, and is happy.

British Round the World Airman Reaches Japan.

TOKIO, July 5.—(United Press.) The British round the world amphibian plane, piloted by Major Stuart MacLaren, arrived in Japan to-day. Thousands of people were along the water front at Kagoshima as the big plane came roaring out from the China coast and cheered the aviators as their plane settled gracefully on the water.

An elaborate programme of entertainment has been prepared for MacLaren and his companions.

SUMMER CAMPERS LIKE BRAUNDPORT

Several Camps Have Been Opened Up—Meetings Sunday.

BRAUNDPORT, July 5. — The influx of summer campers is again making Braundport lively. There are two camps on the south side and one camp over the brook.

Sergeant-Major R. C. Braund, of the Salvation Army, will be in charge. Everybody is welcome. Come in cars or in boats.

LINDSAY HOLDING A LARGE PICNIC

LINDSAY, July 5. — Everybody and his aunt, left town this afternoon for Long Beach, to the big picnic held in conection with the Old Home Week celebration. A half holiday has been proclaimed, and the town was practically deserted.

A big baseball tournament, band competition, open to bands in the county, and a list of other events, as long as a school Christmas programme, were the features.

The attendance at the big tattoo last night was attended by thousands and the gate reecipts together with the big gate expected at the races on Saturday, will, it is expected, enable the committee to break even.

The visit of the Peterborough Council on Thursday was considered a very graceful act, and one greatly appreciated by the executive.

WILL PREPARE VOTERS' LISTS

Municipal Clerks Notified to Prepare For a Referendum.

TORONTO, July 5. — (Canadian Press). — Information forthcoming from authoritative Toronto sources yesterday, and confirmed by despatches from Western Ontario municipalities, indicate that Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, Minister of Health and Labor, knew what he was talking about when in a North-West Toronto by-election speech he prophesied an O.T.A. plebiscite in the near future.

It was learned yesterday that notices have been sent out from Queen's Park to clerks of the various municipalities to print Part 3 of the voters' lists, which in semi-officials quarters was accepted as certain intimation that the prebiscite is to be held very soon. It is a notice for the customary revision of the lists made just prior to the vote, and the liquor plebiscite is the guess of those officials who ought to know.

Although official announcement of the date and the manner the vote would be expected simultaneously with the order for preparation of the voting lists, none was forthcoming from Parliament Buildings yesterday. Premier Ferguson, from whom such an announcement would undoubtedly come, was out of the city all day, having made the trip the night before to his home in Kemptville to attend to some private business. Attorney-General Nickle had nothing to say on the subject in the afternoon, and at night he too was on board a train bound for Kingston. Dr. Forbes Godfrey said he didn't know a thing about it.

Good Weather To-day For Olympic Finals

COLOMBES, France, July 5. — (Canadian Press).—Though the sky was partly overcast to-day it dawned bright with the prospect of good weather this afternoon for the first time in four days to favor the ceremonies which formally open the eighth modern Olympic games in the Colombes stadium.

Flags fluttered early in picturesque Colombes, the Olympic village where most of the forty-five national teams entered in where the big games are quartered, while workmen were busily engaged in applying the finishing touches on the mammoth stadium and bedecking it in the colors of all nations in anticipation of the day's formalities, which form a prelude to the track and field championships starting there to-morrow and continuing for eight days.

ON THE HIGH SEAS IN A 16-FOOT BOAT!

There aren't many who would relish a 1,000-mile ocean voyage in a 16-foot open motor boat. But Linden B. Pentz and wife of Seattle, do. They are making the trip from Seattle to Skagway, Alaska, now. It was all planned as an outing for their six-months-old daughter Jean. She, of course, is accompanying them, and sleeping in a non-sinkable crib amidship. "Seragro," the goat that will furnish fresh milk for Baby Jean; ....."No-See-Um," the cat, and "Sourdough," the dog, make up the rest of the crew for the trip.

STRAWBERRIES VERY PLENTIFUL

Early Fruits and Flowers Are at Their Peak—New Potatoes on Sale.

BUSY MARKET.

The ladies on the farmers' market have taken a tip from the florists. They are binding their frail white and pink roses with heavy copper wire to keep the stems standing up straight and tall. Strands of the cruel wires crossed the heart of a big cream rose this morning, and led down around the thin stems. There was a riot of flowers on sale to-day. Crimson velvet, sweet williams, pure white peonies and bunches of feathery-edged white pinks, Canterbury bells, delicate massed baby's breath, or gypsophila, wild carnations, and bright yellow, fragrant cinnamon roses, tempt passers-by with their loveliness. Snapdragon plants could be purchased at 15c a box.

There were plenty of strawberries on the open market this morning, selling generally at two boxes for a quarter. New potatoes were having a brisk sale also at 60c a peck, although the old spuds at 45c a peck or $2 a bag, were in good demand also. Lettuce and peas, the latter asking 25c for three quarts, were selling well, and there were fresh-looking new small carrots, at 10c a bunch, and new beets at 3 for a quarter.

A couple of loads of hay on the open market were selling at $17 a load.

A gentleman with a heavy crop of curly hair, and a pinkish fluid that he guaranteed as a hair grower of much worth, had an interested audience.

In a covered box near one of the carts was a lady Pekin duck, mourning for her lost family of eight ducklings, departed by various ways out into the world, far from her enquiring eye, to those who bartered two bits apiece for their possession. Tiny white Leghorn chicks were 15c each.

Upstairs butter was scarce, and eggs were not as plentiful as of late. Butter sold from 30c to 32c a pound and eggs were up slightly in price also. The highest quotation was 30c a dozen, 27 and 28 being the usual demand, with one woman asking 23c.

Small, toothsome-looking spring chickens weer 45 and 50c a pound, and older birds ranged in price from 20 to 23c. Duck at one side of the hall was 35c a pound, selling across the way for 20c.

There are 95 different kinds of Brussels sprouts, 120 kinds of lettuce, and 194 varieties of carrots.

GRAVEN GRANITE HAS NORWOOD'S SERVICE SCROLL

Twenty-Six Names of Men Who Died in War on Memorial.

UNVEILED SUNDAY

Impressive Ceremony Attended by Throngs From Village and District.

Norwood closed the book of her war record Sunday afternoon with a concluding retrospective chapter in the unveiling of an imposing granite shaft inscribed with the names of her twenty-six sons, who gave their lives in loyal service to their country.

Only sweet remembrance remains, and grief which time is moderating and healing; the twin friends, memory and grief, softened by mingled feelings of pride and gratitude and the reflected glory of the immortal valor of these dead and that of the legions of their ghostly comrades.

And those memories were stripped of the mists which ten years have gathered, trooping back sharply and poignantly under the emotion of the climacteric incident of yesterday's ceremony, the calling of the honor roll by Col. T. J. Johnston, the organizer and commander of the 93rd battalion. The rest was anti-climax, the actual unveiling, the dedication and the volleyed musketry of the Last Post.

Amid an accentuating silence Col. Johnston loudly and slowly called out the names engraved in the flinty, polished faces of the stone, each name momentarily evoking memories and mental pictures that flashed back to vivid incidents of those too brief lives. To mothers it may have been a glimpse of the last parting or perhaps of a lisping in the long ago; to companions some episode of sport, some prank of mischief, or an experience of those later days in France. To fathers, to sisters and brothers what thoughts came back to them as Col. Johnston in stentorian tones seemed to call out those names as if they were again personified and with their fellows in the wraptly attentive crowd.

The names Norwood has perpetuated under the caption "Our Honored Dead," are: George Townshend, Robert Chamberlain, Russell Scriver, Ezeric Aboud, Karn Hendren, A. Theodore Burgess, David Brooks, Joseph Kelly, Arthur Parcels, Wm. J. White, Edward Grout, Michael Noyes, Jacob Quackenbush, Wm. Starkey, Sidney White, Russell Pearce, Eric Alley, Henry Murphy, Herbert J. Stuart, Walter Brett, Thomas E. Cross, Louis G. Beckett, John F. Rathwell, T. Arthur Searight, Elias Cross and Robert A. Leeper.

The monument, which cost $2,100, raised by public subscription, stands twelve feet high on a newly terraced slope at the head of Colborne street. Its gracefully tapered top is surmounted by the figure of a torch cast in bronze symbolizing the sacred trust of freedom for which these men died, preserving it as a flaming heritage for future generations of Canadians to keep burning with undiminished fire.

On the frontal face of the monument are these legends, "Through Sacrifice They Gave Their To-day For Our To-morrow," and "Perpetuating the Memory and in Honor of All Those Who Carried on in the Great War from the Village of Norwood."

A Decade Recalled.

The list also includes the names of men who went from farms in the vicinity of the village, and as a further tribute to the little company of twenty-six it was stated that all of them were recruits. To a man they

ALBANY, July 7.—One of the strangest deaths recorded by Division of Vital Statistics of the state Department of Health is that of a man of seventy-nine who died recently from shock caused by a cricket dropping into his mouth.

It was explained he was in the habit of taking an afternoon nap under a tree.

He slept with his mouth open and the cricket fell in.

CONFERENCE IS NAMED FAILURE

SAYS PARTY FIRST

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, July 7.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuters):—Commenting on the proposed round-table conference of representatives of the Dominions selected from both governments and oppositions, the Cape Times says:

"Frankly we see many difficulties looming before the problem is satisfactorily settled. None of them is insuperable but has not J. H. Thomas (British Colonial Secretary) need lessly increased the intricacies of his task by the thoughtless tone of his allusions to previous imperial conferences?"

The Times considers that Mr. Thomas falsely and ungenerously implies that previous conferences have been partisan assemblies incapable of subordinating the interests of party politics to the interests of the Empire. The Times adds that this comes with singularly bad grace from a minister whose government has just given a supremely bad example of failure to put imperial interests before party obligations and does not suggest that the proposed conference will achieve much more impartiality than its "less spectacular predecessors."

ATTEMPT MADE TO WRECK C.P. TRAIN

Only Damage Done Was Several Broken Fish Plates or Angle Bars.

OTTAWA, July 7. — An attempt to wreck or derail the Waltham-Ottawa train on the Pontiac C. P. R. line, about 30 miles west of Ottawa failed last evening when the engineer of the train ran over and broke three fish plates or angle bars which had been placed across the track.

When the train arrived here the fish plates were placed in the possession of the C. P. R. officers, and following a report which was made by the train crew it is understood that an investigation is to be made by the railway company.

PROGRAMME OF PROGRESSIVES IS CONCLUDED

Short Session Needed to Choose Candidate and Adopt Platform.

BACK LAFOLLETTE

Communism Ousted From Convention With Those Who Followed It.

CLEVELAND, O., July 7 (Canadian Press). — After endorsing Robert M. Lafollette as a presidential candidate and providing for the organisation of a new political party next January, the Conference for Progressive Political Action wound up its convention early on Saturday.

The conference empowered its national committee to select a vice-presidential candidate after a conference with the "Lafollette for President" committee.

Lafollette was endorsed as candidate on his own platform. The convention then adopted for itself a platform embodying the ideas contained in the Wisconsin document and in the statement of principles issued at the St. Louis session of the conference last February.

Repeatedly, on Saturday as on Friday, the name "Lafollette" was the signal for an outburst of cheering and applause.

All elements in the convention were intent on showing they were back of Lafollette's candidacy.

After losing a fight before the organisation committee for immediate formation of a new party, the Socialists, led by Morris Hilquitt, of New York, were the first to second the endorsement report.

The Farmer-Labour Party elements who backed Perley Christiansen in the 1920 campaign, and who also had urged the "Third Party ideas," then rallied to the support of Lafollette as an independent, Abraham Lefkowitz, New York, being their spokesman.

Speaking for the women of the convention, Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, daughter of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, pre-Civil War suffrage advocate, urged all members of her sex to work for the election of the Wisconsin Senator.

The railroad brotherhoods and the other trades union delegates spoke through the chairman of the committee, E. J. Manion, president of the Railway Telegraphers, and reinforced his word with a mighty "Aye" when the report was adopted.

No sooner was the convention ended than the national committee and the State delegates groups gathered to plan for the campaign.

The committee decided to rely upon popular subscriptions for its campaign funds and delegates were directed to get machinery under way for circulating Lafollette ballot petitions and to collect money.

Campaign Started.

National campaign headquarters probably will be established in Chicago. It was explained that liaison could be readily maintained there with Representative John M. Nelson of Wisconsin, who will be Lafollette's personal campaign manager, directing his activities from Chicago.

By the organisation committee report, the national committee of the Conference was continued in office, directed to enlarge its membership to at least 50 ,and empowered to act as a campaign committee.

It is to direct the conference activities not only on the national ticket, but also was ordered to cooperate for the election to Congress, State Legislature, and other offices of all candidates "pledged to the interests of the producing classes and to the principles of genuine democracy in government."

The platform approved yesterday was in accord with the expressed views of Senator Lafollette on the political situation. The initial plank pledged "use of the power of the Federal Government to crush private monopoly, not to foster it."

Specific recommendations for the repeal of the Ench-Cummings Act, public ownership of railroads and water power, and for retention of surtaxes on "swollen incomes," were in line with the position taken in Congress by Lafollette and the other Republican insurgents.

There was no specific reference to Prohibition or the Ku Klux Klan. There was a plank, however, for "unqualified enforcement of the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech, press and assemblage."

Convention leaders emphasised that the movement represented here was concerned with economic issues rather than with questions affecting personal liberty.

Just at the close of the convention the organisation slapped the Communists again by refusing to entertain a resolution which would have favoured recognition of the Russian Soviet. Earlier the delegates had approved the action of the Credentials Committee in refusing to seat William Mahoney of St. Paul because of his connection with the National Farmer-Labour Party, formed last month in St. Paul with Communistic elements as units therein. This virtually read Mahoney out of the conference organisation and cancelled his membership in its national committee.

DEMOCRATS IN CONVENTION MAKE HISTORY IN AMERICAN POLITICS

NEW YORK, July 7. — With the sessions of last week and its adjournment until to-day the Democratic Convention has broken all records for duration, starting this morning on its thirteenth working day.

The two which have most nearly equalled it were the conventions of 1912, at Baltimore, and 1920, at San Francisco. The 1912 convention opened June 25, and adjourned at five minutes before two in the morning of July 3rd, its ninth day. The 1920 convention opened June 28th, and adjourned in the afternoon of July 6th, its ninth day.

SOME CONVENTION RECORDS.

In 1900, Bryan was nominated on the first ballot.
In 1908 Bryan was nominated on first ballot.

Those two historic fights had certain features in common with the one that is raging in Madison Square Garden, as well as some important differences.

At Baltimore, the situation from the beginning indicated a long fight, or a deadlock, as clearly as it did here. The principal candidates were Champ Clark, Woodrow Wilson, Gov. Judson P. Harmon, of Ohio and Oscar Underwood.

On the first ballot Clark received 440 votes; Wilson 324, Underwood 117 1-2 and Harmon 148. For a long time the monotonous yet tense routine of ballot taking went on, with no decisive change. After an all-night session, June 27-28, party managers declared it was unlikely that either Clark or Wilson, could get two-thirds. On June 29th, Clark had a majority but not enough. On the forty-third ballot Illinois went over to Wilson, then Virginia and West Virginia, and the landslide began. Just before the forty-sixth ballot, Underwood's name was withdrawn. On the forty-sixth ballot, Wilson received 990 and Clark 84.

THE 1920 CONVENTION.

At the 1920 convention there were fourteen regular candidates, and six or seven dark horses. Among the names presented were those of A. Mitchell Palmer, William Gibbs McAdoo, Thomas R. Marshall, Senator Owen of Oklahoma, and Governor Alfred E. Smith.

On the first ballot Cox had 134, McAdoo 266, Palmer 256, Smith 109, Governor Edwards of New Jersey 42, Senator Owen 33, Vice-President Marshall 35.

Cox gained fast at first and on the twelfth ballot passed McAdoo, but on the thirtieth, McAdoo regained his lead and kept it until the thirty-ninth when the final swing to Cox began. On the lats ballot Cox had 732½ votes and McAdoo 267.

In the present convention there have been 77 ballots taken with the candidates not very far from where they started.

LOST HER EYE IN COLLISION

DRIVER ON BAIL.

An auto smash-up with disastrous results occurred on Chemong Road, shortly before eleven o'clock on Saturday evening.

A touring car with six passengers, driven by Clarence Bacon, 256 Wescott street, was struck by a coupe, driven by Walter Belleghem. The two cars met at about the middle of the big hill, south of the Fourth Line of Smith, on Chemong Road, the touring car ascending and the other descending the hill. They met almost head on and the large car with its occupants were hurled into the ditch. The occupants were Clarence Bacon, Mrs. Rogers, 175 Lake street, her three children, Miss Celia Rogers and a small boy and girl and a niece, Miss Marie Kearny.

Miss Celia Rogers and Miss Marie Kearny were the most seriously injured. Miss Rogers is now in St. Joseph's Hospital and it was necessary to perform an operation on her eye later on Saturday night. Her condition is serious but not critical. Miss Kearny was cut on the neck and was in bed, suffering from the shock of the accident yesterday. Stitches were necessary to close the wound.

Mr. Fred Flagherty brought the two injured young ladies to the home of Mrs. T. Bacon, 250 Wescott street after the accident. Mrs. Bacon in relating the story of the accident to the Examiner said that Miss Rogers was a pitiable sight.

Dr. R. Scott was summoned and shortly after Dr. O'Brien arrived with Clarence Bacon, whose wounds on the arm and hand, had been dressed by him. After Miss Kearny was treated Miss Rogers was removed to the hospital and Dr. C. C. Craig was called in.

The two children fortunately escaped with minor injury. The little boy sustained a black eye, but Mrs. Rogers is suffering from a bruised forehead and an injured ankle, and is under Dr. R. Scott's care. She was in a weakened state yesterday, as a result of the accident.

Mr. Belleghem was accompanied by a lady passenger, who escaped injury.

Shortly after the occupants had

MUIR HANGING UP TO CABINET

Ottawa Officials Considering Case of Young New Yorker Convicted There.

EXECUTION FRIDAY.

OTTAWA, July 7. — Facing the gallows on July 11, or a commutation of sentence to life imprisonment, the fate of Walter Muir, the New York youth found guilty of murder, is in the hands of the Cabinet.

But the young man is not likely to know the decision until a few hours before the time for the hanging. Only on rare occasions are reprieves made known more than a few hours ahead of time.

The New York society women who sent word to the Canadian capital that they were to interview the Cabinet in session will find the door closed if they arrive. The Dominion Cabinet does not receive deputations.

Victim's Friends Firm.

Messages were received late Saturday from friends of the man Muir killed, asking that sentence be carried out, but the entire situation is in the hands of Minister of Justice Lapointe. He told the correspondent that every possible consideration is being given the Muir case.

Still Hope For Him.

From officials closely in touch with the Minister of Justice and members of the Cabinet, it is learned that, as the result of much pressure, there is every possibility of Muir getting a favorable decision from the Cabinet and that it is unlikely he will mount the gallows at Valleyfield next Friday.

Muir's case has aroused interest throughout Canada. In provinces where a move is being made to have Government liquor control his case is being held up as an example of what may be expected if those provinces vote wet.

FRANKNESS IS ASSURANCE OF ENTENTE PEACE

FIGHTS CALUMNY

Would Set Example of a Government Keeping the Promises It Made.

TROYES, France, July 7.—(Canadian Press.—Premier Herriot yesterday defended his policy of frankness and good will in dealing with the British Prime Minister, Ramsay MacDonald, at Chequers Court and questioned the wisdom of those among the French who thought that the British Premier had taken advantage of the French Premier's inexperience. He reassured the country as to the Government's programme, declaring that his Socialistic ideals must necessarily be erected on the solid foundation of a balanced budget.

"We Republicans," he added, need no lesson in patriotism."

The Government's platform, continued the Premier, will be based on the rehabilitation of French credit and efforts for European peace.

M. Herriot spoke before the Radical Socialist organizations in Troyes, where he had his early education. He recalled memories of his father and mother who had died humbly after lives of hard work. He justified his new methods as entitled to a trial. The Government should not be expected "to discover in a few weeks, after so many disillusions, the miraculous solutions that so far no one else has found."

Then he asked his hearers to deal with facts sanely.

Campaign of Calumny.

There was a campaign of calumny against his government, asserted the Premier, and added: "We have committed no imprudent act against public credit, and we will commit none. Nevertheless a formidable task full of perils has been imposed upon us. But we will be firm in our fight, because our conscience is clear."

He reminded those assembled that his government, now three weeks old, has declared for "frankness, rather than cleverness," and would not repudiate its principles, but stand or fall with them.

"I wish to set an example," he continued, "of a government whose members keep the promises which they made when they were in opposition ,or when they solicited the votes of the people."

The experts' report had been accepted by the Poincare Government and it could not have been otherwise, "because it represents to-day our best chance of payment."

The plan, he argued, nevertheless, would require the solution of a number of problems, so that an agreement between the governments was urgent because of the precarious nature of the "Micum" industrial conventions in the Ruhr. Therefore the re-establishment of an Inter-Allied accord, and particularly an Anglo-French accord, was required ,and it was for these purposes that he went on his mission to Chequers.

"For this," he said, "we have been reproached; but we will never disavow it, because it was indispensable, and it was useful. And, really, is it to our country's interest to try to distort the character of that interview or belittle its importance?"

Referring to the criticism of Premier MacDonald in France, M. Herriot said:

"Is it, indeed, to France's advantage to deny the good will of the Prime Minister, who is a democrat like us, who is harassed like us by the gravest preoccupations, seeking in good faith one of the essential bases of peace in an entente between France and Great Britain"

"Certainly there remain many difficulties to be overcome. We have always said so; we say so now. But despite certain opposition, our method, after so much disillusion, is above all to seek that which brings together, and not that which divides. To overcome difficulties so grave as those we face, the best way is to reduce them by steady work."

THE WEATHER.

Yesterday was close, warm and oppressive. While the thermometer did not go above 83 degrees, the air was humid, or moist. Lowest last night 59 degrees.—W.P.

Police brought David Barnett of Balham, England, out of a prison cell to arrest him for contempt of court.

Grins "Not Hurt a Bit" After Three Story Fall

NEW YORK, July 7.—Neighbors gasped when a rear porch railing gave way yesterday afternoon and Anna Bray fell three stories in the rear of her home at No. 28 Boyd street, Newark.

As they rushed to her, expecting to find her badly hurt, Miss Bray sat up, smiled and said:

"Not hurt a bit."

Then she got up and dusted off her clothing.

REAL BEEHIVE IN PARLIAMENT

SENATE BUSY TOO

OTTAWA, July 7. — (Canadian Press). — Redistribution is regarded pretty generally in parliamentary circles as likely to play a big part in fixing the date of the end of the session. The Premier has intimated that morning sittings, which are the sign of the beginning of the end, will not begin until that piece of legislation and the supplementary estimates are before the House. The supplementary estimates are easily within Government control and are expected to be laid on the table today. But redistribution is in the hands of a committee, where there are three parties to be consulted. It was hoped that this committee would reach a unanimous decision but this is now thought to be highly doubtful and if a redistribution bill comes down at an early date, it is likely to be by a majority vote and against strong opposition.

If the redistribution question comes before the House under such disputations auspices as is now regarded as probable, it may contribute materially to the prolongation of the session in the House. The main difference in the committees have been between the Conservatives and the Liberals in Ontario, but they have been of such a nature as are apt to result in vigorous debate in the Commons. In addition to redistribution and closely related to it is the proposal for the alternative vote in single member constituencies. There have been reports that this bill would be dropped, but some sections of western opinion in Parliament are urging that it should be pushed through and sent up to the Senate with a view to letting the Upper House accept it or, if they reject it, to give them an opportunity as this school of thought says, "to fill up their cup."

Estimates will play a considerable part in the debates in the House during the next week and the rest of the session. There are still large numbers of appropriations to be passed, and without these, the Government cannot afford to bring about prorogation. In these discussions "the ginger group" now strengthened by the adhesion of four new members, are reported to be preparing to flesh their political swords.

One day during the week is scheduled to be devoted to the Home Bank depositors. The banking committee of the House found that the depositors had a "moral claim' 'to reimbursement and the House is now to be asked to approve that finding. There was strong opposition to the finding in the committee, and an extended debate is expected to result in the chamber, there being said to be doubt as to whether the members as a whole will vote to instruct the Government that the losses of the depositors should be paid out of the public exchequer.

The Senate this week will have the Church Union Bill before it.

DEATH PENALTY MAKES SLAYER SHAKE HIS FIST

Sensational Murder Trial in England Ends in Attack on Judge.

FRENCHMAN TO DIE

Used Language Dictionary to Talk to Wife of His Victim.

LONDON, July 7. — (Canadian Press Cable).—One of the most sensational murder cases coming before the British courts in recent years concluded at Guildford on Saturday, when the death sentence was passed on the Frenchman, Jean Vaquier for murdering the proprietor, named Jones, of a country inn at Byfleet, Surrey.

Testifying at the trial, the wife of Jones said she had first met Vaquier at Biarritz and subsequently the couple stayed together in France. They surmounted the language difficulty by procuring a French-English dictionary. Vaquier subsequently followed Mrs. Jones to England and lived at the Jones Inn at Byfleet. On March 29 Jones died in agony after taking a morning salts. The post-mortem showed death was due to strychnine poisoning.

Vaquier admitted purchasing strychnine and towards the end of trial made a dramatic statement in which he alleged he had purchased it for Jones' solicitor who wanted to destroy a dog. The solicitor, summoned as a witness at the last moment, flatly denied the Frenchman's assertions.

Vaquier distinguished himself throughout the trial by his complete composure and almost total oblivion of his predicament but when the jury returned a verdict of guilty and the judge pronounced sentence he turned livid, shook his fist at the judge and burst into a stream of frenzied screams and protests in French, declaring that he would swear on the graves of his father and mother that he was innocent. He violently attacked the judge, the witnesses and the counsel and was still protesting when removed from the court room.

MRS. F. J. A. MORRIS PINNED BY A CAR AND ARM BROKEN

BALL TEAM'S RESCUE.

Car Backed Down Hill When Driver Tried to Change Gear.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 7. — When the first contingent of the Campbellford baseball players were returning from the game at Roseneath Saturday evening they found an auto overturned at the foot of Duff's hill on the Hastings road, about two miles from town. Held a prisoner under the car was Mrs. F. J. A. Morris, of Peterborough, whose husband is a teacher in the Collegiate Institute in that city. The baseball players helped to right the car and to carry Mrs. Morris to the home of H. Outerdyke a short distance away..

Dr. H. B. Longmore, who was called from Campbellford, found that Mrs. Morris's left arm was broken and that she was suffering from shock. After receiving medical attention she was able to return to Peterborough Saturday night.

The injured lady was one of a party of five, all from Peterborough. Duff's hill is one of the steepest of the many on the Hastings road and when the driver had almost reached the summit he attempted to change gears, but the clutch caught and the car started backing to the foot of the hill. The brakes failed to work and the car ran up the side of a steep bank, turning completely over. Mrs. Morris was the only occupant injured.

The top of the car, the windshield and the steering wheel were broken, but the damage was repaired and the party returned to Peterborough in the auto, taking Mrs. Morris with them.

News Notes.

A large number of residents, including the Northumberland band and the members of the local company of that regiment, went to Norwood yesterday to take part in the unveiling of the soldiers' memorial.

Yesterday was the hottest day of the year, the thermometer marking 90 degrees during the afternoon.

Personals.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Board of Management of the Well Babies' Clinic took place recently in the board-room of the Chamber of Commerce, when reports of the activities of the quarter were presented by various officers. The president, Mrs. W. Galbraith, occupied the chair. There was a large attendance of members, and matters of interest to the Clinic were discussed at length.

The question of having a rest tent at the Peterboro Exhibition, with first aid accommodations and a nurse in attendance, was taken up, and it was decided to supervise this arrangement, and to have a short musical programme at the same time, and speeches by prominent doctors and nurses on health subjects.

The report for the half-year, given by Dr. Jessie Birnie, showed a successful session just finished, with encouraging attendance at the Clinic meetings. Lectures were given by Dr. A. W. MacPherson, who spoke on disease of children; by Dr. J. A. Morgan, on accidents and their Trentment, and by Dr. Ray Scott, on feeding of young children.

The attendance of the doctors at Clinic meetings was recorded as being most gratifying, there being physicians present at almost every Clinic meeting.

Dr. Birnie reported the average attendance at Clinic meetings as being from ten to thirty. From City Hall records, the number of births registered in January were 29, with "avoidable" deaths, 2, the term "avoidable" being used in connection with those deaths which are regarded as being preventable, if proper care had been taken, in contradistinction to the deaths labelled as inevitable. In February, births were 36, with 4 deaths; in March, 41 births and 4 deaths; in April, 33 births and 3 deaths, and in May, 49 births and 4 deaths. In May, all deaths recorded were from bronchial pneumonia.

Announcement was made that the city has been divided, for visiting purposes by the Clinic nurse, into four districts, one from Lansdowne to Charlotte Streets, the north section from Antrim to Smith Streets, a central section, and a section in East City. The Clinic nurse, Mrs. George McCartney, having been asked to be relieved of her duties for a few months, Miss Mamie Foote will take her place as Clinic nurse in the interval.

Announcement was made at this meeting that the Metropolitan Insurance Company had instructed its visiting nurse to ask mothers of young infats with whom she came in contact, to take their babies to the Well Babies' Clinic for instruction and advice, an action which was regarded as commendatory of the work carried on at the Clinic.

Mrs. G. McCartney, the Clinic nurse, reported a total of 834 visits made by her during the period just ended.

Giant Strawberries Grown in the City

Two examples of giant strawberries were left in The Examiner office this morning for our inspection. Contrary to usual custom, the exhibits, instead of being merely waved under our noses, so to speak, so that we might admire and comment in a fitting manner upon the extraordinary type of the samples, were left outright, so that the entire process of "marking, reading, learning and inwardly digesting" has been possible with these exhibits.

Two large berries fill comfortably, with their foliage, a pound chocolate box. They are butterfly-shaped, and each sample is fully as large as half a dozen ordinary berries combined. Their leaves are enormous also, they have a most delectable odor, and a very fine taste. These superb strawberries measure nearly nine inches in circumference, and are a variety called the William Bolt. They are grown by Richard Scrace, of Lansdowne Street.

ST. CATHARINES, July 7. — (Canadian Press.) — Ole Gobles, aged 30, is still alive and conscious at Wellandra Hospital, in spite of the fact that he cut his throat on Saturday morning, completely severing the windpipe with a razor.

Gobles was rushed to the Wellandra Hospital, where Dr. A. B. Whytock performed a trachestomy operation, joining the wound and inserting a tube underneath to allow the man to breathe. Dr. Whytock said to-night that Gobles had a chance for recovery.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

ABOUT THE CRACKNUTS FAMILY

The door into Mr. Bags' store went tingalingaling and in walked Daddy Cracknuts.

"Tomorrow is our wedding anniversary," he said to Nick, who waited upon him. "Ma and I have been married two years, and I want to buy her something nice. The only trouble is that I haven't much money.

Mister Jay Bird, the barber, happened to be in the store and heard every word. "Say," he said to Daddy, "I have an idea. I'd like to have a lot of hair to make a wig. Why not come to my barber shop and let me cut the hair off your tail and I'll pay you well for it. I'll give you twenty-five cents for all the hair on your tail, Daddy. Twenty-five cents! That's a lot of money."

"Yes, it is," said Daddy thoughtfully. "That's a lot of money, Mister Jay Bird. I believe that I'll do as you advise. The hair will grow on my tail again, won't it?"

"Of course it will, Daddy," said Nick. "Why don't you take Mister Jay Bird's advice?"

"All right," said Daddy. "I'll do it. Come along, Mister Jay. I'll go over to your barber shop with you, and you can give me a tail bob, or a bob tail, or whatever you call it. I'll get the twenty-five cents and get Ma a fine present for her anniversary present."

So away they went.

At that very minute the door of Mister Bags' store went tingalingaling again and in ran Mrs. Cracknuts in a great flutter.

"Oh, dear," she gasped. "I'm so afraid that Daddy will see me. Tomorrow is our anniversary and I want to give him a nice present. It's to be a surprise."

"I hardly know," said Mrs. Cracknuts. "I hardly know. You see I haven't been able to save much money and so I can't spend much."

"Why, I need some nice soft hair like yours to stuff a pillow," said Mrs. Owl. "Why don't you go to a beauty parlor and have it clipped off short? I'll give you twenty-five cents for it."

"That's a fine idea!" cried Mrs. Cracknuts. "It's coming summer and I'm too warm, anyhow. Besides, it will grow again and by fall I'll have a fine new crop of hair when the days are chilly."

So away went Mrs. Cracknuts to a beauty parlor and had her hair all cut off short. Mrs. Owl paid her twenty-five cents and away she went with the money to Mister Bags' store in the oak tree.

"Here's the money!" she cried. "I'm going to buy a twenty-five cent comb for Daddy's tail."

"Here's twenty-five cents," he shouted joyously. "Please give me that brush I've been wanting for Ma."

The both of them laughed and laughed and laughed.

DARK STREETS TO BE LIGHTED

Fire Chief Will Attend International Convention at Buffalo.

INSURANCE RATES.

Several darkened streets will be illuminated hereafter as a result of the meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee Friday night.

Lights will be installed at the corner of Macdonnel Street and Monaghan Road, on Gilchrist Street north of McDonnel, and one light will be placed at the railway crossing on Barnardo Avenue.

The committee also decided to move the light on Burnham Street, north of Dale Avenue, to the corner of Burnham Street and Dale Avenue and Chairman Alderman Stocker was appointed to confer with the Utilities Commission with respect to having lights placed on Gilmour Street and Homewood Avenue, west of Monaghan Road, to be placed on concrete standards.

The chairman reported that he had gone over the territory with the hydro inspector and found these places in a dangerous condition, advising the installation of lights if the city wish to avoid damage claims through car fatalities.

Alderman Crowe pointed out that from the Bonner-Worth Co. east to Park Street, McDonnel Street is thickly populated and poorly lighted.

"Yes, I've heard about that," interjected Alderman Phelan.

"There is not a light on King Edward Street," stated Alderman Fife; "and I have brought the matter to the Committee's attention before."

Alderman Crowe explained that he and Alderman Morrison had held these matters over in view of the new lighting system which is under consideration, when chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

Alderman McIntyre expressed the opinion that new lights should not be installed unless absolutely required, for they will all be replaced when the whole city is relighted under the new system contemplated.

"When additional lights are proposed by any Alderman, they should be kept before the Committee until definite action is taken," stated Alderman Fife.

"Well, we will look into your and Alderman Crowe's suggestions in reference to King Edward and MacDonnel Streets," remarked the Chairman.

"Mayor Turner advocated the erection of concrete standards where lights are to be placed on new streets. "Now is the time to make our permanent improvements when there streets are new and not paved."

The Committee passed a resolution authorizing the purchase of the two ornamental iron poles with light clusters now located in front of the H.E.P.C. office in George Street, for the sum of $50. Originally, each of these poles cost $80, and the purchase was considered a rare bargain.

The poles are to be placed in front of the Fire Station. The Chairman pointed out that the red light at the top of each pole will be kept burning all night, and the two red lights prominently displayed will mark the position of the Fire Hal in the future.

The committee had provided for their appropriations for Chief Gimolett's expenses in attending the International Fire Chiefs' Convention, to be held in Buffalo, Aug. 19 to 22.

At the meeting a communication was read from Bickle Fire Engines, Ltd., Woodstock, extending an invitation to the Mayor, Chairman and Fire Chief to attend the convention in Buffalo for two days, as guests of the company. The company intend to demonstrate fire fighting machinery at the convention.

With little hesitation the offer was accepted.

Alderman Phelan explained the necessity for a city to acquire the most efficient fire fighting devices, pointing out that in Kingston where large fires have been of frequent occurrence in recent years, the insurance companies had raised their rates to 15 per cent.

Before the meeting closed Chairman Alderman Stocker stated that the new uniforms were very satisfactory and that some of the men who had been with the department for years, declared they were the best uniforms they had ever received.

Blood Transfusion Was Given Calvin Coolidge

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(Canadian Press). — A blood transfusion given Calvin Coolidge, Jr., late last night failed to aid him, and this morning the boy was near death. Physicians prepared as a last resort to give him an infusion of saline solution in a desperate effort to strengthen his own blood to fight the creeping poison in it. Following the transfusion, Calvin rallied slightly, but during the early hours to-ady he suffered three sinking spells when the spark of life almost flickered out. At dawn he was extremely low, recognizing no one.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

One-half grapefruit, 1 cup cream of asparagus soup, 2 toasted wafers, 1 cup fresh cherries, 2 tablespoons salmon loaf, 2 tablespoons creamed peas, ½ cup string bean salad, ½ ounce Roquefort cheese, 2 toasted water crackers, 1 toasted bran muffin, 1 slice rye bread, 1 pint skimmed milk.

The soup for the reducing diet should be made with skimmed milk.

The creamed peas should be served for the reducing diet before the butter or cream is added.

The diet dressing, made with mineral and lemon juice, is poured over the string bean salad.

Most "made" dishes are not satisfactory for a reducing diet, as they contain too much fat and carbohydrate, but sometimes it's quite necessary to use this sort of concoction if you are far from the market.

Salmon Loaf.

One large can salmon, 2 eggs, 1 cup dried bread crumbs, 1 lemon, 1 cup skimmed milk, salt and pepper.

Remove skin and bones from salmon and flake. Pour over juice of lemon and let stand 10 minutes. Add crumbs and mix thoroughly. Add eggs, unbeaten, salt and pepper, and stir with a fork until perfectly blended. Stir the milk. Turn into a baking dish and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

Total calories, 638. Protein, 154; fat, 201; carbohydrate, 283. Iron, .0128 gram.

One-half grapefruit with 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 cup rolled oats with six dates, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1-3rd cup cream, 2 tablespoons scrambled eggs with dried beef, 2 tablespoons potatoes hashed in cream, 2 cornmeal muffins, 2 tablespoons marmalade, 1 cup cream of asparagus soup with 3 tablespoons whipped cream, 4 toasted wafers, ½ cup fresh cherry salad, 4 tablespoons baked chocolate custard pudding, 2 tablespoons whipped cream, 2 tablespoons salmon loaf, 4 tablespoons creamed peas, 1 large twice baked potato, 1 banana salad, 1 ounce Roquefort cheese, 2 toasted water crackers, 1 pint whole milk, 2 peanut butter sandwiches, 2 slices rye bread, 3 tablespoons butter.

Instead of making a separate asparagus soup for the gaining diet, stir in one-fourth cup of cream after the soup is taken out for the reducing diet. The whipped cream increases the number of calories, too, so even if the soup is made with skimmed the calorie content is high for the gaining member of the family.

Twice Baked Potatoes (Four).

Four large potatoes, 2 tablespoons butter, 1-3rd cup cream, 1 whole egg, 2 tablespoons grated cheese, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon onion juice, 1 teaspoon minced parsley.

Bake potatoes for 1 hour in a hot oven. Remove from oven, cut slice from top and scoop out the potato. Run through a ricer or mash carefully with a wire masher. Add butter, cream, heated cheese and seasonings. Beat yolk of egg well and stir into potato mixture. Beat white of egg until stiff and dry and fold into first mixture. Fill potato shells with mixture and return to the oven for 15 minutes.

Bodies of Five Persons Found on 'Three Rivers"

BALTIMORE, July 7.—(Canadian Press).—The bodies of five boys and that of a negro were found on the hulk of the bay steamer Three Rivers yesterday, when the remains of the vessel, which was burned to the water line in Chesapeake Bay early Saturday, were towed into Baltimore. This brings the total number of victims of the fire up to ten, and accounts for all those known to be missing.

French Are Bitter At British Premier

The British Premier notified Premier Herriot he would arrive here at 3 p.m. to-morrow for a conference. The French were bitter because MacDonald invited the Powers and outlined a tentative agenda without first submitting the text of the invitation and programme for France's approval.

THE SOUTH HAS ANOTHER CLASH

Troops Rebel and Threaten to Take Over the Government at Rio de Janeiro.

(By U. G. Keener, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 6. — (Sunday, delayed.) — A section of the army of the State of Sao Paulo, rebelled against its officers early on Saturday, seized the public buildings and caused considerable excitement before order was restored by federal troops over Saturday and to-day.

The movement apparently started because of dissatisfaction in the ranks at the decision of the Sao Paulo State Government to renew its contract for a French military mission, which has been instructing and reorganizing the states military forces for the last three years.

Troops in several barracks gathered quietly in the early hours and started a parley with the state government.

The officers, backed by Governor Carlos de Campos, and the Federal garrison, refused to yield to the rebels' demands, and there was some street fighting on Saturday.

A despatch to the government organ Jornal Do Commercio here today says the insurrection has been subdued.

The Federal government, however, has declared martial law in the Federal district (Rio De Janeiro and environs), the state of Rio De Janeiro, and the State Sao Paulo.

Rail communication between Rio De Janeiro and Sao Paulo, the second city of the republic, and centre of Brazil's great coffee industry, has been taken over by the military and public traffic prohibited.

The military has assumed control of the telephone and telegraph communications.

All despatches in Rio de Janeiro up to early to-night indicate that the Federal and State governments have the situation well in hand, the army and navy both remaining loyal.

Jornal do Commercio, which is owned by Foreign Minister Felix Pacheco, says that the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, have called on President Arthur Bernardes, pledging their loyalty and co-operation.

While there is no mention of casualties in the British official despatches outlining the situation, it is feared that there may have been some loss of life, as a despatch to Cazetta de Noticias mentions some severe street fighting, and says the rebel forces were retreating in disorder.

President Bernardes to-day issued a brief proclamation to the public asking the people to remain calm and trust the government to restore order.

The military communiques emphasize that the insurrection is entirely local in the State of Sao Paulo and was not caused by any dissatisfaction with the Federal government.

Some trouble also apparently occurred in Santos, the port of Sao Paulo, as communication between that city and Rio de Janeiro, was placed in the hands of the military. Everything indicates however that order is being restored rapidly and that the movement will be of far less importance than the outbreak here two years ago, when the military college and a section of the army rebelled, shelling Rio De Janeiro.

That outbreak was put down under two days, with a loss of life estimated as high as 300. There seems to be no connection whatever between the Sao Paulo movement and the rebellion against the State government in Rio De Janeiro, which was finally ended by Federal mediation several months ago.

Conditions in Rio De Janeiro reported normal.

VELMA SANDERSON RECEIVED PRESENT

A very pleasant event took place on Friday, June 27, at S.S. No. 2, Smith. Immediately upon the closing of school at the noon-hour an address and presentation was given the teacher, Miss Velma Sanderson, who is leaving the section.

Following this, all went to a nearby grove where lunch was eaten. The afternoon was spent most enjoyably in games and races and each pupil received several ice cream cones as a treat from their teacher.

The address was read by Lillian McGregor, and a beautiful clock, set in cut-glass, was presented by Jean Irwin. Miss Sanderson was completely taken by surprise, but thanked the scholars all for this most kind remembrance to her.

The address was as follows:

Dear Miss Sanderson:

We, your pupils, of S.S. No. 2, Smith, wish to express to you before your departure, our gratitude and appreciation of your efforts on our behalf during the past two years. When we heard that you spoke of leaving us, we hoped that you would reconsider and decide to remain longer, as you had been requested.

It is not only as our teacher that we feel the loss, but also as a true friend who sympathized with us in all our little troubles, and who settled our small disputes with a fair and unbiased judgment.

Our lessons have been presented to us in such a manner as to make them especially interesting as well as instructive. Never have you spared what was best for us, has been your one aim. You have impressed upon our minds the fact that the knowledge we are gaining now, is not so much for the present but for the future when we shall need it and feel grateful for the unceasing pains you have taken with us. Then we will think and say,

"Schooldays, schooldays,
Dear old Golden Rule days."

For indeed this same "Golden Rule" you have lived daily before us and endeavored to instil it on our hearts and minds.

Nor did you ever fail to urge us while we are young, to form habits for our own good; and in our games to point out to us that a good sport is one who is able to take cheerfully his losses as well as gains.

In conclusion, we would ask you to accept this gift as a slight token of our esteem and love, and as a remembrance which you will have of us in the future. We wish for you in your chosen vocation, continued success and hope that the thoughts of deepest gratitude which we all feel, will add to the bright spots in your memory in the years to come.

Signed on behalf of the school,

Jean Irwin,
Lillian McGregor.

Leave Home in the Morning Ready for Work

GRAPE-NUTS MILK
(A delicious malted milk)
¾ cup Grape-Nuts, 3 cups boiling water, 2 cups rich milk, 3 tablespoons sugar, or 2 tablespoons honey, ½ teaspoon vanilla.
Pour the boiling water over the Grape-Nuts, and let stand covered ½ hour. Strain the liquid off, and add the other ingredients, and thoroughly mix. Serve cold or hot, as required.
This recipe makes six cups or medium glasses.

START out each morning prepared for a real day's work. Have the feeling that your body and mind will be on the job no matter what problem you must face. At breakfast eat a food which will give you this energy. Eat Grape-Nuts.

Grape-Nuts is made from whole wheat and malted barley. The non-essential elements are eliminated. A long process of slow baking concentrates all the food value of wheat and malted barley in a highly energizing form. In this form they can be easily assimilated by the body.

Have Grape-Nuts tomorrow, and the next day, and the next! You'll begin at once to enjoy energy and health that you've never known before. Grape-Nuts costs very little, too. Four teaspoonfuls are sufficient for one serving and there are many such servings in each package. Costs 1c per serving. Sold by all grocers.

MORE SAFETY.

More safety and fewer accidents is a great need of this country.

There are too many preventable accidents on the streets, in the homes and in industry.

In this Province alone industry pays, through the Compensation Board, an annual tax of about six million dollars for accidents, and this is only part of the loss, for the employer and employee alike suffer every time there is an accident involving loss of time.

Safety is largely a habit of mind, and like other habits can be acquired.

"Thinking safety" will, therefore, produce safety, so that both management and workers should give thought to accident prevention to the end, that the awful toll in human suffering and the very considerable sums of money lost may be reduced to a minimum.

More safety is a reasonable demand of industry in this country and is a demand which both workers and executives will support.

THE ROTARY CARNIVAL.

The Examiner hopes that Peterborough people generally will keep Thursday, July 17th, open, remembering it as the date of the Rotary Carnival, an event of unusual interest and designed for the laudable purpose of raising money for Rotary crippled children campaign.

The news and advertising columns have been telling Examiner readers considerable about the carnival and the programme of entertaining events which is to be given.

A word or two about the cause that is to be helped may be of interest.

Briefly, the Peterborough Rotarians have undertaken to see that no child in Peterborough at present suffering from a physical disability shall grow up into a crippled adult if medical skill or attention can remove the disability.

It is realized that many of the defects can be removed with proper attention if the treatment is commenced early enough, and it is also realized that from financial or other reasons many children fail to receive the necessary treatment and as a result their crippled condition became permanent.

A survey of Peterborough has been taken, the number of children in need of treatment and unable to secure it located, and Rotary proposes to give these little folks a chance.

It is a splendid effort, and if the people of Peterborough will just keep it in mind next week there is no doubt of the success of the carnival.

SUPERVISED PLAYGROUNDS.

The opening of the Public School playgrounds, offering safe recreation under capable supervision for the youngsters of the city, will be a boon to many worried mothers, helping to solve as it does the problem of where the children are to play.

While the hours are not long, and many people seem to think that the grounds might have been thrown open at 9 o'clock each morning, the fact that from 10 to 12 noon and from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. the equipment is at the disposal of the children and the supervisors will be in charge will reassure parents of the safety of their little ones during the greater part of the day.

The system has justified itself by the results achieved.

Playgrounds not only keep the children off the streets and away from questionable influences, but they also form a very important factor in character-building.

The little folks learn to play the game according to the British ideal of recreation.

The bully or the whiner is not welcomed in playground circles, and the lesson is very quickly learned that others have rights and privileges and that it does not matter so much how the game results so long as you tried faithfully and played according to the code.

Intelligent supervision during play hours will make better citizens out of the boys and girls who are visitors at Peterborough's playgrounds.

TAKING CHANCES.

A recent local accident should serve as a double warning, impressing upon motorists the necessity of exercising every precaution in passing street cars on the "blind" side, and upon the public generally the need of being careful in passing round the end of a street car to make their way to the sidewalk.

Traffic conditions present a different problem than had to be faced a few years ago, and it is the duty of every citizen whether driving a car or walking to be cautious and careful.

Far too many motorists take a chance in passing street cars that have stopped at a corner to allow passengers to alight or take on passengers.

It is a dangerous game and one that is liable to end in an accident.

Some drivers try to speed past before the street car actually comes to a stop, under the impression that they are within the law in doing so so long as the car is moving.

Technically they may be correct in that view, but the average jury would be very likely to bring in a verdict of manslaughter if somebody happened to be killed by one of those drivers who preferred to take a chance rather than wait a few seconds.

The man at the wheel in such a situation should always remember that there are plenty of people foolish enough to drop off a street car before it stops, and if one of those individuals happened to select for this dangerous practice a moment when an automobilist thought he could "beat the car to the corner" the result would likely be a coroner's inquest.

Those few seconds gained at a corner—what do they count for anyway when placed in the scale against a human life?

THE NEW QUOTAS.

It is an 1890 microcosm of immigrant America that the new quotas proclaimed by President Coolidge give—a 2 per cent. picture of the foreign-born population of that period. Yet every country on the fact of the earth is included in the list for a minimum quota at least, even though, as in the case of several Asiatic countries, no such quota is actually granted for any of the latter. The list gives, with all these names placed opposite the allotments, the impression of a world-embracing hospitality. The least are there with the greatest. Little Monaco, with its eight square miles and the population of a small New England town, may send its hundred. Tanganyika's complement is welcomed from Central Africa. Muscat may presumably contribute a Bedouin quota from the Arabian desert, and Ethiopians may be "at our steps." But despite the allotment of 100 each to Japan, China and India and others, none may enter from these countries except on sufferance as students or intellectuals.

From Germany, the home of the highly Nordic race, which has come near wrecking the world, we agree to admit a larger number than from any one country, 51,227—unless indeed the Irish Free State quota be added to that of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, which makes a total of 62,574. Sweden comes next, but far below, with 9,561, and Norway with 6,453. After these comes Liberia with 6,100. From France and her possessions only 3,954 may be admitted, and from Italy, including Rhodes and Dodekanesia, only 3,845, as compared with 42,057 for the year 1923-24. From Russia, both European and Asiatic, only 2,248 may enter, as against 21,613; and from Poland, whose population was represented in 1890 among the immigrants from Germany, Russia and Austria, 5,982, as compared with 21,076 in 1924. To these are to be added immigrants from Egypt and Esthonia, from Greece and Iceland, from Andorra in the Pyrenees, and even from Yap and other islands in the Pacific.

While the present racial foundations will remain as they are and even be strengthened in their 1924 percentages by the coming of wives of those who are already citizens and of children left on the other side, as well as by increasing numbers on this side, it will be a material of different constituency that will be built into the next storey of the New Yorld structure. The smaller number of those of foreign tongue should help us to catch up in bringing all the people of America to understand and use one language. But will the eager longing for collective freedom, for education and for individual opportunity that made America a land of promise for many millions be found in the Northern newcomers to the same degree? And, especially, will those who come from Germany and her former allied countries bring, or grow into, such a devotion as has seized the imagination and hearts of those whom we have been welcoming, for example, from the more responsive immigrants from the land of him who discovered America? At any rate, we have a new sort of "Americanization" problem. It will have to do not so much with aspiring ignorance as with differing theories of sound and political organization and life. A new chapter has been begun. —New York Times.

WAGES IN GERMANY.

Lit is rather shocking, says the Kingston Whig, to read, in a recent article in the London Economist, that when measured in purchasing power the wages of the German laborer today—his "real" wages, that is—are certainly not more than 60 per cent. of those ruling before the war. Even before the war the German worker was not among the better paid workers of Europe, though the combination of his own thrift and the good economic organization of many of his communities perhaps enabled him to get as much out of life as some of his more highly paid rivals in England and even in the United States and Canada. But to be able to get along on 60 per cent. of the commodities and services which he could command in 1913, he must have habituated himself to a standard of living involving great hardships, and probably severe suffering to the weaker members of his family.

Those who are always on the lookout for a good excuse for demanding a tariff increase will doubtless find one in these low wages, which obviously constitute a favorable factor in the production costs of our recent enemies. But there are two offsetting elements which must be taken into account also. Labor so ill remunerated cannot possibly be as productive as it used to be, for poor nourishment and poor housing inevitably take their toll of the worker's physical and mental strength. And the price of capital is as costly, to the German manufacturer and trader, as that of labor is cheap. Even the better borrowers are reported to be paying as high as 25 to 60 per cent. per annum for their bank loans—a circumstance which is, of course, largely the result of the frightful destruction both of liquid capital and of the habit of saving which took place during the years of depreciating currency, when no man knew how much less he would be able to buy with his mark tomorrow than he could today, and nobody therefore saved a mark for more than twenty-four hours. Thus the total cost of production in Germany is probably little if at all below what it was before the war, and to it must be added the burden of existing taxation; the difference is mainly in the fact that much less of the cost goes for labor and much more for the use of capital; where there can be no doubt that much production which ought to be going on and which would help to raise the price of labor is being prevented by the utter impossibility of paying such a price for capital—or perhaps of getting it from the leaders upon any terms.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Watch international amity develop as the Olympic contests are fought out this week.

The Progressive Party in the House of Commons is rapidly breaking up into a series of independent groups. A return to the old two-party system may not be so far off as was anticipated.

After reading of so many celebrations, the Globe declares that one is forced to wonder where all the old boys come from.

With the strawberry yield good, a lot of people have trouble interesting themselves in any other kind of crops.

Gus Porter, ex-M.P., is waiting for the issuing of the writs for the West Hastings by-election. As the seat has been regarded as a safe Conservative riding for many years, the result is not likely to throw much light upon the country's opinion of the Porter charges against Hon. Jas. Murdock.

Big fish stories are scarce, which would seem to indicate that the fishing is poor, or the fishermen more truthful than usual.

A THOUGHT

A young man cannot climb the ladder of success while his hands are full of long-stemmed American Beauties, while his heart is being pierced with the thorns of jealousy, while his head is filled with jazz music.

The average young man cannot handle a good job when he is thinking more of roses than he is of responsibility.

The young man that realizes his responsibility will get a good job and when he gets a good job, he can get a good girl.

How embarrassing and how annoying it must be to marry the jazz type and have to walk to work with your big toe punching through a stocking.

If I were a young man I would walk around to the basement of several houses on Monday morning, and if I could find a girl helping her Mother do the wash I'd propose right there and then.

1½c BUSINESS REPLY CARDS NOW AVAILABLE

The Post Office Department have issued double Reply Cards bearing on the first half 1c postage and on the reply half, ½c pastage, in addition to the ½c single business Reply cards.

These are issued in order to allow the business public to send out prepaid reply cards to prospective customers without incurring too great a loss owing to the small percentage of such cards actually used. These cards must therefore be mailed in quantity and the speculative element as to a reply must be present, that is they should be mailed in lots of 1,000 or more to prospective customers and cannot be used for regular customers only.

Any organization using these reply cards must have its name and address printed on the lower right hand half of the face of the reply half, and must have matter (with or without blanks to be filled in) printed on the reverse side. Such cards, when filled in for return in the mails, are to be forwarded and delivered without additional charge.

Invited for the week-end

—by Long Distance

It was Thursday afternoon in the country. Hospitable Mrs. Martin seemed disappointed. The week had slipped away before she knew it. No one had been invited up for the week-end and there wasn't time in which to write.

And then she thought of the telephone — Long Distance! What an inspiration!

In twenty minutes she knew the Smarts would come — delighted to — and what train they would be on. Splendid! — and she had ordered some extra supplies from her grocer in town to be shipped by express that night!

What a pleasant week-end she will have — thanks to Long Distance!

CLEANING PANS

When cooking vessels of tin, iron agate or enamelware have been burned they may be cleaned without violent scraping by filling with cold water, adding a tablespoon of washing soda for every quart and heating slowly to the boiling point. After allowing it to boil for five or ten minutes the food can be easily removed and the pan will not have been injured.

FIRST AND PARAMOUNT, ABSOLUTE SECURITY TO POLICYHOLDERS

"I'LL talk the matter over with my wife," you say.

Don't! You promised at the altar to protect her. Is it fair to ask her now: "Shall I fulfil my vow"? A wife may object to life assurance—a widow never does.

The responsibility of protecting your wife and little ones is yours—and yours alone. Don't shirk it. You'll never miss the small yearly saving necessary to maintain an Imperial Life policy.

"The Creation of an Estate" is an interesting booklet which explains the advantages of life assurance as a provision for dependents. Write to-day for a free copy. Address:

FASHION HINTS FOR WOMEN.

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, N.Y., July 7—(Fashion Editor of the United Press) (United Press).—Accessories are quite as important as the costume itself. The art of knowing how to apply the final touch to one's costume is a difficult one to master. A bow of ribbon, a well posed corsage or the stitching of one's glove are all small matetrs in themselves but add materially to the ensemble of a well groomed woman.

A shoulder-scarf which is used on some of the smart evening frocks begins at the left shoulder and falls in unbroken line below the hem of the skirt. Chiffon or tulle the shade of the frock for such a scarf which is held at the shoulder with a rhinestone buckle of cabashon. A flower may also be used to conceal the connection of the scarf to the shoulder.

Red and black jewelry of Chinese inspiration is popular in Paris, with the street costume. Red lacquer pendants hung on black cords and pendants that combine both black and red lacquer are extremely chic.

A narrow velvet ribbon sash tied at the left side of the beltless frock softens the straight-line effect which is often becoming.

Artificial flowers worn on the shoulder of the evening frock are very smart these days. The waistline corsage is seldom seen. A huge red velvet rose on a black lace frock is quite lovely.

Try wearing the black lace gown over a nude tone slip. Many of the latest models favor the light flesh or tane-toned underslip for the sheer black gown.

Aigret hat trimming is coming to the fore. Most hats this season are small and the side aigret trim is used in preference to the front trim.

Even felt shapes are being trimmed with aigrets. Light fawn colored felt trimmed in fawn colored aigrets and worn with a frock of the same shade proved one of the loveliest combinations worn this season. White aigrets which have become yellowed by time can be dyed a lovely fawn shade.

White frocks appliqued in cretonne flowers are new for summer wear. The applique is used in skirt border effect and on scarf ends, the bodice of the frock being kept plain.

Tunics are very smart this season, all-over embroidered materials being placed over plain underslips. A handsome lace frock which has become too short for this year's mode may be utilized as a tunic over a plain material of self color.

The latest beaded evening frocks from Paris concentrate their beadwork to the skirt or to narrow border trimming. All-over beadwork isn't quite as fashionable as formerly, since the bodice of this season is decidedly plain.

Preserve the old fringed gown for fringe will be with us again this fall. Paris is already showing evening frocks with hems bordered in bead fringe. Silk fringe is also popular.

Beaded bags continue to be popular although designs this year run to tapestry effects and landscapes rather than floral ones. Dull, well-blended color are preferred to vivid tones. Both drawstring and frame bags are sponsored.

Plain handkerchiefs of linen match ing the exact color of the frock with which they are carried are fashionable.

IRELAND

Ireland takes a census, finds its population is not quite five millions. As far back as 1847, Ireland had eight millions.

Poverty and political oppression are responsible. They drove the Irish out to other countries, chiefly American.

It makes you wonder how long Europeans—especially Germans, Austrians and Hungarians—will endure their burden before they begin packing up and moving to South America and other havens. How long would you stay over there with your family, with unlimited debt and taxes and reparations staring you in the face and keeping your nose to the grindstone?

JOBLESS

Unemployment insurance is put into effect in the garments industry. If successful, it will spread to other trades. It's promised that the unemployment fund will be handled on a non-profit basis.

Meantime, as we watch the experiment, not a bad idea to keep in mind that the original and best form of unemployment insurance is a personal savings account at the bank.

How many are saving for the next period of business depression? It may not come for years, but the wise play safe.

KEEP SPATULA HANDY

A spatula or cake knife is good to have around to level your measurements, as recipes always call for level measurements.

were volunteers. Some of them represent old families, whose lives have been woven into the affairs of Norwood and its rural community from the very beginnings of the district. One outstanding exception was Ezeric Aboud, a comparative newcomer from Asia Minor, but all were of Norwood, peaceloving Canadians who just ten years ago this summer gave no thought to the Hapsburg domination of the Serb and the retaliative plots hatched in Serajeoo breaking out with the assassination of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria and his wife in June 28, 1914, and the resultant Balkan termors shook the world with battles on far seas and sorrow in remote little places all around the earth, such as Norwood and Hastings and Keene in peaceful Peterborough county.

Parade of Militia.

The unveiling ceremonies were opened by Reeve W. E. Packenham after the military parade from the armoury. A bemedalled honor guard of five men headed the march, preceding a group of twenty-five ex-service officers from this district, the 40th Northumberland Regimental band of Campbellford, and the Norwood and Campbellford companies of the regiment, under the command of Major Bygott.

Many of the officers were from Peterboro and Cobourg. Norwood and Havelck Boy Scouts and a file of little girls with Rev. O'Connor-Fenton paraded with the militia.

Among those on the platform with Reeve Packenham were His Lordship Bishop White (Captain) of Honan, China, who is a native of Norwood and who saw service as a chap lain in the war, Rev. T. M. (Captain) Wesley of Norwood; Col. R. E. Birdsall, Col. Everett Birdsall, Col. T. J. Johnston, Col. T. Dalton Johnston, M.P.P., Col. F. D. Boggs, Mayor of Cobourg, Col. Floyd and Col. McNaughton of Cobourg; Col. R. J. Stuart of Toronto; Col. Ed. O'Flynn of Belleville, Mrs. B. Squire, regent of Norwood chapter, I.O.D.E., Mrs. Spence of Calgary, and Nursing Sister, Mrs. Annie Kempt of Norwood, who performed the act of unveiling by loosening the cord that lowered the Union Jack, which had enfolded the monument.

The Dedication

The invocation of dedication was then pronounced by Bishop White at the close of an impressive address as follows:

"I dedicate this memorial to the glory of God; and in grateful memory of the men of this community who gave up their own lives in the Great War that others might live in freedom. In the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

The implicit significance of the unveiling ceremony, His Lordship said, was the fact that these soldiers had died for us. The effect and fruit of their sacrifice should be fully realized and appreciated, bringing home to us a deep sense of our duty to maintain the freedom that was won at the price of their supreme sacrifice.

Bishop White emphasized the spirit of gratitude and thanksgiving which should be quickened by the erection of the memorial monument.

LINIMENT FOUND TO BE POWERFUL GERMICIDE

Originally, Absorbine Jr. was sold only as a pain reliever and an embrocation. It was quickly discovered that the liniment was positive death to all forms of germ life, and it is now used as a mouth wash, for wound dressing and for all disinfecting purposes.

Another surprise was yet in store. A Wm. Pratt of Springfield, Mass., applied Absorbine Jr. to a varicose vein to relieve the intense pain. Not only did the pain leave, but he noticed every day the swollen vein becoming smaller. The treatment was kept up and, today, Mr. Pratt's legs, though he has never used anything else on them, are as smooth as when he was a boy. It has now been proved that Absorbine Jr. is an actual specific for varicose veins, leg ulcers, boils, pyorrhoea and a number of other ailments and injuries besides that for which it was first prepared. Nothing serves so many every day purposes and nothing is better entitled to its place in every home. When it is needed, it will be needed in a hurry. Don't wait for someone to be hurt. Get it at your druggist's today. $1.25 everywhere.

"Looking out upon the world today we see discord and chaos and ominous clouds over Europe. Although we are inclined to feel that the world is much as it was before and that nothing permanent has been gained by the war, we believe in our hearts that good will result and that these lives were not laid down in vain."

The lesson of Flanders fields showed us that we must not live in the past nor keep in the present, but must look beyond and be prepared. We are a peace-loving people and we don't want war, but we will ever stand for truth, for righteousness and peace.

Human nature, said Bishop White has not changed. It is still the same and so are international jealousies unchanged.

Monument Deserved.

Col. T. J. Johnston, speaking briefly, after reading the honor roll, said that never was a monument more richly deserved. Men had never sacrificed more, for they had made the sacrifice of their young lives.

"Some people seem to think that their deaths were accidental," he continued. That is not true, for not once but one hundred times they threw themselves into the gap for you people. Col. Stuart has said that the 93rd Battalion was one of the best that ever reached Barriefield. I take no credit for that. They were good men before I got them, and that credit belongs to the homes that raised and produced them.

There are also some people who blame the returned men for the unrest that has followed the war. I wish to give that opinion a flat denial. The war proved that the men of our day are as good flesh and blood as ever lived, just as charitable one to another and possessed of the highest ideals. They came home satisfied that they had done their duty and eager to make this world better. The unrest has come from those who remained at home.

Col. Johnston congratulated the Norwood Daughters of the Empire for their service to the soldiers, and particularly for their fidelity in the initiative and support they gave to the financing of the cost of the memorial. Without the I. O. D. E. few of the monuments that have been ereited throughout the country to the memory of the soldiers would have materialized by this time.

Should Remember Women.

Col. O'Flynn, of Belleville, in an eloquent eulogy of the soldiers who died in the war, declared that the women of Canada had made even a heavier sacrifice. He cited instances of the patriotic renunciation of the womanhood of the Dominion as they bravely(but with heartbreak, gave up their men.

"Some of these mothers may be living next door to us. They may be ill or they may need our help. Do we ever go in to see how they are, to offer them our help? If the boys could come back to us I am sure they would say that memorial monuments are a splendid expression but they would tell us that they look to those who lived through the war to protect and care for their mothers, their wives and their children."

Large Attendance.

Other speakers were Mrs. Spence, Col. Boggs, Col. McNaughton and Col. Stuart. The addresses were tempered to the midsummer heat that beat upon the large crowd assembled in the hollow about the mound upon which the cenotaph has been conspicuously placed. Norwood's hundreds were doubled by others from the country and from neighboring towns of Havelock, Hastings, Campbellford and Peterboro. It was an inspiring spectacle and a moving, memorable ceremony. Every detail fitted smoothly into the programme down to the final act of depositing flowers upon the monument. Relatives and friends buried the pediment with their sheaves and wreaths of bloom and mourning. It was a splendid, though pathetic, gesture of love and faith, supplementing with the perishable beauty and fragrance of the brief summer day the durable commemorative granite that will bear its graven tribute to honor and manhood and patriotism as eloquently ten decades hence as it did yesterday, just one decade since the fateful epoch that called these Norwood men to duty and sacrifice and victory.

been removed County Constable S. R. Pearson arrived at the scene of the accident in John Drummond's car.

By this time about thirty cars were lined up along the road and Mr. Belleghem, who reappeared with Dr. G. T. Loudon in the latters' car, was taken by Constable Pearson to the Police Station. He remained in custody until 1 o'clock Sunday morning, when he was liberated by Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton on a bail bond of $5,000.00 given by J. A. O'Brien, whom Mr. Belleghem summoned as his counsel.

Clarence Bacon told the Examiner that he saw two cars descend over the hill, one slightly behind the other. "I immediately pulled as closely to the ditch as I dared, but the car in the rear in an effort to get ahead of the one in front, pulled to its left and in doing so, struck our car."

The two cars were hauled to town by White and Ackford on Saturday night. Mr. Bacon's car was almost demolished. The engine was resting on the ground, radiator split and twisted, springs broken and no glass remained in the windshield. Blood stains could be seen on the right rear mud-guard and a cluster of fair hair was hanging from a curtain fastener on the front.

BETHANY ORANGEMEN

Eighty Members of the Order Paraded to Church Last Evening.

BETHANY, July 7. — The local Orangemen walked to church on Sunday evening, headed by the Bethany brass band. Over 80 members dressed in white coats and caps were in line. The service was held in the town hall and was conducted by the Rev. James McMullen, an old Bethany boy. He was assisted by Rev. A. Dafoe. Rev. Mr. McMullen preached an eloque and instructive sermon and advised the brethren that if they lived according to the principles of the order they represented they would not be living apart from the principles laid down by the Supreme Master, and advised each member to follow these principles, and by so doing they would make the Orange order one of the greatest assets to religious life.

The hall was comfortably filled and more would have crowded in only for the intense heat.

The male choir rendered splendid music, which was most apropriate for

DODGER

The estate of Hugo Stinnes evades 100 million dollars of taxes because the fortune goes to his widow and his children waive all claims. Such is the German law.

This is annoying to the bill collectors who are trying to compel Germany to pay further war indemnity. But, before Germany gets through paying, it is probable that she will tax the Stinnes fortune a lot more than 100 million dollars, along with heavy levies on all other large German fortunes. It depends on whether the German people get tired of carrying the burden.

FUTILE?

Nature never loafs. She is forever tearing down in one place and building up in another, the two activities balancing.

Water, falling from the clouds and working its way back to the sea, wears down mountains and carries them and the best soil of the plains along with it to the ocean.

Dr. Lewis M. Haupt says in a speech that sand is filling up some American harbors and channels faster than it can be removed by dredging. The purpose probably is to compel man to keep on working. Most of our progress is the result of trying to dodge work or make it easier.

"and they lived happily ever after"—

Harry was up against the same proposition that confronts every young man who contemplates matrimony.

He had saved sufficient money to "start:" his salary was large enough for Jean and him to live on quite comfortably; and his prospects were fair.

But—the thought that his untimely death would leave Jean unprovided for had always seemed like an insurmountable obstacle. He loved her too much to take the chance.

Then came the idea of creating an estate for her and he dropped in to see a North American Life representative.

An explanation of the North American Straight Life Policy followed and Harry was surprised to learn how low the rates were and how easily he could overcome the obstacle which barred the way to happiness.

Harry took out a $10,000 Straight Life Policy and married Jean two months later.

To-day, happily married, they hope that, like the book, their story will be—"And they lived happily ever after." Certainly Harry has done his part to make his wish come true.

You too will be surprised when you find out how remarkably low the rates are on a North American Straight Life Policy and what special provisions go with this plan.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

Canadian Stock Exchange and Mines | New York Stock Exchange and Curb Prices

TO-DAY'S QUOTATIONS AND OPINION AND REVIEWS OF THE MARKETS.

The mining market this morning showed the same reactionary tone which has been evident for some time past. The volume of trading is not on any great scale, nor is the pressure to sell incessant; but at the same time there is a lack of buyers, with the result that prices are drifting downward with no apparent bottom in sight. The mining industry does not merit such markets as we have been having, and there is little doubt but what a constructive wave of trading will set in ere long.

TORONTO MARKET.

The Toronto and Montreal markets were dull and prices were inclined to shade off fractionally. Industrial Alcohol on the Montreal board is receiving a good deal of attention since the individual rate has been raised, and there is talk of another bonus, which will put the stock on a 10 per cent. basis. There was a good deal of inquiry for Dominion Canners, and the stock acts very well.

NEW YORK MARKET.

The New York market was dull this morning. The opening was irregular and the prices were inclined to shade off, but later on the specialties swung into high ground, such as General Electric and Cast Iron Pipe, which made new highs. The market is due for a small reaction, and we consider it a splendid opportunity to pick up some good stocks.

VICTORY BONDS.

A good deal of interest is being displayed by Canadians in the issue of Victory Loan Bonds which matures next fall. To meet these bonds, the Government, of course, will float a new bond issue, just as was done last fall to meet the Victory Loan Bonds which matured on December 1st, 1923.

The principal point around which interest centres is whether the new issue of bonds will be offered to Canadian investors or whether the Government will sell the bonds in United States. Investment brokers in the latter country were eager to purchase the Refunding Loan Bonds last fall, and it is reported that they are equally eager to purchase the new issue which will be made some time during the present year.

The general impression in well-informed circles seems to be that the new Loan should be offered to Canadian investors. There will be $107,000,000 paid off this year to those who hold the maturing bonds, and unless the Government offers an immediate channel for sound re-investment, it is highly probable that a good deal of this money will reach the hands of unscrupulous promoters of one sort and another and that we in Canada will experience an unprecedented era of speculation. Furthermore, unless money is quickly reinvested there is a natural tendency to spend it needlessly.

A second factor in the situation is the desirable element of national independence in so far as financial requirements are concerned. For many years, Canada relied largely upon capital from other countries, principally Great Britain and United States, for the financing of her governments, municipalities and corporations. The War Loan and Victory Loan campaigns, however, taught us that we were well able to do the bulk of this financing ourselves, and it should be a source of national pride to know that Canada is no longer dependent upon a foreigner's purse for her financial needs.

As to the ability of Canadian investors and private investors to provide money to buy the new bonds which will probably be issued soon, it might be pointed out that savings deposits in the chartered banks have increased by about $33,000,000 since last September. This increase has taken place in spite of the fact that a Dominion Loan of $200,000,000 was sold in Canada last fall. Loans to United States by Canadian banks are also increasing each month and this seem to indicate that there are plenty of funds available for our own domestic requirements.

In this connection, it is also interesting to know that our balance of trade is heavily in favor of Canada. In other words, we export more goods than we import. In this way, we bring large sums of new money into Canada, for which of course we sell agricultoral, mineral and manufactured products. It would be unfortunate if the profit from the sale of these goods had to be sent to another country in the form of interest upon Dominion Government bonds. If last year's Dominion Government Refunding Loan had been offered in United States, we would now be paying $10,000,000 each year in interest to United States investors, instead of paying it to investors in Canada. In addition, we would have to pay the exchange premium upon American funds.

Regarding this question of keeping money at home, by borrowing from our own investors and buying Canadian-made goods, the following statement once made by Abraham Lincoln is very interesting:

"I don't know much about tariffs but I do know this. When we import goods, we get the goods and the foreigner gets the money to distribute in employment among his people as well as a profit for himself. If we make those goods here, we get the goods, we get our people employed and all the money and the profit stays in this country."

An apt paraphrase of this might be:

"I don't know much about international finance, but I do know this—if Canada borrows abroad, the interest goes each year to foreigners and eventually the principal has to be paid back to them, but when we borrow from our own people all the interest stays here to be spent among our own people to maintain employments, and to contribute towards the prosperity of the nation as a whole."

Y.M.C.A. Camp Will Invade Rotary Camp

Next Monday morning the "Y" Camp will invade the Rotary Camp via South Beach by cars, and thence under full steam in the little but noble one-cylinder motorboat Theda, the camp tug and pride.

They will stay at Camp Rotary for two weeks of joyous camp life which the well-equipped Camp Rotary affords.

Mr. McNeely is planning full and complete menu, which will keep the youthful campers filled with good things in the way of good, healthy food for growing, active boys.

About thirty boys have already lined up to go to the camp, and the registrations are coming in steadily.

Mr. McNeely hopes that by the end of the week he will have the full enlistment of a half hundred boys for his camp.

The programme, too, is working out fine, and especially the camp-fire programmes.

Mr. Dobbin will likely give some of his experiences and reminiscences of Peterborough in the days of fifty years ago.

THE Y.M.C.A. CAMP.

With the opening of the Y.M.C.A. Boys' Camp yet a week off, preparations for the annual two weeks' outing are well in hand. The motor boat "Theda" has been undergoing her spring conditioning, and is ready to do strenuous duty in the service of the boys as they journey from point to point in the lake country.

At the Sunday evening camp fire service Mr. R. J. Devey will speak to the boys. On every other evening the camp fire hour is given to the telling of stories, sing songs, etc.

This year the boys will discard the old camp yell in favor of a new.

Several new camp fire songs will be introduced, including "I Must have One More!" and "'Neath the crust of the Old Apple Pie."

Registrations are now being received at the office of the local Y.M.C.A. As the boys' camp is operated on a cost basis for the boys of the city an opportunity is provided for most boys to get a holiday that is really an outing worth while. Constant supervision is assured as an adequately balanced programme is carried through each day.

Prospects are variable in some districts reporting that hot weather and winds are causing damage to crops. VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: As a veteran of the war, when we turned out on Sunday to march to St. Peter's Cemetery, to do honor to our fallen comrades lying there, how was it we had no band? We had a band the Sunday before, and we would like to know what was the reason we did not have one yesterday. We all know bands don't get on very well with each other sometimes, but why did they not let us know so we could get another band?

AUTO SENSE

The open road is calling and every one who owns a car is planning his vacation. It is for those who wish to spend a couple of weeks in the woods that Doc prepared the "Ten Commandments."

When you leave the beaten trails in search of relaxation, you are going to call upon your car to deliver a steady flow of power under the most trying conditions, putting it to a test which will bring out its faults and weaknesses. If it fails you your vacation is spoiled. Be sure to tune it up before you start.

There are lots of things which may happen while plowing through mud or laboring over rough roads and they seem to happen when you are many miles from the nearest garage. Take along the instruction book which came with your car. If you have lost it your local agent will supply you with a new one.

Overloading is an invitation to trouble. Your car was designed to carry a certain number of passengers. The average weight of these passengers was figured out in designing every part of the car, but the springs and tires in particular. If you are obliged to carry a capacity load of passengers, do not put on a pound of baggage or camping equipment you are not obliged to have.

If you are going to camp, try roughing it like your forefathers did. An axe, coffee pot, tin cups and plates, knives, forks, spoons, butcher knife and long fork will be all you need for camp fire cooking. You can buy the little army "pup tents" for about $3, complete. They will accomodate two and are weather-proof. Cut a few leafy boughs and spread a blanket on them for a mattress. You will not catch cold as easily when sleeping on the ground as you will on a cot in the open.

A tow rope is never so useful as when on a camping trip. Here is a tip that may come in handy. If you get stuck in the mud and there is no one to pull you out, tie the end of a rope around a spoke of the rear wheel that is spinning. Give the rope a couple of turns around the hub and make the other end fast to a tree, stump, fence post or anything in reach that will stand a strain. When the wheel turns, the hub serves as a drum for the rope to wind around and will pull you out with ease.

If you insist upon packing your camping equipment on the left side, be sure that it does not extend beyond the running board. If it does, it may cause trouble in attempting to pass another car on a narrow road.

You will find the woods infested with "fee grabbers" as well as mosquitoes. If you intend to hunt and fish be sure to get the necessary licenses before you start, if such are required in the sections where you intend to camp.

It does not take much time to pick up your trash and burn it. If you do not do this you are destroying the beauty that you drove many miles to find. Cans are made of thin iron, coated with tin. If they are thrown in the fire the tin melts off and rust will have a chance to work on the iron.

Most important of all—be careful with fire. A carelessly thrown match or a deserted camp fire can cause a forest fire which will destroy thousands of dollars worth of property and perhaps trap you and your family, to say nothing of other campers who may be in the vicinity. If you have been in a forest fire you can appreciate the seriousness of one.

CHAUTAUQUA IS COMING HERE

Opens Saturday, August 2nd For 5 Big Days—A Good Programme.

The great present-day comedy, "Six-Cylinder Love"; an original musical production, "An Evening in Hawaii," and other splendid musical attractions; lectures by such headliners as Capt. T. Dinsmore Upton; unique children's entertainments; Sidney Landon, widely-known impersonator of great literary men—these are among the exceptional attractions which will appear here at the big 1924 Dominion Redpath Chautauqua, which opens August 2nd and continues for five days.

The Dunbar Male Quartet and Bell Ringers, one of the best known and most distinctive musical organizations appearing on the platform, will launch the Chautauqua on the first afternoon, with an outstanding programme of songs and bell ringing. Following a prelude by the Dunbars on the first night, a prominent lecturer, whose name will be announced later, will be heard in a lecture of popular appeal.

A popular concert given on the second afternoon by the Betty Booth Concert Company will feature costumed song presentations from favorite light operas, and other vocal selections, as well as excellent instrumental numbers. At night, following a concert by this talented company, Sidney Landon, widely known for his impersonations of famous literary men and readings from their works, will be a feature attraction.

On the third afternoon will be given an interesting entertainment-demonstration, "The Potter and the Clay," by Smith Damron, potter-craftsman.

The great modern comedy success, "Six-Cylinder Love," will be given on the third night by a cast of metropolitan actors organized especially for the Dominion Redpath Chautauquas.

On the fourth afternoon the well-known Laura Werno Ladies' Quartet will give a grand concert. Musical and dramatic selections in costume, depicting the dress, manners and songs of various historical periods, are special features of their offerings.

Following a prelude by the quartet at night, Capt. T. Dinsmore Upton, known as "The Big Brother of a Hundred Thousand Kids," will give his inspiring address, "The Four-Square Builder," which is a plea for clean, wholesome recreation for children.

On the last afternoon, following a prelude concert by Vierra's Hawaiians, Virginia Slade, entertainer and play-reader, will be heard in a miscellaneous programme consisting of a number of short sketches from the works of prominent authors, as well as cuttings from well-known plays.

"An Evening in Hawaii," original musical production presented by Vierra's Hawaiians, will be the feature of the last night. The production portrays most vividly the music and customs of Hawaii. Novel lighting and scenic effects, together with appropriate costuming and the artistry of the company, make this one of the most distinctly enjoyable numbers on the entire programme.

Three unique entertainments for children, each to be presented on a different day, will be given in addition to the regular programmes for adults. The Columbia Marionettes will give one entertainment; Ada Ruth Jones, cartoonist and story teller, another; while a third entertainment will be given by the Misses Winifred Meryhew and Ruth Hansman, who feature, in costumes, readings, sketches and songs based on juvenile story book characters.

ORANGEMEN HOLD ANNUAL PARADE

Rev. W. H. Young Urges the Members to Uphold Traditions of Protestantism.

ORANGE SERVICE.

The annual church parade of the Orange Order was held last night, about 700, representative of all the lodges in the city, with full regalia, joining in the march to George Street Methodist Church, where an Orange service was held. The Orangemen, comprising men, women, boys and girls, in separate groups, completely filled the body of the church.

Rev. W. H. Young, in an inspiring address, reviewed the history of the origin and development of Orangeism, stressing the great importance of keeping alive the great ideals upon which the order was founded, and touching upon a few of the fundamental differences between Protestantism and Catholicism.

Mr. Young, in welcoming the Orangemen, stressed the underlying principles of the Orange Order in its relation to Protestantism. "We stand for things fundamentally common. The principles of Protestantism are dear to us and irrespective of denomination, whether Presbyterians, Baptists, Anglicans or Baptists, we can worship here in perfect harmony."

Mr. A. F. Hagerman, a member of the Order, was called upon to read the scripture lesson.

It was announced that the ladies of George Street Church would serve a mid-day meal to the visiting Orangemen in the basement of the church on July 12. "Extensive preparations for an excellent repast are being made," Mr. Young assured his audience.

Rev. Mr. Young chose as his text II Thessalonians, Chap. 2:15: "Therefore brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught." The sermon was of a reminiscent character and an inspiration to the members present to uphold the principles for which their order has so long stood.

"The Orange order had its inception when political and religious feeling was at its peak in Ireland," began Mr. Young.

Old Issues Raised.

"If I were to affix a title for my remarks to-night, I would choose "Old Bones and Rotten Rags," an echo of the contentious speech of Curran, delivered in the latter half of the 18th century in an effort to discredit the Orange movement in its beginning. In looking back over the years and by tracing history, one cannot fail to see the compliment that Curran paid to all that Orangeism stands for, in directing those words to the Orange movement.

"Curran meant by those words that old issues were being raised and old ideals advocated," observed the speaker. "Through all the long and noble career of Orangeism, it has stood for great principles which must be raised eternally—old ideals which forever must be kept before us and implanted in the hearts of men."

Continuing, Mr. Young pointed out that an issue of life raised long ago and still kept to-day is patriotism. "Not cheap patriotism such as expressed by wildly talking about the Divine right to subject mankind, or adventurous conquest, merely for the love of conquest itself. Not that brand of loyalty, but there is a true and noble kind which is Godly and of which we are in dire need to-day; a brand of patriotism which will make the Empire worthy of the glorious traditions of the past."

Mr. Young, after quoting several heroic examples of patriotism, stated that Orangeism stands for patriotism in its true conception; a kind of patriotism inspiring glad service to the country under the conviction that our country's service is fundamental.

"Peace has its victories as well as war, and there are many complex fundamental problems to-day," remarked the speaker. "We are living in days when the lives of our children are being molded in a way we cannot understand. Among the many problems facing us is the problem of achieving an educational system which will do away with sectarian and private schools where children can be in common, irrespective of race, religion or wealth and taught common ideals, so that whatever else they may accomplish, they wil, learn to be Canadians first."

"We have loyalty to-day through the vision and efforts of our fathers, and if Curran meant by using the words, "Old bones and rotten rags", the observance of old ideals and the raising of old issues, then it is the old bones and rotten rags of patriotism which we need to-day.

"The principle of the open Bible is a flame of yesterday which we cannot allow to flicker out to-day," stated Mr. Young, after mentioning the stand amidst opposition, taken by those who first introduced this movement into Europe. "The heart of Orangeism embodies the fundamental principle of the open Bible, and if it is a fundamental principle of Orangism, it is a fundamental principle of Protestantism. We should endeavour to keep intact with the life of the nation the principle of the open Bible to every man, woman and child.

"There is no attempt being made by legislation to restrain Bible reading in the world to-day but there is growth of indifference to the principle of Bible reading affecting every hamlet, city and town in Christendom. There is no semblance to-day of the family devotional worship observed by our forefathers, the principle you are pledged to maintain."

Continuing, the speaker asked if the Bible is not kept open what will we have for the future, urging that all strive to make the future a resume of past custom and a recognition of the ideals of our forefathers.

In conclusion, the pastor touched upon the theory of Catholicism in regard to intercourse with God. "The Catholic relies upon others to bring God into his life and into the life of the world," remarked Mr. Young. "There is nothing between the Protestant and his God. He believes in the full, direct and unmediated intercourse with God and there are men here, who have found the open and direct way to God and directly they walk and talk with Him. We must not forget the unmediated access of the soul to God; the personal fellowship with God.

"The essence of Catholicism is that God comes through others and by your loyalty to your forefathers, the traditions of the past and your professed loyalty to the Church find out the path to God for youself."

RAPID FIRE COMEDY AT ROYAL: "TRY AND GET IT" THEME SHOWS HOW TO GET THE MONEY OWED TO YOU.

Every father is a C. B. P. (champion bill payer), but if he's the dad of an only daughter, he's more than expert at the gentle art of footing the bills. "Ask Dad—he knows." Only Daughter sits on the arm of his chair, pats his gray locks, and smiles lovingly while she tells him what a dear old thing he is. Even as he purrs, he knows that he will soon be getting out his checkbook. "Oh, well," he sighs, "it's worth it." The bills are for anything from a new cigarette holder to a new gown, or the gown shop itself.

Larry Donovan's daughter, Rhoda, was the pride of his heart, and the curse of his pocketbook. She was pretty and she knew how to dress. She knew how other people should dress. She also could shrug her shoulders in the true French manner and simulate a Parisian accent in a way that could fool even a French chef. With these accomplishments, Rhoda was not content until she had a modiste shop and a "Mme." before her name, so father had to dig down and pay up.

The modiste shop proved to be the scene of many lively adventures for both father and daughter. It is there that much of the exciting action of "Try and Get It" takes place. Joseph Kilgour, as Larry Donovan, and Billie Dove, as Rhoda, are a typical father and daughter.

"Try and Get It," which comes to the Royal Theatre for a three days' run to-day, was adapted for the screen by Jules Furthman from the Saturday Evening Post story, "The Ringtailed Galliwampus," by Eugene P. Llyle, Jr., Bryant Washburn has the principal role of a live-wire bill collector. His supporting cast, besides Joseph Kilgour and Billie Dove, includes Edward Horton, Lionel Belmore, Mme. Rose Dione, Carl Stockdale and Hazel Deane. Cullen Tate directed.

RAMON NOVARRO HAS STARDOM IN 2 YEARS.

Ramon Novarro, who plays the eading male role in Fred Niblo's production, "Thy Name Is Woman," presented by Louis B. Mayer through Metro, which is playing at the Capitol Theatre, today, Tuesday and Wednesday, has become one of the most popular of film stars in the short space of two years.

Born of Spanish parents, he was brought up in Durango, Mexico, where his family had settled on this side of the Atlantic. At an early age he gave evidence of unusual talents, being especially adept at music. When older he decided to take up the stage as a profession, and realizing that opportunities were far more numerous in the United States he came noth.

His ability as a dancer won him a place in the Marion Morgan dance troupe, and it was not long before he found himself in California. Rex Ingram saw him and put him in the role of Rupert of Hentzau in The Prisoner of Zenda." He made an instantaneous success, and his acting future was assured.

He next appeared in "Trifling Women," in which he shared honors with Barbara La Marr and Lewis Stone. This served to bring Miss La Marr and Navarro to stardom.

After that came "Where the Pavement Ends," which was his first role as a real honest-to-goodness hero. Then "Scaramouche," the big Rex Ingram special in which Novarro rose to great heights and placed himself at the head of male film stars.

"Thy Name Is Woman" is taken from Karl Schoenherr's play, the American version of which was by Benjamin Glazer, and which was put in screen form by Bess Meredyth. Victor Milner was photographer and Ben Carre art director.

AT THE REGENT.

"IN SEARCH OF A THILL" PROVES FASCINATING FILM.

Viola Dana Scores Triumph As Butterfly Excitement-Seeker in Paris.

If you enjoy being thrilled to the very marrow of your bones, if you like entertainment of an exciting nature plentifully paprika-ed with comedy, make it a point to attend the Metro melodramatic comedy, "In Search of a Thill," starring Viola Dana, that opened a 3-day engagement at the Regent Theatre to-day.

Miss Dana is adorable, and judging from the enthusiasm of audiences at the premiere, "In Search of a Thrill" is just about the most exhilarating thing she has ever done. The story, adapted to the screen by Basil Dickey from Kate Jordan's "The Spirit of the Road," that appeared in Ainslee's Magazine, is a continuous narrative of high-powered action that hits on six cylinders from the word "go." It progresses from one exciting episode to another, culminating in a thrilling fight scene in a Montmartre rendezvous of the Paris Apaches, superbly directed by Oscar Apfel, and through it all runs a fine vein of comedy, that Viola Dana does so abundantly well.

The hero is an American author, Adrien Torrens, played by Warner Baxter. They had been sweethearts once before, and now they are drawn to each other again, but Adrien's philosophy of life will not countenance Ann Clemance's reckless, frivolous pleasures. How Adrien appeals to the finer qualities of her nature, and saves her from an attempted kidnapping by a gang of Paris Apaches, is shown in "In Search of a Thrill."

CRICKET NEWS

An interesting and enjoyable game took place at the Exhibition Ground on Saturday afternoon between Peterboro C.C. and Mr. F. Dyer's XI. The day was beautifully fine though a trifle warm, which had its effect on several of the players. The wicket was somewhat fiery, the ball coming off the ground rather awkwardly at times.

Thorpe and Kingsford opened the innings for Peterboro, and were opposed to the bowling of Frank Dyer, who opened from the south end, and his brother "Reg." With only two runs registered, Kingsford was clean bowled by R. Dyer. Stuart followed on, and a stand seemed likely when "Reg" got past his guard with a ball which completely deceived him—the second wicket falling at 20. Thereafter wickets fell at regular intervals, and the innings was soon brought to a close for a total of 34 runs, Thorpe being the only batsman to reach double figures. The Dyers' shared the wickets equally between them, Frank securing five for 12 and Reg. five for 15.

Dyer's XI opened disastrously, R. Dyer being taken by Manning at deep leg off Thorpe's bowling when only one run was recorded, and Mann, in the same bowler's next over, in attempting an off drive, was stumped by Stuart after having a "life" from the wicketkeeper two balls previously, and which should have been a warning to the outgoing batsman. Two wickets were thus down for one run. The third wicket carried the total to 13, but the fourth and fifth fell with the score unaltered. Half of the wickets down for 13 was none too promising; however, the sixth wicket stand of Bishop and Malsch carried the total to 35, and, incidentally, winning the match, before a separation was effected. The score was carried to 42 when Thorpe narrowly missed the "hat" trick, taking the last three wickets at the small cost of 15 runs, an average of 1.66 apiece. If "Charlie" can pull off some of this work on the "big guns" from Toronto at the Oval on Wednesday, where Upper Canada are due to appear in an all-day match, Peterboro C.C. will have reason to feel proud, and gain confidence in putting up a stiff fight against their renowned visitors.

BRITISH SPRINTER COPPS FINAL HEAT

COLOMBES STADIUM, July 7 (Canadian Press). — Cyril Coaffe, Western Canada's crack sprinter, failed to qualify to-day for the finals of the 100 meter event at the Olympic Games. He was defeated in the second semi-final heat.

The heat was won by Harold Abrahams of Britain, who uncorked remarkable speed in the last fifty yards, after a bad start, beating Charley Paddock and Chester Bowman, of the United States, in 10 3-5 seconds, equalling the Olympic record.

Coaffee and Carr of Australia finished outside qualifiers.

A. Porritt, New Zealand, and Scholz and Murchison, of the United States, qualified in the first heat.

Hester of Canada failed in this heat.

Harrison's Homer Featured Peterboro's Win From Kingston Ponies

BATTING RALLY IN FIFTH GIVES PETES EASY WIN

Jump Into Kelly's Delivery for Six Runs and Six Hits.

FINAL SCORE IS 8 TO 3

Heckman Pitches Great Ball for Home Talent in First Start.

The fans who attended Saturday afternoon's fixture at Riverside Park which the Petes won handily by 8 runs to 3 from the first half champs, the Kingston Ponies, not only saw the Solomon brigade shake their jinx after dropping six games in a row but they had the pleasure of watching the Petes display a fury of assault in one inning that the home talent was not believed capable of and in addition the spectacle of Hap Harrison driving out the first Peterboro home run of the season, and Al Heckman displaying his old time mastery on the mound.

All of which made a very enjoyable afternoon for the home following.

The Petes who have been accused of having as little kick as a Y.M.C.A. cocktail developed a punch Saturday that was most annoying to Mr. Don. Kelly the fork-handed slab artist of the Ponies who all at once found himself involved in an avalanche of base hits. It was in the fifth inning with the score tied at 2 all that the murderous assault was made upon Mr. Kelly and when the smoke had lifted the net results were six runs and a similar number of hits of which three were double and one as already mentioned, of the Ruthian variety delivered by Hap Harrison.

The big first baseman's blow was the last of the inning, a long drive over Nickle's head in right field into the jungle of brush while the right fielder could not locate it until Harrison was over the counting station and deciding what coloured socks he would prefer when he receives the award for the first Peterboro Central League to bag a homer.

Heck's Great Work.

Al. Heckman made his first start of the season against the Ponies and outside of Batstone, who got three of the six Kingston hits and drove in all three of their runs, the Daley crew could do little or nothing with his offerings. Heck had speed and a sharp-breaking curve, with perfect control and with any luck at all he would have had a shut out, errors being responsible for two of the Kingston counters while the third one was made possible by a mix-up over a fly ball that should have been an easy out. The Petes' right-hander fanned eight of the visitors and did not issue a complimentary and his performance was a big feature of the afternoon's entertainment. The Petes fielding was not as clean cut as usual but it did not matter much in view of Heckman's great pitching and the effective hitting of the home talent.

Good support saved Kelly on more than one occasion but the fifth inning rally was too savage to be stopped by fast fielding. Cherry, Compeau and Somerville were all in the limelight with fast plays, Cherry taking care of six flies in centre and making a sensational catch of a torrid drive from Heckman's bat. Collins had the feature Peterboro play when he blocked Cherry's hard smash and threw the batter out at first.

The First Run.

The Ponies were easy in the first. Nickle and Compeau fanned and Batstone bounded to Heckman.

Holyman led off for the Petes with a single to right and when Rice threw to pick him off Holyman sprinted for second and went round to third when Purvis made a wild heave to the keystone station. Legon's long fly to right made it an easy matter to carry the first run over after which Heckman rolled to Compeau and Swanston flied to Cherry.

Somerville first up for Kingston in the second was safe on Holyman's fumble but was forced at second on Cherry's bunt to Heckman. Purvis fanned. Cherry stole second, going to third when Swanston threw into centre field. Teeple struck out, retiring the side.

For the Petes Johnston bounded to Purvis, Harrison was thrown out by Somerville and Batstone tossed out Hall.

Ponies Lead.

Kingston got two cheap runs in the third. Rice first up was safe when Harrison fumbled his roller and Kelly bunting with two strikes to him got a life on Collins' high throw. Nickle sacrificed the pair along a peg. Compeau struck out, but Batstone shot a single into right, scoring Rice and Kelly and going to third when the ball got away from Shaughnessy. Somerville fanned.

In the Petes half Shaughnessy flied out to Cherry. Collins' hard roller bounced into Somerville's chin but he recovered in time to toss out the runner. Somerville made a beautiful one-handed stop of Holyman's hard roller but tossed wide to first giving the batter a life. He was forced at second on Legon's tap to Batstone.

Collins knocked down Cherry's hard smash and got the batter at first, following this play by tossing out Purvis. Teeple beat out a roller in front of the plate but Rice popped to Holyman.

The Petes tied the score in their end of the frame. Heckman rolled to Compeau but Swanston cut a single past Somerville and went to second on Johnston's neat sacrifice. Harrison rifled a single over second scoring Swanston and taking second on the throw in. Hall flied to Nickle in right.

In the fifth for Kingston Kelly flied to Legon, Nickle lifted one to Holyman and Compeau grounded to Harrison.

The Big Inning.

Then came the big inning. Helson who had replaced Shaughnessy in right field started the fireworks by lining a single over Batstone's head. Collins followed with a long double to left. Holyman bunted and Heson slid home with the run that put the Petes in front, Holyman being safe at first. He stole second and followed Collins home when Legon doubled over Cherry's head. Heckman flied to Cherry for the first out but the Petes were not nearly through yet. Swanston continued the fusilade with a double between Cherry and Teeple scoring Legon with the fourth run of the inning. Johnston popped to Batstone for the second out and then came Harrison's mammoth drive over Nickel's head. The right fielder had not located the ball when Harrison staggered into harbour, Swanston crossing the plate ahead of him. Jimmy Hall's hard hit drive to Compeau wound up the enjoyable proceedings.

Batstone led off for Kingston in the sixth with a single just out of Johnston's reach but was forced at second on Somerville's fast grass cutter to Johnston. Cherry hit into a double play, Collins to Johnston to Harrison.

For the Petes Helson was called out on strikes, Collins flied to Cherry and the centre fielder also took Holyman's drive.

In the seventh Purvis rolled to Collins, Teeple fanned and Rice hoisted a high one to Johnston.

In the home end Legon's fly to short left centre was grabbed by Compeau, a beautiful catch and Cherry followed with a spectacular catch of Heckman's liner to centre. Swanston fouled to Batstone.

A Lucky One.

The last counter of the game was registered in Kingston's half of the eighth. Kelly was thrown out by Heckman and Nickle fanned. Compeau got a lucky double on a high fly to right. It should have been Jimmy Hall's ball but the centre fielder was slow in starting and Johnston ran back and failed to make the catch. Batstone followed with a single to centre scoring Compeau after which Collins tossed out Somerville.

Johnston rolled to Purvis, Harrison fanned and Hall grounded to first in the home half.

Cherry was thrown out by Swanston to start the ninth. Gallagher batted for Purvis and singled to centre but Daley hitting for Teeple was out on a roller in front of the plate and Rice's tap to Johnston ended the game.

OULETTE HURLS BELLEVILLE TO WIN AT OSHAWA

SCORE WAS 9 TO 2

Tyson's Split Finger and Murray's Broken Rib Marred Proceedings.

OSHAWA, July 7 (Special to The Examiner). — In baseball language "three times and you're out" was upheld in the Central Ontario Amateur Baseball League second section race here on Saturday afternoon, when Belleville, with 'Iron Man" Oulette workin- on the rubber, handed Oshawa its third defeat out of six starts in which these teams have clashed.

Oshawa in the first round of the first section won both ends of home and home games from the Bay of Quinte team, but in the second the railroaders put the skids under Oshawa, and took both ends of home and home games ,and counting the six innings tie game, they have an edge with three wins and a tie in the six games played to date.

In Saturday's game the railroaders went after Dainty in the first time at bat, and before the nine frames were over they had garnered 14 safe hits, which included a two and a three base wallop, and when they were through for the afternoon nine runs were hung up on the scoreboard.

Oulette, who worked for Belleville, let Oshawa down with seven hits and kept them so well scattered that the Dainty-Tyson gang could only chase one run over in the first and another in the third.

Two Casualties.

Oshawa suffered two casualties in the afternoon. Tyson received a split finger on his throwing hand, and retired in favour of "Toots" Ward, the Peterborough boy.

In the sixth Mickey Murray, who was coming into home, broke a rib sliding across the plate, and Doctors Bell and Cameron rendered first aid, after which he was removed to the hospital.

BELLEVILLE HERE FOR JULY TWELFTH

Petes' Old Rivals Will be at Riverside Park for Saturday's game.

The Petes broke their losing streak on Saturday by taking a clean cut fall out of the first half winners, the Kingston Ponies and the crew are now full of fight for their games this week, both of which are with Belleville. The Petes go to the Quinte city on Wednesday and the Belleville crew will be here to spend the Twelfth of July on Saturday, the game being called a little later than usual to give everyone a chance to see the parade first. This week's series should be a tough battle between the two old rivals and the way things are shaping up now Saturday's game may decide the leadership for the time being. A Belleville Peterboro game is usually full of excitement and the Twelfth of July fixture should be no exception. Saturday's game will be the last home game in two weeks as the Petes are away with games in Kingston and Oshawa.

"Red" Batstone's three hits Saturday gave the Kingston third baseman a good lead on Heckman, the Pete's leading batter going hitless for the first time in eight games.

Kelly was left in to finish Saturday's game, Manager Daley figuring it was no use wasting another pitcher with a score of 8-2 against his team. And the southpaw retired the side in order in the last three frames.

Cherry, Kingston's centre fielder, is one of the best outfielders in the league and his work Saturday was up to his best standard.

Manager Solomon shook up his batting order and the change seemed to bring the desired results.

CLARENCE DE MAR OF BOSTON, WHO TRAINS HIMELF AND REFUSES TO DIET IS U. S. BEST OLYMPIC BET

CLARENCE DE MAR

BOSTON, July 7.—Times have changed since the individual shaving mug and the Ascot tie were in fashion.

For instance, it is no longer a positive crime to christen the young hopeful Clarence.

A Clarence no longer indicates a passion for pink sodas and croquet, and credit for lifting the unjustly maligned name to a position of dignity and respect belongs to a middle-aged Boston printer, by name Clarence De Mar.

It may be that Clarence De Mar likes his jink sodas and plays an occasional round of croquet, but also he happens to be America's greatest marathon runner as well as the country's chief reliance in the Olympic struggle.

You don't find many faint-hearted weak-willed or poorly conditioned men going out for the marathon with its gruelling distance of 26 miles 385 yards.

Freak of Olympic Team

De Mar is the most unique figure on the American team, unique in the sense that he is absolutely his own trainer and boss. De Mar has a style all of his own. He runs with a vigorous leg swing, much after the fashion of a sprinter. At no time does he seem to be taking matters easy, which is the approved custom of the long distance runner.

De Mar is not on a training diet, as are the other Olympic performers. He eats what and when he pleases. Diets have never meant anything in the Boston man's life. He has been running for 15 years a common ailment among marathoners, and has never had a stomach pain.

Acting on the theory that you can't teach an old settler to use a finger bowl the Olympic coaches have turned De Mar loose to do as his fancy dictates. They realize they are running no big risk. As recent as last April De Mar set a new world's record for the marathon, winning the Boston run in 2 hours 29 minutes 40 1-5 seconds.

Will Meet Old Rival

The old record of 2 hours 32 minutes 34 4-5 seconds was held by Hannes Kohlemainen, the great Finn, who, incidentally, will be his most dangerous rival at Paris.

De Mar first broke into the limelight in 1911 when he won the Boston marathon in record time for the local event. The following year he went to Stockholm with the Olympic team but finished far back with the also rans. Discouraged he gave up running and remained out of athletics until he found himself in the army during the war.

De Mar is slightly built, almost frail, and is a printer by trade. Also he is the troop master of the largest squad of Boy Scouts in Melrose, Mass., and the teacher of the largest Sunday school class in the same neighboring Boston village.

It is hardly necessary to add that the young citizenry of the community are more than mildly interested in the outcome of the Olympic marathon.

KILTIES LEAD COBOURG BALL

Softball League Second Group is Led by Baltimore Orioles.

TWELVE TEAMS

COBOURG, July 7.—The following is the result of the Softball League games so far this season: The Kilties are leading in Group 1, having won four games and lost none. The Hydro Sparks and the K. of C. have each won two and lost one. The B.Y.F.U. have won two and lost two, the All Stars have won one and lost three, and the Rotary Club occupies the cellar position, having been beaten every time.

Group 2, which has six teams also, is led by the Baltimore Orioles, who have won three games and lost none. Next comes the Sheiks with three wins and only one defeat. The C.N.R. stands with two wins and two losses, and the Dye Works with one win and two losses. The Heavy Battery and Longslow, Ltd., are tied, each having won one and lost three. Interest still centres in the work of the Softball League, and there are many exciting games.

OLD HOME WEEK RACING EVENTS

RACING RESULTS

LINDSAY, July 7. (Special.) — Lindsay's Old Home Week came to a close on Saturday afternoon with a bill of horse races in the Agricultural Park. The attendance was large, but not up to the expectations of the executive, who banked on a big gate in order to cover the expenses of the week. The crowd got its money's worth in the, excellent programme of races, the 2:15 race being the finest ever seen on the local track.

E. E. Lebarr, of Belleville, starter, got in wrong with a portion of the crowd in starting the second heat of the 2.25 class, with Daisy Onward of Cooksville, lagging in the rear. The demonstration was so pronounced that the crowd refused to give him a hearing, and James B. Begg, clerk of the course, had to appeal to the element to show fair play.

The starter gave as his reason for the action that Daisy Onward deliberately lagged, and claimed that it would be unfair to penalize the three other horses.

The result of the races was as follows:

2.15 Class—
Vera Gratton, Porter Brechin 1 1 1

THE THISTLES AVENGED THEIR LEAGUE DEFEAT

SCORE WAS 3 TO 1

Woollens Compelled the Thistle Forwards to Play the Swinging Game.

The Thistles avenged their league defeat of a few Saturdays ago by by trouncing the Woollens 3 to 1 in a soccer game played at the Oval on Saturday afternoon, before a good at tendance of spectators.

Ross at left back gave an excellent account of himself, as did also Gaskill for the Woollens.

Game Described.

Capt. Dawson won the toss and decided to kick into the east goal with the sun at his and team-mates' backs. Burgess and Richmond came into prominence right away. Dawson punted out to the outside left, who was tackled by Cridland, but the jug player crossed to Richmond. Chambers tried to intervene as the Thistle centre centre forward let drive for goal; Hillman saved but he had to admit defeat from the return shot.

Dundas' Nice Tries.

From the centre kick, Dundass travelled along the wing, outwitted the defence by his long drive from twenty yards out that Curtis cleared, and no more. Play went to the other end again, when the Thistle forwards were very erratic at shooting for goal. Monkman cleared and went down into the Thistles' area, along with the youthful outside left. While on the run, the Woollens man again gave Curtiss a fright by his long fast shots.

Beautiful Combination.

Time and again, McPhail and Melville would show their tactics with the ball and they found Sawyers at left half no easy mark when travelling into goal, although the Jags obtained two well placed corners by McPhail that was cleared by the Woollens' defence pair. Richmond came within an ace of scoring on his own when he dribbled past two opponents' cut in, and letting drive from an angle, the ball went right across the goal to go outside the line. Still pressure continued, and again Hillman, along with his full backs frustrated attack after attack that was well-planned by the Scots' forwards.

Curtis' Good Goal-keeping.

Chambers sent a long drive across to Gaskill on the right and wasting no time Joe had the ball in front of Thistles' goal when Curtis ran out to first clear, Wyllie caught on to bang the ball against the goal-keeper, who was knocked out hors-de-combat. After a little attention he resumed, feeling very groggy, and had to be on the alert to save the shots that Woollens peppered him with for the next ten minutes. Although leading by one goal at half time, there was no superiority between the teams.

Half time: Thistles 1, Woollens 0.

Half Time.

On resuming, the play opened up at a fast pace, both teams indulging in the long passing game, except Dawson, who at times overdid the splendid individual play when a timely pass would have been more productive, although from a spectator's viewpoint it was beautiful to watch. Gaskill, on Woollen's extreme right, had a field day because Middleton did not appear on the second half, which left the Thistles with only ten men for the rest of the game.

Chambers' and Cridland's Good Defence.

Richmond was always on the move to get within shooting range but the Woollens' defence held him very closely to the ball, in fact, robbing him at the critical point of shooting. Melville, noticing the defence tactics, altered the style of play to long swinging passes.

After give-and-take tackle between Woollens' players and Thistles on the right wind, Melville swinging the ball across to the other wing, Burgess trapped it nicely to beat Read. He lifted the sphere over his head and swinging his right foot sent a beautiful cross to Melville; quick as a flash he jumped into mid air to meet the cross that was headed past Hillman for the second goal. A few minutes later the same forward repeated the same performance except that his parting shot missed the cross bars by inches.

Ross's Excellent Defence.

To fill up the vacancy of the left half, Ross at left back covered a lot of ground during the ninety minutes. He. He tackled clean, stuck with the issue at all times in every raid on his defence, and always had the better of the argument, as he punted clear with his left foot.

Sometimes he was away up on the forwards to prevent his opponents gaining any advantage over him and placing his adversaries in the delicate position—offsides—which spoiled many a determined Woollens' attack.

Warde Scored

Warde was now playing centre-forward and gained a goal all on his own from tht clever play by Wyllie on the right. Anderson tackled the two players to gain possession, but Wyllie lifted the ball over the full-back's head that left Warde to apply his cranium to the ball that gave Curtis no chance whatever to save the dropping shot. There was no player on the field more productive than Gaskill, but it was pitiful to view such splendid endeavors go a-begging, as Curtis cleared easily the dangerous shots. At the other end, Sawyers gave away a free kick for handling, just outside penalty area. Dawson let drive across the field and to everybody's surprise Melville tapped the ball past Hillfor the third goal. Near the finish Chambers got away with a clear field and looked like scoring until Anderson came out to meet the on-coming player and clear. The whistle sounded shortly afterward.

WESTON'S DOUBLE BEAT ROSENEATH

Campbellford Defeated the Northumberland League Leaders in Exciting Game Saturday.

SCORE WAS 5 TO 4.

(By a Staff Reporter).

ROSENEATH, July 7.—Campbellford defeated the Roseneaths, leaders of the Northumberland Baseball League, here Saturday by a 5-4 score in one of the best games ever seen on the local grounds. It was Weston, who has not been able to play for a month, owing to an injury, who went in as a pinch hitter when the score was tied at the end of the eighth, and lined out a two-bagger that drove in Nesbitt from second with the winning run.

The score was four to four and the Roseneaths were still working hard for victory when Campbellford went to bat for their last chance, the first half of the ninth. Nesbitt got to first on a bad throw to catch him at first, and stole second. Then Scott was retired. Weston, who had been watching the game from the players' bench, dressed in civilian clothes, and wearing a pair of tan shoes, put on a cap and went to the plate to bat instead of Shillinglaw, Manager Davidson and the other players being satisfied that if any one could break the tie, Weston was the man.

The majority of the pitchers in the League generally try to pass Weston rather than risk a hit, but not so Leach, who was in the box for Roseneath. The first ball pitched was a strike, the next went wide, but Weston landed on the third. The ball sailed high over the head of Moore in centre field, and Weston got to second, Nesbitt crossing the plate with the run that proved the winner. It was a long hit, but the fleet foot Moore got the ball back to the plate almost in time to catch the runner. The side was out when Blakely was retired.

The Roseneaths made a desperate attempt to pull the game out of the fire in their half of the ninth. B. Thackeray was thrown out at first by Scott, but J. Baker made that base when Poyser dropped his fly over the bag. Then Armstrong fell in vain for three of Scott's fast ones.

William Montgomery, a member of the team, and one of the best batters, but who was not in the game, went in as a pinch hitter for H. Baker, with a do-or-die air. He did land on a curve with a wicked swing, driving the sphere high into centre field, but Weston got under it after a hard run through the tall grass, and Roseneath's hopes vanished.

Scott faced the Roseneaths for the first time this season and put a crimp in the heavy hitting of players who are recognized as the best batting nine in the League, and who have slugged themselves to the first place in the race. Only two hits were registered against the Campbellford man, these being made by Davey and Bates, the star infielders, and both hits were of the scratch variety. Scott struck out 10 men and gave only one pass to first.

Leach was not far behind Scott in the pitching records, the tally against him being six hits, but four of these were for extra bases, Poyser making a double and a triple, and Holmes and Weston each a two-bagger. Not one of the Campbellford men went to first on a pass. Armour, Campbellford's best catcher was not in the line-up, so that the work behind the bat was taken by Holmes, who caught for six, and Neshitt who relieved him for the rest of the game.

Roseneath was first to get a man on first, and that was not until the third inning, when Davey reached that bag on an error. He stole second, and got home on a wild pitch.

It was in the fifth that the Roseneaths scored their other three runs. After H. Baker had fanned and R. Thackeray had been thrown out at first by Scott, Leach drew a pass. Davey and Bates followed with the only two hits of the game, and all three men scored. Then the Roseneath fans waved their hats in the air, bright millinery of the ladies being prominently in the display, and united in a yell of victory. But that ended the run-getting for the home team.

Campbellford made two runs in the fourth when Eagleson singled and Poyser drove a double to right, Holmes sending them both home with a two-bagger. Two more batters came in in the eighth, tying the score. Iby got to first when Davey booted his grounder, and scored on Poyser's three-bagger to centre. Poyser scored on Hume's sacrifice to second.

It was a slugging match from start to finish, and it was nothing but the sharp fielding on both sides that kept down the score.

J. Baker made what looked like a safe hit in the second but Hume ran in from deep right and caught the ball when it was not more than a foot from the ground.

Six of the Campbellford players sent flies to centre field where Moore had scarcely to leave his tracks to get them, and he froze to every one.

Scott's cannon ball delivery is hard to handle, but Nesbitt took care of them for three innings without a slip. The score:

MONAGHAN DEFEAT SCOTT'S CORNERS

South Monaghan Nine Turn in Nice Game and Wallop Corners For a 6 to 0 Score.

On Friday, July 4th, Scott's Corners and South Monaghan clashed in a five innings game. The Monaghan boys were too strong for Scott's Corners and they won handily by the score of 6 to 0. It was a good game and the score stood four to nothing until the last innings, when the visitors clouted the ball for two more counters. South Monaghan scored three in the first, one in the second and two in the fifth, while the boys from the Corners went scoreless in every innings of the game. Foster pitched a nice game for the Corners, but was given rather ragged support and in the last innings it was getting rather dark and hard to find the plate. Hutchison, for the victorious crew, worked in great style and fanned the Corners' boys as fast they came up to the plate. After the game supper was served by the ladies of Scott's Corners and a pleasant evening was spent. The teams lined up as follows:

Paul In Possession

By RUBY AYRES

Copyright, 1924, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate

The story thus far:

When John Collinge died, he left behind him his adopted daughter, Wanda Griffin, a headstrong, passionate and overbearing girl, and his son Paul, with whom he had quarrelled, and who had gone abroad. After the death, Paul comes home for the reading of the will, and to Wanda's surprise she finds she is disinherited, and that he is the heir. Paul dislikes Wanda intensely because of her behaviour, and tells her that she must leave the house immediately; she refuses and, in order to stay there, pretends to be ill. At last matters reach a crisis, and Paul orders Wanda out of the house. She goes up to London with Mrs. Garnet, her one friend, with whom she is to live. The day after Wanda arrives Clare's brother, Harry, the black sheep of the family, arrives unexpectedly.

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT.

XX—AN UNEXPECTED VISITOR.

"Have you come to stay?" she inquired as she watched him take off his hat and coat. "Because Clare never told me she expected you."

"She doesn't expect me," he answered candidly. "I always do things like this. I haven't seen her for about three years, so perhaps you had better go and break the glad news to her."

Wanda hesitated.

"She may be asleep," she said doubtfully.

"Wake her up then," he advised cheerfully. "And, anyway, I want some breakfast."

Wanda went along the passage to Clare's door and knocked. She had to knock three times before there was any reply then a sleepy voice bade her enter.

Clare was lying half buried in lace pillows and pink satin bows.

"Up and dressed already! What is the matter? Couldn't you sleep? Why, it's only just after seven."

"I know." Wanda dragged back one of the curtains from the window with a ruthless hand. "Windows all shut? How on earth do you breathe?" she demanded truculently. "Well, I got up to go for a walk. I'm used to getting up early in the country. But I only got as far as the door because I met a man."

"A man! Wanda, please talk sense."

"I am. I met a man who says he is your brother, and he's in the dining-room at this present moment ramping round because there isn't any breakfast. I don't know where the maid is, but—Clare, what on earth is the matter?"

Clare was sitting up now; sleep seemed abruptly to have deserted her.

"A man who says he is my brother?" she repeated in a tragic voice.

Wanda nodded. "Yes. He's good-looking, too, but he told me he was the black sheep of the family, and that he hadn't seen you for three years."

Clare got out of bed and began to put on her dressing gown with hands that shook.

"He can't stay here. I won't have him. Wanda, he's a dreadful man! I've never told you about him before because, in a way, I'm ashamed of him, and yet I'm fond of him, too! Oh, the trouble I've had with him! He's been in prison once, and five years ago his wife divorced him. I paid his fare to Australia to get him out of the country, and I hoped that that would be the last of him. I can't have him here. I can't."

"Why not? There's plenty of room." Wanda felt that the black sheep might prove to be an asset to what she knew was going to be a hopelessly dull menage.

"I like him. I'm going to get him some breakfast," she added.

"Wanda!"

Wanda only laughed.

"I can make tea and boil eggs, and I should like some myself."

Clare collapsed on the side of the bed.

"I'll come and speak to him," she said at last, shakily. "But, oh! what a time of night to arrive!"

"Night! Why, in the country they have done a day's work by seven", Wanda protested.

They went across the dining-room together and found Clare's brother sitting on the edge of the table smoking a cigarette.

"Hullo, Clarey!" he said, as casually as if he had only parted from his sister the day before. He got up and kissed her cheek.

"Not pleased to see me, eh?" he asked.

"It's such a shock. Such a surprise. Why have you come?"

He shrugged his shoulders and glanced at Wanda deprecatingly; and suddenly realizing that she might be in the way, she said:

"I'll go and boil the kettle," and departed.

SIGN PEACE PACT UNDER THE LEAGUE

ROME, July 7 (Canadian Press). —Premier Mussolini and Dr. Kybal, Czecho-Slovakian Minister to Italy, on Saturday signed a pact for cordial collaboration between the two countries, which was agreed upon by Mussolini and Dr. Benes, Foreign Minister of Czecho-Slovakia, on 18th May.

The pact will be registered with the League of Nations. Its essential basis is represented by rigid principle with respect to treaties. Italy believing that treaties, even though in some parts defective, must be maintained and adhered to, as any attempt to change them might risk disturbances of the state of peace toward which the Italian Government wishes to co-operate.

MRS. ELIZABETH DESAUTEL

The death occurred at 11 o'clock this morning, at her home, 40 George street, after a lingering illness, of Elizabeth Fitzgerald, widow of the late Damase Desautel, who pre-deceased her a little over a year ago. The deceased, who was born in Tipperary, Ireland, had been a resident of the city for many years, and was well known and respected by a large circle of friends. She was in her 74th year.

Survivors are five sons: David, of Los Angeles, Richard and Joseph, of Chicago, Gerald of Toronto and Edward of Peterboro, and three daughters, Mrs. Ellen Foley of Peterboro, Annie of Toronto, and Mabel at home. A brother Michael Fitzgerald of Rochester, N.Y. also survives.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 40 George street, on Thursday morning, with mass at the Sacred Heart Church at nine o'clock, and interment in St. Peter's Cemetery.

DR. ROBERTSON TO REVIEW CASES FOR ROTARIANS

Will Be Here Wednesday Night to Inspect Children in Need of Help.

THE BIG CARNIVAL.

Reg. Fox Tells Rotarians Today of Development of the Dun Agency.

At to-day's luncheon of the Peterboro Rotary Club, Rotarian Dr. A. W. McPherson announced that Dr. Robertson of Toronto, wuld review sixteen cases in connection with the Crippled Children's work of the club on Wednesday evening of this week and upon his counsel future treatment would depend. It was likely that some five of the children have to be sent to the Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto, while in the other cases treatment could be given locally.

Much was heard to-day about the Rotary carnival and Rotarian Jack Seels, announced preparations as going ahead with a vengeance and warned the member there would be work for everybody. He announced a important meeting of all the chair men at the Empress Hotel, to-morrow evening.

The speaker to-day was Rotarian Reg. Fox, who gave a paper based on his classification as representative of R. G. Dun and Company. Rotarian Fox's interesting description of the development of this great mercantile agency, from one room with half a dozen clerks copying out reports in longhand 83 years ago to the present world wide organization with hundreds of agencies and employing over 10,000 people, was listened to with close attention as his hearers caught the romance of this growth allied as it is with trade developments in various parts of the world. The speaker showed what a great part credit played in carrying on business and the necessity of confidence as provided by a thorough inquiry by a reliable mercantile agency whose information could be trusted implicitly. Most of the facts he gave as to the development of the great Dun machinery was new to Rotarians and his paper was of unusual interest on that account.

Arnold Spencer, a young violinist of great promise, played brilliantly Corelle's Sonata No. 9 and in response to the applause gave a finished rendition of Drdla's "Souvenir".

Rotarian J. W. McDermid presided to-day and there was a large attendance with a number of visitors.

DECORATION DAY HELD ON SUNDAY

War Veterans Association Paraded to St. Peter's Cemetery to Decorate the Graves.

The annual decoration parade of the Great War Veterans' Association took place yesterday afternoon to St. Peter's Cemetery, the veterans yesterday performing the same duty for their comrades buried in the Roman Catholic cemetery as they carried out last Sunday for those who rest in the Little Lake burying ground.

In the dust and heat of a real July Sunday, the men marched, as they did in other days through the dust of France and Flanders, when the men who sleep quietly now in God's Acre probably marched beside them. From the years that have passed into memory now must rise up for these marching veterans many a scene alien to Canadian eyes. Possibly as they trudge along, they see the poppies that grow between little white crosses where other war "buddies" have their last resting-place, far across the sea, or possibly their memories are like those of Major Winterbottom yesterday, when he spoke of one of those lads, found in a shell-hole, wounded and suffering, who thought first of his comrades, rather than of himself.

Whatever their memories, they trudged manfully, led by Major J. Winterbottom, M.C. (bar) and D.C.M., with the standard bearer in Comrade Stewart, down the two and a half miles, through the heat, to the Cemetery, there to decorate with a few flowers, "just to keep their memory green," the places in God's Acre where those others, less fortunate than they, lie quietly. The Last Post sounded over the green graves, twelve in number, where veterans of the Great War lie waiting for the last great Summons of all.

Rev. P. Costello, chaplain of the regiment, spoke feelingly to the eighty or more veterans, many in uniform, many more in mufti, who gathered about him, with a crowd of reverent men and women, as he harked back to the days when the dead men and their comrades fought for the cause of freedom. Every word of Father Costello's, delivered with heartfelt sincerity and impressive earnestness, was listened to with deep attention by his audience. It was not in stereotyped, hackneyed words that he recalled the sufferings and the valor of the soldiers of the Great War, but in accents that caused their sacrifices to live once again, with the mists of intervening years wiped from the bright surface of their shining shields. Men do not die in vain who can bring from the silent grave a message of courage and endurance and hope such as that voiced for them yesterday by the reverend speaker, who referred to their constancy, the sacrifices they made in the cause of right, and adjured on his hearers their duty in following the example of self-sacrifice afforded by their dead and gone comrades. To live as a credit to the Dominion for which their fellows had given their lives was incumbent on those who had been fortunate enough to return alive, said Father Costello, who spoke in eulogistic terms also of the work being done by the Great War Veterans' Association in caring for the denendents of dead and disabled soldiers.

Major Winterbottom and Rev. J. I. O'Brien, pastor of the Sacred Heart Church, who was present also, spoke briefly, Father O'Brien referring to his own action in volunteering for service in war time.

DIVER WORKING AT CLEAR LAKE

Gordon Northey Roams Bottom of Clear Lake and Finds Outboard Motor.

Yesterday Gordon Northey, an experienced diver, who is at present visiting friends in Lakefield, dived for and recovered from the bottom of Clear Lake an outboard motor, the property of the Peterborough Canoe Company, which has been resting safely in the Lake since it slipped from one of the boats of the company last year.

A number of boats belonging to the Peterborough Canoe Company are maintained as a livery at Juniper Island during the summer season, and it was an outboard motor from one of these that found a safe anchorage in the lake just opposite Big Island last summer.

The motor is worth about $185.00, and all the metal parts being constructed of stainless steel, it was found that not a particle of rust had collected on the motor during the long sojourn in the water.

Gordon Northey is a professional diver, who had four years' service with the Government during war time.

THE BAND FAILED PARADE YESTEDAY

Decoration of Graves at St. Peter's Cemetery Carried Out Without Band.

Mr. S. Whatley, secretary of the local branch of the G.W.V.A., and chairman of the Band Committee, when asked to-day why the band failed to turn out for yesterday's parade to St. Peter's cemetery, where the graves of departed comrades were decorated, replied that the reason the band was not present is because "They refused to turn out."

All arrangements for the band had been made some days ago, but Sunday morning Mr. Whatley was notified indirectly that the band would not turn out. Mr. Whatley did not take this information seriously until a few minutes to two o'clock yesterday afternoon, when he called up Bandmaster Peryer, and was advised that the band would not turn out. The reason given by Bandmaster Peryer was that the men objected to parading two Sundays together.

It was then too late to secure the services of another band although Commandant A. Smith of the Salvation Army, would have provided a band had he been notified in time.

The order for the band to parade was given by Lieut.-Col. Frank Bradburn, and the chairman of the Band Committee.

The Veterans feel they should have been notified earlier of the Band's intention, so they could have made other arrangements. The matter is to be discussed at a meeting of the Band Committee.

What Took Premier MacDonald to Paris

PARIS, July 7th. — The French Foreign Office declined to comment on the sudden decision of the British premier to come to Paris. Officials refused to say whether it was on his own initiative or in response to an invitation from his French Colleagues. The latter supposition is regarded in political quarters as the more probable since M. Herriot is the most interested party in the incident of the memorandum which accompanied the British invitation to conference, as that incident is likely to bring on an attack in the Senate from the Opposition.

Government circles have been much exercised -- to what might happen in the Senate to-morrow.

HERRIOT CALLS ON MACDONALD AS PEACEMAKER

British Commons Mystified When Prime Minister Rushes to Paris.

STORM IN TEA CUP

Other Three Allies Saw No Reason for Misunderstanding of France.

LONDON, July 8.— (Canadian Press.)— Prime Minister McDonald surprised the House of Commons yesterday by the announcement that misunderstandings which had arisen with the French Government over invitations to the Inter-Allied Conference at London, had decided him to accept the suggestion of Premier Herriot of France to pay a hurried visit to Paris in order to smooth out the difficulties.

The members of the House were evidently uneasy and mystified. Both former Premier Herbert H. Asquith and former Premier Stanley Baldwin, leaders respectively of the Liberals and Conservatives, confessed themselves perplexed by Mr. MacDonald's statement, Mr. Asquith declaring himself "bewildered regarding what has happened and what is going to happen." Both called for immediate publication of the terms of the memorandum included in the invitations to the Allied Powers to attend the proposed conference.

The Prime Minister's explanation was that the memorandum simply amounted to the minutes of the conversations at Chequers, which har been communicated to the French Foreigen Office in conformity with the usual procedure, after M. Herrit's visit, and that as it was the outcome of the French Premier's visit to London, it had not been considered to send a formal invitation to France.

Mr. MacDonald insisted that there will be nothing binding upon either Government in the Chequers discussions, but that both Governments had been left with complete freedom. His description of the misunderstanding which had arisen as "a storm in a teacup," however, failed to carry conviction to most of the members of the House and it became evident that when the Prime Minister again met the House on Thursday, he would be subjected to searching questions.

Bring in Germany.

The British Premier admitted that he had made the suggestion to M. Herriot that the conference, when it met, should fix an appointed day in August and September on which the experts' report should be put into complete operation. He further emphasized the urgency of obtaining an agreement in the proper form, signed, sealed and delivered, for putting the Dawes report into operation, which, he said, would necessitate Germany's signature. He maintained that something more than a mere legal document ought to be obtained from Germany.

Germany's signature, the Prime Minister continued, should carry real moral obligation and not mere forced assent. Therefore, he added, it has been suggested that "when the time comes we should be able to have a discussion with the German delegates."

This, Mr. MacDonald intimated, had been suggested to M. Herriot but there had been no agreement on the matter, and M. Herriot had gone away with his hands perfectly free.

Throughout the statement the Prime Minister continually emphasized his assertion that nothing could possibly be agreed to without the consent of France and he maintained that Belgium, Italy and Japan had not been able to see any justification for the misunderstanding which had arisen in Paris.

REDISTRIBUTION BILL

Will Likely Be Presented to the House Tomorrow for Discussion.

OTTAWA, July 8.—(Canadian Press).—It is now regarded as probable that a redistribution bill will be presented to the House of Commons by Wednesday. There was another meeting of the Committee last night and this is likely to bring discussion to a head. There are still sharp differences over Ontario, and it is not improbable that the bill, which is presented to the House will represent the views of the majority of the Committee only. If that should turn out to be the case, it will mean in all likelihood that the bill will be opposed vigorously in the House and result in lengthening the session correspondingly.

Two Bandits Held Up Messenger Boy Of 13

MONTREAL, July 8. — Two bandits seized a butcher messenger while he was on his way to the bank from his master's shop in the north end of the city yesterday, blindfolded him, dragged him into a nearby lane, and then robbed him of $87. Young Rickard was so badly bruised about the head that he had to be taken to the hospital for treatment.

COWBOYS RULE CALGARY AGAIN

Great Stampede Opened With Gorgeous Parade and Dense Crowds.

REGULAR COWTOWN

CALGARY, Alta., July 8.—(Canadian Press).—Green, yellow and blue shirts, gorgeously colored neckerchief of cowboys, tossing feathers of Indian chiefs, blaring bands, decorated floats, Red River carts—the great stampede parade of 1924 — marched over Calgary's downtown streets yesterday morning between closely packed rows of the biggest street crowds ever assembled in the city.

Led by Fire Chief James Smart, marshal of the parade the procession event outshone that of 1923 which had heretofore held the palm for such spectacles in Calgary.

The entire city reverted once more to the old cow town days and cowboys and prancing horses were the chief attraction of the big parade.

Wife Refused To Rub His Back; He Kills Her

Italian Laborer Then Calmly Eats Breakfast—Children's Cries Bring Police.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Because she refused to rub his back, which was giving him pain, Gaetano De Vito, an Italian laborer, stabbed his wife to death in their apartment at 565 Union Street, Brooklyn. The crime was committed in the presence of their two children. After killing the woman De Vito calmly finished his breakfast and awaited the police.

De Vito told the police he had hurt his back. He asked his wife to rub him to drive away the pain. Mrs. De Vito was sleepy and told him to rub it himself. A quarrel resulted and in a rage De Vito seized a knife and slashed his wife across the neck twice. Mrs. De Vito fell to the floor and the children screamed.

Neighbors, attracted by their cries, called a policeman and summoned an ambulance from the Holy Family Hospital. Dr. Annunciato pronounced Mrs. De Vito dead on his arrival. De Vito was arrested and later arraigned in Flatbush Police Court. He was held without bail for examination on a charge of homicide.

UTILIZES SHORN LOCKS

VICTORIA, B.C., July 8.—(Canadian Press).—A new use has been found for the locks shorn in process of bobbing and it remained for a Chinese woman to find that use. Jung Bo, wife of a prominent Chinese merchant of Victoria, returned to this city recently with bobbed hair, a most unusual style for a Chinese woman. But she carried her shorn tresses in the shape of an exquisite picture of Macoa Harbor, embroidered on silk with her own hair, working at the picture while on board and finishing it two days before this port was reached. The necessary relief in the picture was obtained by the use of white hair, for which one of the stewards sacrificed a lock of his "pompadour."

But Mrs. Jung Bo had another claim to distinction. Garbed in a magnificent kimona of ultra-marine blue silk, she wore at wrists, throat and ankles, heavy gold bands which held pendant $20 gold pieces. A conservative estimate placed the face value of these ornaments at $2,000, for the gold pieces alone amounted to $1,000, exclusive of the bands.

CIVIL SERVANTS SHOULD PROVIDE FOR DEPENDENTS

BURDEN ON COUNTRY

Many Men Are Most Valuable at Retiring Age Because of Experience.

OTTAWA, July 8.— (Canadian Press.)—A bill amending the Public Service Retirement Act by extending the operation of the Act until the 31st of March, 1925, passed the committee stage in the House of Commons last night. Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the opposition, criticized the regulations requiring men to retire at the age of 70, when many of them were perfectly fit for work. He spoke of the load which the superannuation act was going to place upon the taxpayers of this country. It would be "an increasing burden as years go on—a burden entailed in many instances in support of people perfectly able to earn their own living." There was criticism from opposition benches on the required retirement at the age of 70.

Hon. J. A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance, said the Government had no desire to retire anyone who was doing his work ably.

L. H. Martell (Liberal, Hants), agreed with Mr. Meighen as to the disadvantages of the arbitrary age for retirement. Canada was assuming "a grievous burden of civilized pensions."

Mr. Martell took the ground that the majority of persons entering the Civil Service shold be required to provide for their own dependents. He also said that some men of seventy were more valuable, because of the experience gathered over a long period of years, than those forty years their junior.

R. J. Woods (Progressive, Dufferin) supported Mr. Martell. As a general prinicple he was opposed to retiring allowances. In the case of Civil servants who had not been in receipt of more money than would enable them to get along, he thought a superannuation allowance might be granted. But those civil servants who were in receipt of good salaries should be required to make provision for their old age and their dependents. He agreed with Mr. Martell that some men of 75 or even older were valuable civil servants.

Hon. H. H. Stevens (Conservative, Centre Vancouver) objected that the bill gave the Minister power to get rid of a civil servant at any time he so desired. He thought this was unfair to the civil servants.

The bill now stands for third reading.

INTRODUCE BILL TO GUARD BANKS

Inspector Would Be Paid By Chartered Banks for His Services.

OTTAWA, July 8. — (Canadian Press).—A bill to provide a Government system of bank inspection was given first reading in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon.

Hon. J. A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance, explained that the expense of this bank inspection would be recovered by assessment upon the chartered banks.

A properly qualified inspector with adequate banking experience, would be appointed to go the round of head offices of all chartered banks and made a thorough inspection. He would keep banks posted of the value of all securities upon which loans were made. He would warn banks of depreciation in any securities and generally advise on the advisability of loans to any person or firm. While he would have very broad advisory powers he would not attempt to prevent any particular loan being made.

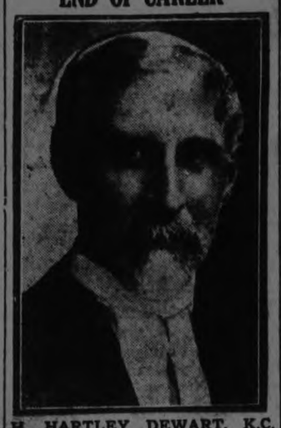
The Government hoped by this system to prevent the issue of loans on insufficient securities and the impairment of a bank's assets.

FORT WILLIAM GRAIN.

Business Picks Up With Five Grain Boats Clearing.

FORT WILLIAM, July 8.—(Canadian Press).—Five grain boats cleared over the week-end from Fort William and Port Arthur carrying 1,283,000 bushels of grain, the biggest cargo being that taken by the Davidson, 520,000 bushels of oats, to Buffalo. Oats figured largely in the shipments, there being 824,000 bushels of oats in the total. Two grain boats are taking on cargoes and three are on their way up.

END OF CAREER



H. HARTLEY DEWART, K.C. brilliant lawyer of Toronto, and Former Leader of the Liberal Party in Ontario, died at his summer home last night from the strain of overwork. He was ill less than two weeks. Mr. Dewart was born in Dummer Township, Peterboro County, and had many friends in this vicinity.

OLD HOME WEEK HAD ITS SCRAP

Negro Got Worst of Bottle and Knife Battle Over Gambling.

NO ACTION TAKEN

LINDSAY, July 8.—(Special).—An incident, not officially announced on the Old Home Week program by the executive, occurred the latter part of the week. A negro who had been entertaining the natives during the week, and incidentally gathering in the shekels by picking a banjo, got into a crap or poker game with a white man connected with an attraction which had been booked up for the week. The game proceeded without interruption until a dispute took place, when the dusky gambler proceeded to clean up the pile on the table, and prepared to make an exit. His friend blocked the way, however, and demanded the return of the money, threatening at the same time to pummel the Ethiopian. The latter put his hand in his pocket, but instead of producing the money, drew a knife. The white man picked up a bottle and struck the negro on the head, splitting it. He failed to go down for the count, and he received another blow which fractured one of his arms. Strange to say no action was taken by the authorities, although they have all the facts in connection with the melee.

H. HARTLEY DEWART DIED IN HARNESS

Former Leader of the Liberal Party in Ontario, Collapsed Week Ago From Overwork.

TORONTO, July 8. — H. Hartley Dewart, K.C., one of the most brilliant and distinguished members of the Canadian bar, and at one time leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, died last evening at his summer home, Brookdale, near Uxbridge. He had been ill since a week ago Thursday.

Mr. Dewart was regarded by the legal profession as having attained to a position of one of the most eminent counsel in Canada. His early elevation to the bench was looked for following his appointment as one of the legal authorities named by the Dominion government to revise the statutes of Canada.

His illness dates back to Thursday, June 26th, and was due to collapse brought about by too close attention to his legal duties.

Early yesterday morning he lapsed into unconsciousness, and when it was seen that the end was near, his aged mother was summoned from Toronto to his bedside.

His brother and his wife were with him when he died.

Balanced Hen Ration Holds Up Parliament

OTTAWA, July 8. — "If the Minister wants to keep the House sitting two or three days at this time of the year discussing a balanced ration for the Canadian hen, he must take the responsibility for it," said Donald Sutherland, of South Oxford yesterday when the House was discussing a bill to amend the Feeding Stuffs Act. The bill received first and second reading.

UNITED STATES IS WILLING TO CONTROL ARMS

Declares Minister to Switzerland—Depends on Passing Congress.

FRIENDLY SPIRIT

Project Submitted by Canadian Representative Will Be Discussed.

GENEVA, July 8. — (Canadian Press).—The United States Government is prepared to give appropriate consideration to any proposals and would welcome any draft convention for control of the traffic in arms and munitions when it could submit it to Congress with a good chance for ratification.

This declaration was made by Hugh S. Gibson, United States Minister to Switzerland yesterday at the opening session of the League of Nations Commission on Disarmament.

Mr. Gibson asserted that he intended to continue the work begun by his predecessor, Joseph C. Grew, at Paris, on the same subject and said he would be glad to clarify further the position of the Washington Government. He remarked that Washington's action would necessarily depend upon the character of the convention it may eventually be asked to ratify.

Commission Tolerant

"I would like to express my sincere appreciation of the friendly spirit which has been shown at the meetings of the commission," added the minister, and "it's evident willingness to understand our problem."

The main purpose of the present meeting is to consider in detail the draft treaty for International control of such traffic elaborated by the subcommittee at Paris. A second draft convention to be discussed concerns the private manufacture of arms and munitions; it is based on a project submitted by Colonel Carnegie, representing Canada.

Other questions include explanation of the work of the special commission appointed to investigate the probable effects of chemical discoveries in war time and the possibility of recommending the conclusion of regional accords between countries as a means of attaining a reduction in armaments.

Lord Cecil presided and playfully welcomed the United States Minister "insofar as he can be considered one of our colleagues."

HEAT LAYS WASTE IN SASKATCHEWAN

Storms Presaged That May Save Bulk of Grain,

SOME PLOUGHED IN.

SASKATOON, Sask., July 8.—(Canadian Press).—Last week broke the season's record for high average heat with dry winds in northern Saskatchewan and crops are suffering from lack of rain in the Saskatoon district, according to local weather reports.

Fortunately the grain is deeply rooted and is holding back from shot blade developments. The present condition of the crop is reported to be 75 per cent. normal. Yesterday's weather was hot with strong dry winds that indicate the approach of severe storms.

Heavy rains have been reported in the central western and northwest of the province extending from Macrorie, Dundurn and Vanscoy, north to Lloydminster and Battleford.

Some farmers west of Saskatoon whose crop is only a few inches high and commenced to head out have started plowing it under and intend summer fallowing their fields.

Moors in Spain's Uniform Ambush Spaniards; Spanish Artillery Shells Its Own Infantry

MADRID, July 8.—(Associated Press).—News of a "cruel and sanguinary battle raging in Morrocco" is contained in an official statement just issued here. The Spanish casualties exceed 400.

The seriousness of the situation is becoming more evident, and the Cabinet discussed it for three hours last night, and later General Primo de Rivera, head of the Cabinet, conferred by telegraph with General Aizpuru, Spanish High Commissioner in Morocco.

The official statement says:

The information from Morocco reports bloody fighting with the enemy, strongly entrenched and defending his positions with extraordinary tenacity.

Our troops, however, are in high spirit and morale and are carrying out their operations in a difficult terrain with encouraging progress.

A lamentable episode of the fighting occurred when Spanish forces at Tabor entered a trench occupied by the enemy, who were wearing Spanish khaki uniforms, and, in the belief that these forces were comrades, fell into an ambush, with numerous casualties. Retreat was almost impossible.

General Aizpuru reports that the Spanish posts in the Lau region are still cut off from their base and that the enemy's resistance in fortified positions is making progress. Relief of the posts is impossible, but the Spanish forces are pushing on, and it is hoped that the enemy will soon retire, owing to the lack of ammunition and severe losses.

Spanish forces fighting on the side of the Foreign Legionnaires and native troops have suffered more than 400 casualties thus far. The air forces are cooperating with the artillery in locating the enemy.

The positions are so densely garrisoned by the enemy and the fighting is at such close quarters that our artillery in the confusion of Spanish regulars, causing a great number of casualties.

Orders have been given to evacuate the wounded from Ceuta, to avoid congestion of the hospitals there.

Move $20,000 Reduction In Wembley Estimates

OTTAWA, July 8. — E. J. Garland, (Progressive, Bow River), notified the government yesterday afternoon that he proposes to move for a reduction of $20,000 in the estimate for the British Empire Exhibition when the supply bill comes before the House for the third reading. This is the estimate of the cost of sending a delegation of members and newspaper men to the Wembley Exhibition.

ACQUIRE ELEVATORS

Grain Inquiry Commission Recommends That Government Take Them Over.

OTTAWA, July 8. — (Canadian Press).—That "the elevators of the Vancouver harbor commission should be acquired by the government of Canada and vested directly in the crown" is one of the recommendations made by the royal grain inquiry commission, in an interim report tabled in the House of Commons yesterday. This report deals only with that part of the commission's investigation which concerns the operation of the Vancouver elevators.

"The operation of terminal elevators should not be made part of the functions of the board of grain commissioners," the report adds, "since it is charged with the general administrative control of the grain trade." Further on the report says that the Vancouver elevators "along with the other terminal elevators vested in the crown should be placed under a special commissioner or statutory body created exclusively for that purpose."

WATCH LONG BURIED.

KODAK, Tenn., July 8.—A watch buried for more than 15 years in a cornfield at Kodak still runs and keeps perfect time. It was unearthed recently by T. L. Mount of this city. The case, originally nickel, was badly tarnished and the crystal was scarred, but not broken. A gasoline bath put the timepiece in excellent condition.

"No, France hasn't a king any more. It has a president," said Johnny Jump Up.

TO HELP TRADE WITH FINLAND

Most Favored Nation Treatment Accorded in Return For Similar Rights.

IN PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, July 8. — (Canadian Press). — The House of Commons yesterday gave first reading to a bill under which Canada gives to Finland most favored nation treatment in Customs duties in return for the same treatment to Canadian exports to Finland.

Hon. James A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance, informed the House that imports from Finland for the year ending March 31 last totalled $6,000, while in the same year Canada exported to Finland goods to the value of $1,754,275.

Mr. Robb explained that the arrangement would mean Canada granting her intermediate tariff on goods coming from Finland receiving in return "the same treatment as is enjoyed by similar goods manufactured in the United Kingdom, as set out in Article 23 of the treaty of commerce and navigation between the United Kingdom and Finland."

He added that Canada had not been represented at the negotiations of the treaty between the United Kingdom and Finland. It had been called to the attention of the Canadian Government at the time of the Imperial Conference in London last fall. He did not know whether the United States had a special treaty with Finland but he assumed that Canadian goods would go into the Finnish market on as favorable terms as those of the United States, because Canada would under the treaty obtain favored nation treatment.

POPE APPROVES THE CENSURING OF IMMORALITY

Commends Cardinal Begin Upon the Decrees Against "Certain Plagues."

DEPLORABLE EVILS

QUEBEC, July 8.— (Canadian Press.)—Approbation of the attitude adopted by his eminence Cardinal Begin and the heads of the Catholic church in this province towards dancing, immoral pictures, as well as the warning against neutral societies and abuses of alcoholic liquors, has been officially extended by His Holiness Pope Pius XI., in a letter from the Holy See, which was read in Catholic churches of the Archdiocese on Sunday.

"You have been well inspired on the promulgating several salutary decrees against certain plagues, which all good men should deplore in your own country and generally throughout the whole Christian world. We especially refer to lascivious dances, immoral entertainments, to so-called neutral societies and the immoderate use of alcoholic liquors," His Holiness wrote.

FARMER GETTING MORE FOR WHEAT

Members of Wheat Pool Got Over Two Cents More Than Average.

CALGARY, Alta, July 8.—(Canadian Press).—Members of the Alberta wheat pool will receive 2 1-8 cents a bushel more for their wheat when the average price received by Alberta farmers outside the pool, according to the statement issued yesterday by H. W. Wood, chairman of the board of trustees. The pool price is $1.02 for No. 1 Nor. on Fort William basis, while the average price at Fort William for the period was 99 7-8.

From this price the administration expenses of the pool will have to be deducted and this is another feature which will appeal to the farmers who have joined the pool. The total expenses for selling the pool wheat will be less than one-half cent per bushels. The pool handled nearly one-quarter of the wheat harvested in Alberta last year. The Alberta Government report showed the harvest to be 167,000,000 bushels, the wheat pool handling slightly more than 38,000,000 bushels.

RADIO DETECTS RUNAWAY

Small Quebec Lad Was Located by Use of Radio and Returned to Parents.

MONTREAL, July 8 (Canadian Press). — The small boy running away from home in these modern times to seek adventure in the great world will find radio a big obstacle, and a great factor in the hands of the opposition. One tanned little fellow, running away from his home in a little Quebec village, walked 20 miles in a coupe of days, and was beginning to think himself safe when a voice came through the air to send him back.

Gaston Cardinal, having made a previous and unsuccessful attempt to free himself from home ties just the other day again ran away. Mrs. Cardinal and Mr. Cardinal searched high and low for him, and two days after his disappearance they asked the director of radio broadcasting station CKAC at Montreal to help them find their boy.

Gaston hal walked twenty miles, slept two nights in the homes of friendly inhabitants, and had reached St. John's, Que. He told a family on a verandah in the village his story —the story he always told: "I'm an orphan, beating my way through the country," and so on.

Gaston was unfortunate. The house was fitted with a radio receiving set, and the enthusiast of the family, after listening to Gaston a while, went in to seek what amusement there might be "on the air."

He heard CKAC's announcer giving the description of Gaston, and requesting that any listeners-in who knew where Gaston was would notify the station.

The boy rushed out, to find Gaston at the house next door. The family notified Montreal, and CKAC notified Gaston's parents, with the result that not long after Cardinal Senior was on his way to take Gaston back home. No, Gaston is not a radio "bug."

With reports from all polling subdivisions completed, the results announced last night were: W. H. Edwards, Conservative 7660, J. A. Young Labor, 1663. VESSEL HIT SEA WALL

Fifty Passengers on Board the Modjeska When the Accident Happened.

TORONTO, July 8. — (Canadian Press).—Missing her course owing to the heavy fog hanging over the lake last night, the steamer Modjeska, of the Canada Steamship Lines, bound to Toronto, with about 50 passengers from Hamilton, crashed into the wall just east of the Argonaut Rowing Club, near Sunnyside. The passengers on board became very frantic, but were kept in order by the officers and men on the boat. The front of the steamer struck the sea wall with such force that it raised blocks of the wall fully six feet. The front of the boat was badly damaged. The crash against the concrete wall could be heard many blocks away. All the passengers were taken off the boat before it was taken to Yonge Street docks. No one was injured.

PERCY TOWNSHIP COUNCIL MEETING

Grant to the Fair Board—Improve Road to Rice Lake.

(By a Staff Reporter)

WARKWORTH, July 8.— Percy Township Council, in session here yesterday, voted the Agricultural Society a grant of $200.00 twice the amount allowed last year, after listening to a delegation from the Board of Directors, consisting of President J. F. Freure, Secretary J. A. Armstrong and Directors C. H. Curtis and R. Honey. The amount asked for was $250.00.

R. Honey, the first speaker, introduced by President Freure, who said he knew of no better way to encourage the boys to remain on the farms than to give them a chance to prepare good stock for the fall fairs and to let them keep the money which they won as prizes. Percy Township is as well off as the townships around it but Seymour township gave its fair more liberal grants, $150 a year while the town of Campbellford contributed $250.

"We have a better show and better buildings," than Seymour Society," continued Mr. Honey. "We have gone into debt for these buildings and are trying to pay it. We hope you gentlemen will give us a liberal grant. We give the free use of the grounds to church and other societies. I have been a director of this fair for the past 40 years. I am not speaking for myself for in the natural order of things I cannot hope to be here much longer, but I want to see our boys get a chance."

Some Big Grants

Secretary Armstrong said that Seymour got municipal grants totaling $400, Peterboro received $1,000 and Picton $7.00. The Percy Fair belonged to the people and they should not knock the council for voting their own fair a grant.

Mr. Armstrong added that Seymour is trying to get ahead of Percy and will do so unless the Board gets help from the Council and others.

"You know the Fair, you know the need we have for money," said Director Curtis. We ask for $250 in order to hold our position as the banner Fair in Northumberland County.

President Freure said that $250 would just pay the interest on the debt which the Board was reducing year by year."

Council Takes Action.

The council on motion of Councillors Atkinson and Poole, agreed to a grant of $200. Last year the usual grant was cut to $100 on account of some heavy expenditures in building bridges in the township.

When some one remarked that the Percy fair was noted for the excellent horse races held every fall the directors explained that every inducement was given the owners of fast trotters and pacers to come to Warkworth. Owners are given free stabling and feed while here and the men in charge of the racers get free meals for the first day.

Other Business.

The greater part of the session was taken up with receiving the returns of the pathmasters and of paying special grants for work on the roads.

Alnwick council will be asked to cooperate in improving the hill near James West's farm at Rice Lake on the boundary line between the two townships. This hill is regarded as one of the steepest and most dangerous in the county. Autoists who reach the summit at night often find theselves descending the hill at a rate of over 60 miles an hour, and serious accidents are likely to occur at any time.

CAMPBELLORD COUNCIL MEET

Will Enter an Appeal Against Action of the County Council.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 8. — Town Solicitor Humphries received instructions from the Town Council at the regular meeting last night, on the motion of Reeve Davidson and Reputy-Reeve Dorie ,to enter an appeal against the action of the Counties Council in raising the equalisation of the towns and villages 10 per cent. as was done at the June session, after an increase of 16 per cent. had been made in 1923. All of the urban municipalities opposed the raise, with the exception of Cobourg and Hastings. The statute provides that when one municipality appeals the Crown Attorney shall enter an appeal on behalf of all the others.

There has been no equalisation of the two counties since 1904, and at that time the work costs $10,000. It will probabyl require an expenditure of double that amount or more to make a re-valuation now.

If the equalisation as fixed by the Counties Council stands, Campbellford will be called on to pay an additional $880 on the county rate.

Meeting at Cobourg.

Mayor Meyers, Reeve Davidson, and Deputy-Reeve Dorie were delegated to attend a meeting of the Advisory Committee appointed at the recent session of the Legislature to assist the Highway Department, this meeting to be held in Cobourg on 17th July. The Campbellford deputation will urge that the road from Belleville to Peterborough be taken over as a provincial highway.

A similar gathering will be held in Belleville on the following day. Campbellford Council will not be represented at that city, but will ask the municipalities of Stirling, Rawdon, and Sydney to attend and present arguments on behalf of Hastings County for the change in the status of the highways referred to.

Seymour Township Council will also be represented at the Cobourg meeting, and it is possible that a special session of the Counties Council may be called on 16th July to map out a programme to be submitted to the Provincial officials.

New Sanitary Inspector.

Several applications were received for the position of sanitary and by-law inspector and collector of poll-tax. The lowest tender was for $20.00 a month, this coming from Harry Seaborn, assistant Chief of Police. At the June meeting of the Council it was decided to appoint a new official, as it was felt that Chief Duncalfe was not able to look after these matters in addition to his regular duties. There was such an officer some years ago before Chief Duncalfe was appointed, but a change was made to cut down the expenses.

Reeve Davidson and Councillor Abernethy moved that Bert Beavis be appointed at a salary of $25.00 a month, as he had held the position for nine years and was assured that he would be given another chance if the office was ever restored.

Councillors Redden and Cole moved that Harry Seaborn's offer be accepted, and a further amendment by Deputy-Reeve Dorie aimed to have the appointment deferred until next year.

Mr. Beavis was appointed by a vote of 5 to 4.

Soldiers Memorial

Councillors Kingston reported that he and Councillor Johnston had attended the meeting of the Seymour Council to confer with that body on the matter of a soldiers memorial and to enlist the cooperation of the township representatives. The latter promised to meet with the join committee of the I.O.D.E. and the committee appointed by the town council at the last session to deal with this matter. The date of the meeting will be decided upon later. The object is to get as nearly as possible an idea of the sentiments of the public as to whether the proposed memorial should take the form of a monument or a municipal building.

Lighting Hastings Road

The special committee appointed to confer with the Seymour Council with regard to the lighting of Hastings road reported the terms of an agreement that had been reached. The Township Council is to put up the line, at an estimated cost of $125. furnish and maintain the six lamps required, the Town to provide the power free of charge as the section of road to be lighted, just outside the corporation limits, is a main avenue to the town.

Seymour Council sent a copy of a resolution accepting the offer but as the condition had been apparently misunderstood the committee was instructed to take up the matter again with the Seymour councillors.

Minor Matters

The Canadian National Express Company asked for a rebate of their business assessment as the company is now owned by the government and is exempt from Taxation. This matter was referred to Town Solicitor Humphries.

Major J. M. Bygott, local agent of the C.N.R. wrote to say that the company received frequent requests from industries for information concerning location for factories. He suggested that if Campbellford has anything to offer in this line that the Council fill up forms which he enclosed.

Mayor Meyers stated that in reply to such inquiries sent to him direct he had replied that the Town Council would do everything possible to encourage the locating of new industries in Campbellford.

Mayor Meyers stated that it had been found that the bridge could not be built as planned without encroaching on property belonging to the Cumming's estate and permission to use this land would be required before the work could be started. Advertisements calling for tenders for the building to the abutments will be inserted as this part can be done with out trespassing on private property.

SMITH LEADING AT CONVENTION

On Eighty-seventh Ballot Yesterday McAdoo Dropped to Second Place.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, July 8.—(Canadian Press).—On eighty seventh ballot, final vote before adjournment of Democratic convention, coalition forces battered down McAdoo strength still further, and leaders in contest stood this way:

Smith	361.5
McAdoo	333.5
Ralston	93.
Davis	66.5
Glass	71.
Scattered	150.

A rumor is running through the convention that during the adjournmento for dinner last night leaders of anti-McAdoo candidates agreed to make Samuel Ralston of Indiana Democratic standard bearer for 1924.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Church—Minister Leaves For New Charge.

MILLBROOK, July 8. — The annual strawberry festival, under the auspices of Carmel Sunday School, was held on the church grounds on Friday evening, the attendance being the largest for several years.

A softball game between the girls' teams from Bailieboro and Millbrook was the principal attraction in the early part of the evening, the line-up being:

Bailieboro — Loretta Barnard, p; Edna Johnston, c; May Earle, 1b; C. McConnachie, 2b; Kathleen Isbister, 3b; Mary Pender, ss; Ethel Falls, ss; Hazel Armstrong, lf; Lottie Earle, rf.

Milbrook — Dot Armstrong, p; Susie McCorry, c; G. Gray, 1b; Mrs. B. Richards, 2b; Thelma Ball, 3b; Phyllis Brown, ss; Muriel Newton, ss; Bonna Robinson, rf; Marjorie Sayles, lf. C. Nattrass, umpire.

Score 14 to 13, in favour of Millbrook.

The Programme.

Rev. Joseph Wilks was chairman for the programme given in the church after all comers had enjoyed the abundant tea served out of doors, the fine weather making it possible for the many willing workers to wait upon the numerous guests with convenience and despatch. The church was filled to capacity, many having to remain outside through lack of space indoors.

The programme was thoroughly enjoyed,and included vocal solos by Miss Ethel Richardson and Mr. F. N. Alborn, recitations by Rev. H. A. Barton of Ottawa, cornet solos by Mr. G. E. Burnham, and selections by the Byam family orchestra.

Rev. G. S. Gervan was present by special invitation, and gave a brief address, its humorous features winning him high favour with his hearers both inside and outside as well.

The total receipts were something over $100.00.

A Presentation.

The boys of the Trail Rangers' groups in connection with the Methodist Church presented Rev. S. T. Tucker, who has been their popular mentor for the past two years, with a handsome gold ring engraved with the "C.S.E.T." monogram.

Mr. Tucker was in town on Saturday, and the boys. through their president, Walter Sayles, took the opportunity of presenting the ring informally.

Owing to the postal strike the gift, which had been ordered some time previously, was not received in time to be given the recipient before his departure for his new charge at Orono.

An active interest in all young people's organisations has been characteristic of Rev. Mr. Tucker's ministry, not only during his pastorate in Millbrook, but on the various circuits he has served in the course of his ministerial career.

BLOOD TRANFUSION FAILS TO SAVE LIFE

Samuel King Passed Away Last Evening After a Brief Illness.

The death occurred about 6 p.m. last night of Mr. Samuel King, after a brief illness. The late Mr. King one week ago was apparently in good health, but underwent an operation on Wednesday last, succumbing from its effects yesterday, although a transfusion of blood was made from a fellow employee in a last effort to save his life.

The deceased was just 32 years of age, and leaves a sorrowing wife and four small children. He possessed a kindly disposition, which made him a host of friends. He was a member of the Orange and Masonic orders, and a member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. For many years he has been active in church work and had faithfully served in many capacities.

The late Mr. King was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. King, and is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Vally Tully, Springville; Mrs. Herbert Darling, Smith; and Mrs. Spring Craig.

The funeral will take place on under Masonic auspices, from the Wednesday afternoon at 1.30 p.m., family residence, 601 Water Street.

ARMY OF 13,000.

Rio De Janeiro is Now Threatened by Sao Paulo Troops.

BUENOS AIRES, July 8.—(Canadian Press).—An army of thirteen thousand men, composed of Sao Paulo State forces, together with some federal troops, is marching toward Rio De Janerio, according to reports gathered by correspondent of La Na Cion. In general news from Brazil concerning Sao Paulo insurrection continues vague and conflicting but sufficient has been learned to leave little doubt that movement is of formidable character politically and is aimed at Federal Government.

ESTIMATES GO THROUGH HOUSE

Nothing in the List For the Home Bank Victims—For Coal Transport.

OTTAWA, July 8.—Shortly before midnight Acting Minister of Finance, Hon. James Robb, tabled in commons supplementary estimates for year 1924-25 totalling $6,604,809, an unusually low total for Federal supplementaries.

This sum is made up as follows: Chargeable to Consolidated and Capital accounts $5,326,366; Loans to railways to increas vote in main estimates $527,000; Sundries $751,443. There is no provision in supplementaries for re-indemnification of Home Bank depositors, probably sufficient indication that no relief is forth coming, nor is there anything in nature of financial assistance for Toronto viaduct undertaking. Nor less for postal headquarters or customs house.

Outstanding items in supplementary list are as follows: To provide for salary of Inspector General of Banks and Administration of System of Bank Inspection, $50,000; to increase staff investigation wheat rust, $25,000; to provide for salaries and expenses re St. Lawrence Canal services and Advisory Board ,including National Advisory Committee $100,000; to provide for salaries of Advisors re Tariff, $30,000; for Board and Customs and Inspection (Taxation Board) $28,000; for expenses of Royal Commission on pulpwood $30,000; further amount for Royal Grain Commission $50,000 and for expenses of Royal Grain inquiry (to cover warrants) $75,000.

An item of exceptional interest is that providing a sum of $200,000 to provide for the transportation of Canadian coal to Central Canada by payments to the railway companies.

British Empire Exhibition, further $150.000; for air service for forest patrols, $261,000; for welcome to special squadron, Royal Navy, $25,000; Welland Canal improvement, $25.000; Canadian Office in London, England, further $289,000; Quebec Harbour improvements, $500,000; St. Lawrence channel dredging, $250,000; for Control Works, Lake of Woods, $200,000; for legal expenses re Home Bank, $15,000.

Do not serve vegetables in saucers or extra dishes at a formal dinner. The only extra plate permitted is the bread platt.

SON OF PRESIDENT COOLIDGE IS DEAD

Only Son of White House Family Succumbed to Blood Poisoning After Five Days' Fight.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Calviun Coolidge, Jr., son of President Coolidge, die d last night at the Walter Reed Hospital of blood poisoning. The end came after the boy had battled with the utmost bravery and fortitude for five days against the disease which had racked his body with pain and sapped the reserve strength of his frail constitution.

President and Mrs. Coolidge, who had maintained a constant vigil at the hospital, were at his bedside, hopeful, and cheering and comforting their son to the last.

TECHNICAL KNOCKOUT.

A RIDICULOUS CHARGE.

In the by-election campaign in Northwest Toronto, just over, there was considerable controversy over the charge made that the campaign of John Young, the Independent Labour candidate, was being financed, in part, at least, by contributions from the Russian Communists and is controlled by Petrograd.

Surely, if there ever was a case of wasting time and energy over nothing, it is to be found in this argument over nothing at all.

Nobody in his right mind is credulous to believe that Russia is interested in a by-election in a Canadian Province, or that the Communists have funds to finance such minor political operations.

The charge is an invention of the dog days, occupying the same place in the scheme of things as the story of the sea serpent seen at the summer resort, or the fish that climbs into the boat, grabs the bait tin and calmly dives in again.

There may not be much to be gained by the election of a Labour candidate to the Legislature, but to attempt to show that the election of such a candidate would be a long step toward turning Canada over to the control of the Communists is an absurdity that even the first hot wave of the summer can hardly justify.

Surely there are other issues that might more profitably be discussed in Northwest Toronto.

The whereabouts of Charlie Matthews would present a much more interesting and helpful topic of discussion.

BRIGHT HEADLIGHTS.

Near Kingsville, Ont., the other night a woman was run down and killed by a motor car simply because the driver was so blinded by the glaring headlights of an approaching truck that he failed to see the woman walking at the side of the road.

Next to the speed mania and the carelessness of many drivers, bright headlights are the most prolific cause of automobile accidents.

There are regulations designed to drive this nuisance from the highways, but so far, as every motorist knows, the menace is as serious as ever.

These regulations will have to be made more drastic, and they will have to be vigorously enforced if the number of accidents from this cause is to be reduced.

The Province has a force of motorcycle traffic officers on duty on the principal highways.

If these officials were to devote four or five nights to a round-up of the glaring headlight offenders they would be doing a real service to the safety first cause.

Even if some of the speeders escaped in the meanwhile—and judging by the speed set up by some of those high-powered tourist cars that travel the highways at express train rate, many of them are unchecked as it is—the roads would be much safer than they are at present with so many bright headlights in operation that the process of two cars passing at night is likely to end in disaster.

The Ontario Motor League, the Safety League and other organizations should redouble their efforts to have the situation remedied as soon as possible.

THE PENSION COMMISSIONERS.

Charges against the present Board of Pension Commissioners by representatives of the G.W.V.A. are strengthened by the letter issued to the press by that well-known soldier, Lieut.-General R. E. W. Turner, V.C., who commanded the 1st Canadian Division in France and who won the Victoria Cross in the South Africa war.

General Turner is not given to writing letters to newspapers, but in this case he maintains "the situation is urgent and demands public support."

The writer scores the Pension Commission for neglect of tubercular and disabled soldiers, and declares that "if a man on his enlistment was passed as fit by the medical officer then this country cannot morally refuse assistance if tuberculosis has developed within a reasonable period after his discharge from service."

Where there is so much smoke, the old proverb says, there must be some fire, and the complaints against the Commissioners are so numerous and so persistent that Parliament cannot afford to remain apathetic to this question.

If there is one thing upon which the people of this country are united it is in the desire that justice shall be done to the veterans of the war and to the dependents of the men who gave up their lives.

They want the pension regulations administered in a sympathetic, broad-minded manner—not according to the system used by an official claims agent in trying to reduce damage claims to the minimum.

The Canadian people want the disabled veterans treated as men who have suffered for the welfare of their country—not as claimants trying to get something to which they are not entitled.

And if the present Board of Pension Commissioners is incapable through temperament or otherwise to sympathetically deal with the war's victims, they should give place to other commissioners better qualified.

THE TOURIST TRAFFIC.

The Province of Quebec, through the Quebec Tourist Association, is making business-like plans to attract a larger share of the tourist traffic, and is concentrating its efforts upon two features, both of which can be studied with profit by Ontario citizens.

In the first place, a campaign to secure ample tourist camping grounds throughout Quebec is under way.

It has been shown that camping grounds of this kind bring monetary rewards to the farmers in the district because of the sale of milk, eggs, butter and other farm produce, so that the association has not found it difficult to persuade farmers owning suitable stretches of land to erect signs notifying tourist parties that campers will be welcomed.

As the same time municipalities are co-operating by providing civic camping areas with police protection and other services.

It is estimated that last year half a million tourists from the United States visited Quebec and spent a sum approximately judged to be seventeen million dollars, so that the desirability of catering to automobile tourists can readily be realized.

In addition to securing motor camp sites, a big effort is being made to induce better hotel accommodation in many districts where at present the conditions can only be described as wretched.

The Minister of Roads for the Province points out: "So long as we are without proper hotel facilities in the rural districts, just so long will visitors be dissatisfied and in consequence injure the tourist propaganda urging travellers to visit this Province."

That is a point in which Ontario should be interested.

In the matter of hotel accommodation we are not keeping step with the growth in tourist traffic.

THE EXCLUDED.

The Johnson immigration law, which came into force on July 1, marks what is virtually the beginning of a new immigration policy in the United States, says the Hamilton Spectator. The melting-pot having threatened to boil over, or rather its contents refusing to melt, the first great principle of the American constitution has had to be modified. As the Christian Science Monitor candidly puts it: "Experience has shown that there is a limit to the assimilating power even of political freedom. Where differences of race or language are combined with differences in religion, and where immigrants settle in masses together, a foreign and unassimilable element appears in the body politic. It is now generally recognized that if the highest level of national civilization is to be reached, it is necessary to discriminate as to the human ingredients of which society is to be composed."

The question is, what is to become of the surplus populations against whom entrance is now barred? The tendency which has now been given such decided expression in the United States is observable elsewhere; Canada also is affected in a similar way by the influx of heterogeneous races. South America is available for the time being, but it is a question how long it will keep the doors open. For the Oriental races the development is grave, and it is scarcely less alarming for the teeming populations of Europe. In countries like India and China the spread of western culture leads to new ambitions which, apparently, will have little immediate chance of being gratified at home. The only solution would seem to be the more complete industrialization of these countries; but that is just what native opinion is rebelling against, especially in India. There is only one way in which all these perplexing complications can be permanently settled, for the mutual advantage of humanity as a whole, and that is through international co-operation. Civilization has done much to prolong life and to eliminate those factors by which nature was wont to preserve the balance of population. Civilization must take this task in hand and find accommodation for the people it has thus rescued. A strictly national outlook no longer suffices to meet the changed conditions of the times.

A CANADIAN MINISTER AT WASHINGTON?

If Canada wants her own representative at Washington there is no reason in the world why she should not appoint one. The question of such an appointment has been discussed spasmodically in press and Parliament for some years past, and on several occasions when the debate seemed to have reached the interesting stage of action, something happens. Dark hints have bee thrown out that such an appointment would upset the delicate machinery of our Imperial relations and would raise a thousand constitutional questions. There have been mysterious stories set afloat from time to time that Britain would frown on such a change, while it has even been suggested that Downing Street would vigorously oppose it.

Now Sir Esme Howard comes along to tell us that the talk of British opposition is rubbish; and that, far from opposing such a nomination, he would "welcome a Canadian Minister at Washington." So we shall have to look somewhere else for the deadly "hidden hand." The recently appointed British Ambassador at the United States capital is quite frank on the subject, and as his view seems to fit in with that of the noisy group who are always prating about Canada's "nationhood," it is not likely that he will be told to "mind his own business." One of the reasons of the British Minister's desire for the appointment is that it would relieve him of a vast amount of labor. The work of the British Embassy has increased in recent years, while Canadian business has grown out of all proportion, so that it has been necessary "to enlarge the Embassy staff." The fact that here is another service of prime importance that Britain gives us without cost will not escape the attention of the "mind your own business" gentlemen.

Much Canadian work is done at Washington and it would be a relief to Britain if the Dominion would appoint its own staff and pay for it. For we need not gloss over the important question of cost. If a Minister is appointed by Ottawa to represent us at Washington, he will require a staff and all the expensive trappings that go with such a post. Canada cannot afford to do this thing in any niggardly spirit. Her Ambassador or Minister must keep up the style which our importance demands. He must be properly housed and must be able "to keep up his end" in the social life at Washington, where the standard of entertainment is as costly as any in the world. In addition to this, he will have to have quarters, and the taxpayers' experience of the Hotel Scribe deal will lead him to hope that Mr. Aronovici will not have a finger in the necessary real estate transaction. Then he will have to employ a large number of clerks and secretaries and it would hardly do to slight the Canadian Navy by not appointing a naval attache in addition to aides of military rank, and perchance a pilot from our commercial air service. For it must be remembered that our representative at Washington would not be merely a Consul-General, with trade matters to look after. He must be a real slap-up, dyed-in-the-wool plenipotentiary, or he won't suit us.

Yet if we have the man and can afford the money, there is nothing to stop our making the appointment. It is only a matter of time before we have such a Minister. The British Government has no objection and Sir Esme Howard would welcome it, and the United States offers encouragement. The only man yet to be heard from is the ordinary taxpayer, and just now he is rather suspicious of expenditures that would bring no visible revenue.—Montreal Star.

ADDS STAIN TO BLACK RECORD

Irresistable Impulse for Jail-Breaking Causes Marauder to Cut Loose.

MONTREAL, Que., July 8.—(Canadian Press).—One more stain was added to an already black record when Bonzo, the marauder, jail-breaker and all-round bad monkey of the Biological Building of McGill University escaped the other day and killed five guinea pigs before he was returned to his cage, after four hours freedom.

Apparently Bonzo had spent some time mastering details of the system by which his cage-door operated, and after a period of keen observation work, he decided to apply his knowledge. Reaching through the bars of his cage he grasped the bolt which formed part of the fastening, removed it carefully and leaped out.

From a vantage point somewhere near the ceiling he hurled down imprecations on the heads of those who came to capture him, and when, a bit later, a keeper opened one of the cages to give water to a family of guinea pigs Bonzo descended in whirlwind fashion, entered the cage and before he could be stopped had ended the earthly careers of the five unfortunate guinea pigs.

For four hours Bonzo enjoyed his reign of terror. Then the inner monkey proved his undoing. He began to felt a bit hollow and spying some appetizing victuals on a plate in a guileless looking box he warily partook of the viands. As he did so a lid closed over his head and the next moment he was back in the cage.

Escaping from his cage is the best thing Bonzo does. Six weeks after his arrival at the Biological Building, less than two years ago, he managed to get free and did $300 damage before he was recaptured. A year ago he broke his chain, and spent a hectic two weeks raising disturbances in different parts of the city. Not until his argument with a canine had resulted in a tie-up of traffic on one of Montreal's principal streets did his pursuers pick up the trail which led him back to his cell.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, July 8.—Last week's cattle were well cleaned up at the Union Stock Yards. There were 190 left over, but 100 of these were exporters held for this week and the rest had been bought for shipment. Yesterday's receipts were again heavy, being 4,142 cattle, 626 calves, 8,140 hogs and 1,441 sheep and lambs. In the export and choice butchers the market was fairly brisk and prices here were as near steady as possible. A few loads of stall-fed came in and about finished the output for the season. The exporters wanted a full supply and took upwards of 500 head during the morning.

The top for export steers was $8.25 for about four loads. Two choice loads of grass-fed heifers just over 1,000 lbs. each, brought in by J. A. McMillan of Paisley, went for export at $7 a cwt. Frank Hunnisett was a fairly heavy purchaser of choice handyweight butchers and for two loads he paid $7.25 and $7.35 a cwt. Good medium loads of butchers went to the packers at $6.15 and $6.25 a cwt common, unfinished butchers sold around $5. The top for baby beeves was not much over $8, but for one, 780 lbs., $8.25 a cwt. was paid.

Choice fat cows were quite firm, both for export and domestic butchering, and several brought $6 a cwt. and other good ones sold from $5 to $5.50. Good medium quality cows brought $4.50. Bulls were equally firm, with a top at $6 a cwt. and an export bull at $5. Bologna bulls brought $3. The transactions in feeders were reported yesterday morning and dealers in these are doing very little. Commission men found the market draggy on the commoner green butchers and looked for a fair-sized hold-over at the end of the day.

Calves were quite steady and one buyer took a bunch of the near good calves at $8 a cwt. as a speculation, believing the market was on the up grade. Medium calves of light weights sold at 6½ cents. A few choice calves made 9 cents. Buffalo prices are better and this influence is being felt.

Last week's jump in lamb prices had the desired effect of bringing in a larger supply. A week from yesterday the $2 a cwt. cut in bucks will also go into effect and this is also expected to send in a large number this week. For choice lambs the top yesterday morning was about 16 cents and common and medium lambs held between 10 and 12 cents. Yearlings sold at 10 cents. Breeding ewes are in good demand in the sheep, with a price range from 5 to 7 cents a pound.

Packers were holding off fine hogs with the expectation of getting them at $7.75 a cwt. f.o.b. This was the price sent out to shippers over the week-end.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 8 (Canadian Press). — Rapid progress of the harvest in the United States, together with the rain in Canada, had much to do with the bringing about of lower prices for wheat yesterday.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, at 2c to 2 5-8c net decline, September $1.13 1-4 to $1.13 3-8, and December $1.16 1-4 to $1.16 3-8.

Corn finished 7-8c to 1c to 1 5-8c up; oats 1-2c to 7-8c off; and provisions unchanged to 5c to 7c higher.

The downward course of the wheat market was interrupted twice by good rallies, but they were only transient and final dealings were at the day's lowest level. The first rally came shortly after the opening, and was ascribed to unexpectedly strong markets at Winnipeg and to reports that rainfalls north of the Canadian boundary had failed to touch the territory where most needed.

The subsequent temporary upturn in wheat values came about through sympathy with an advance in corn.

Bigger receipts of new wheat piling up in the south-west, however, together with Nebraska and Illinois despatches indicating that the harvesters were fast working northward, proved more than an offset for unfavourable conditions in parts of Canada. Besides, reports from Kansas showed somewhat better yields per acre than had been expected and hedging sales were said to have broadened out considerably.

Personal inspection of fields in Illinois and adjoining States appeared to have given decided impetus to the bullish sentiment on the part of many traders in corn. Furthermore, offerings were scarce, and the visible supply showed a falling off of 1,137,000 bushels.

Oats prices felt the effect of improved prospects for the oats crop.

Provisions were firmer owing to the action of hog values.

AFRICAN MALADY TAKES THOUSANDS

Tsetse Fly Cause of Sleeping Sickness Claims English Naturalist.

TORONTO, July 8.—(Canadian Press).—Dr. Cuthbert Christy, English Scientist and naturalist, is one of the many leaders in science who are coming to Toronto for the 92nd annual meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, Aug. 6 to 13 next.

Dr. Christy was one of a committee of three that established the fact that the tsetse fly is the transmitter of the sleeping sickness which kills thousands of negroes in Africa annually. He later sprang into fame by killing the first of the mysterious okapi, a forest animal of the giraffe species.

The sleeping sickness of Africa is a very different disease from encephalitis lethargica, the disorder occasionally prevalent on the North American continent, sometimes called "sleeping sickness," Dr. Christy makes plain. The latter malady he refers to as "sleepy sickness." The African sleeping sickness Dr. Christy explains, originates always from the bite of the tsetse fly.

PICNICS PLENTIFUL

Bobbed and Unbobbed Ladies Indulge in a Tug-of-War.

APSLEY, July 8.—Picnics are the order of the day at the present time no less than three having been held in the vicinity during the past few days with still another, that of St. Paul's Anglican Church, to be staged on Wednesday. Fine weather has favored all the events, and fairly good-sized crowds added to their success. Between fifty and sixty dollars were taken at each. St. Andrew's, Owenbrook, and the two Methodist Churches at Apsley and Lusswade respectively. An event that caused much excitement at Owenbrook was a tug of war between the "bobbed" and the "unbobbed" ladies, the latter proving their superiority by running away with their opponents in two successive contests. A tug of war between married and unmarried men, after a tremendous and prolonged pull, resulted in a win for the latter. The Methodist picnic at Apsley on July 1 was not as big an affair as usually, supper only being provided. The Rev. E. McTavish took the opportunity of bidding goodbye during supper, leaving for his new charge near Belleville that evening. Later in the evening the young people organized a dance at the parish room, kindly lent by Mr. Spence, and a very pleasant time was spent.

Bears seem quite plentiful in Methuen, often being seen by the settlers. Walter Youmans had eight sheep killed last week, undoubtedly by these pests.

Wild strawberries are now at their best, and are plentiful and of big size. Every one is picking, some families gathering from fifteen to twenty quarts a day. Local buyers are paying 30 cents a quart, and even at that the money is well earned.

Indication of a successful tourist season are apparent, a great number of American visitors stopping in Apsley every day en route to Jacks and Loon lakes. Bass fishing is not particularly good but good catches of salmon are being made in both lakes. With the roads having been put in good shape cars have no difficulty in reaching either of these fishing grounds.

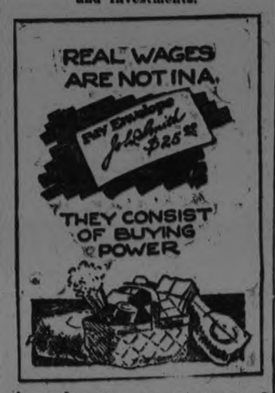
MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.



A man's wages are not measured in money. They are payment in the form of goods; food, clothing, shelter and luxuries.

By A. W. WARNER
Veteran Financial Writer and Newspaper Man.

Most men believe they work for money. They measure their job in terms of the money it pays them.

That money is spent for food, clothing, shelter or luxuries. In the last analysis they are working for goods, not money.

A man's wages might be doubled, yet if his cost of living doubled too he would be no better off than before, so his real wages remain the same.

Real wages are not the amount of money a man finds in his pay envelope. They are whatever he can buy with that money.

ABUNDANT FRUIT

Shearer's Point Man Raises Product For Summer Visitors.

ROSENEATH, July 7.—Mr. Earl Shearer, who owns a farm on Shearer's Point, has five acres of it planted in a garden of vegetables and small fruits. He supplies all the campers of Harwood and Gore's Landing, making two calls a week at both these places. He also makes one trip a week to Cobourg with vegetables and fruits.

Mr. L. Harvey at Dodge's Landing has an order of one thousand boxes of strawberries to fill for Mr. Shearer. This is a very exceptional strawberry patch, being entirely free of weeds and grass, which no doubt has helped, along with the frequent showers of rain, to make the harvest of fruit an abundant one.

COBOURG AND DISTRICT

COBOURG, July 7.—The congregation of Centreton Methodist Church honored their departing pastor, Rev. J. N. Lovelace, and his wife by assembling in their honor at the parsonage for a farewell gathering before they left for Roseneath to assume the duties of a new field of work. Mrs. Lovelace was presented with a silver casserole, pierced design, and pie plate to match, both fitted with pyrex glass and a purse. Mrs. J. McKenzie read an address, appreciative of Mrs. Lovelace's valued service there, which also bore the signatures of Mrs. W. Score and Mr. Thomas Wilton.

There were about fifty members of the congregation present and a happy time was spent. Mrs. Lovelace made fitting reply to the evidence of kindness shown her, and Mr. Lovelace added kindly parting words.

School Teacher Resigns

Miss May Dawson of Bailieboro, who has been a member of the Public School staff here for the past year has tendered her resignation. Miss Dawson has accepted a position on the Toronto Public School staff, we understand. Miss Dawson has made many friends in town, where she is quite popular, who much regret her departure.

Many Applications

As teachers having resigned from the Cobourg Public School Board has resulted in a number of applications being received by the Board for this vacant position and possibly others that may occur among the members of the staff. Dominion Day was the regular day for the monthly meeting of the Board but this has been postponed until next Tuesday, when it is quite probable that a selection will be made.

MILLBROOK NEWS

Strawberry Festival Received a Shower of Rain—Personal Mention.

MILLBROOK, July 7.—The strawberry festival, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of Grace Presbyterian Church, Millbrook, held at the home of Mr. J. Miller, south of the village on Thursday evening, drew a good attendance from points far and near. Unfortunately the heavy shower which came before the first tables were served, caused a good deal of inconvenience and extra work for those in charge of the supper, as well as making the grounds uncomfortably damp.

The Miller homestead, with its large lawns and wide verandahs, is admirably suited for a lawn social, and was nicely decorated with flags and streamers for the occasion. The tea served was most satisfying, and the music furnished by the Millbrook band, under the leadership of Mr. G. A. Duncan, added much to the pleasure of the evening.

Mr. J. N. McGill made a capable chairman, and midway on the programme, A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., gave a brief address. Other numbers included readings by Miss Muriel Matchett, a vocal solo, "Sing Me To Sleep," by Miss Kathleen Lancashire, a chorus, "Just a Song at Twilight," by the junior girls; a duet, "Beautiful Sleep," by Mrs. H. W. Johnston, and Mrs. G. S. Gervan; a duet by Misses Gillespie and Kennedy, Peterboro'; and a quartette, "Good Night," by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnston, Rev. G. S. and Mrs. Gervan. Miss Ella Elson was accompanist.

The rain caused a sudden stop to the softball game between the "Reds" and "Blacks"—two girls' teams from Millbrook. The score stood at 17-4 when play was suspended. The line-up was:

Reds.—Phyllis Brown, p.; Susie McCorry, c.; Gertrie Gray, 1b.; Thelma Ball, 2b.; Bonna Robinson, 3b.; Muriel Newton, ss.; Muriel Lang, ss.; Pearl Lamb, rf.; Gladys Tucker, lf.

Blacks.—Dot Armstrong, p.; Phyllis Richards, c.; Mrs. B. Richards, 1b.; Jean Burnham, 2b.; Alex. Johnston, 3b.; Amy Brock, ss.; Muriel Matchett, ss.; Marjorie Sayles, rf.; G. Gray, lf.

Umpire—B. L. Richards.

Messrs. T. W. Belch and J. Thompson were in charge of the well-furnished booth. The total receipts were in the neighborhood of $150.00.

Miss Elizabeth Montgomery, who has been teaching at Fenella, is the new teacher engaged by the school board for the junior room at the public school, to succeed Miss C. McConnacie, who resigned.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Brown motored to Pefferlaw recently, and were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brown. They also attended the picnic at Port Bolster held by the combined schools of Brock Township.

Miss Stella Pethick spent Dominion Day with friends in Port Hope, remaining over for a brief visit.

Misses J. and Marian Wray, of Lindsay, were guests of Rev. J. and Mrs. Wilks this week. Miss Jennie Wray has been teaching in Lindsay for forty years, and had the honor of presiding at the "school" for the returned Old Boys and Girls on Monday evening of Reunion week.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyttle, of Saskatoon, Sask., have been visiting their neice, Mrs. G. F. Harrington. Mr. and Mrs. J. Smith, and daughter, Miss Pearl, were also guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harrington over Dominion Day.

Mrs. H. A. Elson and daughter, Miss Olive, Mrs. Westington and Mrs. Purvis, leave on Saturday morning for a trip to the West. Mrs. Elson will visit her daughter, Mrs. H. Sled, at Regina, the others going on to the coast.

Mr. D. A. Henry has purchased a handsome new car, C. B. Adair, o Peterboro', putting the sale through Mr. and Mrs. Henry, having made known their intention of buying a car, had the unique experience of being fairly beseiged with agents from many points, each anxious to demonstrate the superiority of his car above all others on the market. It was no unusual thing for such agents to arrive by twos or three before breakfast, and at intervals in the day, and remain until sundown, taking every opportunity of extolling the particular make of car each represented. To win out among a steady line-up of competitors showed some skill in salesmanship.

CAPTAIN COOK MEMORIAL

To Commemorate the Discovery of Nootka Sound, B. C., in 1778.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 8.—(Canadian Press).—The Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada is making arrangements for the erection of a memorial at Friendly Cove, Nootka Sound, B.C., to commemorate the discovery of the Sound in 1778 by Captain Cook. The actual date of the unveiling ceremony is not yet known but it is expected to take place in August.

Nookta Sound was first discovered by the Spaniard Don Juna Perez, in 1774 and called Bahia de San Lorenzo. Captain Cook, the great explorer, rediscovered the Sound in 1778 during his third and last voyage, undertaken with the primary object of discovering the northwest passage. It was called by him King George's Sound in honor of George III., but it was afterwards called Nootka after an Indian settlement. Nootka Sound is on the west coast of Vancouver Island about half way up from the southern end.

GRAIN STOCKS CLIMB

Nine Million Bushels More Than This Time Last Year.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., July 8.—(Canadian Press). — Grain stocks again climbed up by almost a million and a half bushels at the head of the lakes during the past week, standing now slightly over 27 million bushels. Wheat receipts and shipments practically balanced, but stocks of oats rose by twelve hundred bushels and increases were also registered in flax and rye stocks. As compared with stocks in store a year ago, the stocks on hand to-day are a little more than nine million bushels greater, over half of this amount being accounted for by the stocks of oats.

Paul In Possession

By RUBY AYRES

Copyright, 1924, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate

The story thus far:

When John Collinge died, he left behind him his adopted daughter, Wanda Griffin, a headstrong, passionate and overbearing girl, and his son Paul, with whom he had quarrelled, and who had gone abroad. After the death, Paul comes home for the reading of the will, and to Wanda's surprise she finds she is disinherited, and that he is the heir. Paul dislikes Wanda intensely because of her behaviour, and tells her that she must leave the house immediately; she refuses and, in order to stay there, pretends to be ill. At last matters reach a crisis, and Paul orders Wanda out of the house. She goes to London with Mrs. Garnet, her one friend, with whom she is to live. The day after Wanda arrives, Clare's brother, Harry, the black sheep of the family, arrives unexpectedly.

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT.

XXI—"BROKE!"

Mrs. Garnet's manner changed then; she shut the door and took a vixenish step toward her brother.

"What do you mean by this? Why have you come?"

He spread out his hands eloquently. "Broke!"

"So am I. If you think I can help you again, I can't."

He seemed unimpressed.

"Who's the girl, anyway?" he inquired.

"She's a friend—Wanda Griffin is her name. She's an orphan, and her guardian died a few weeks ago."

He grinned.

"What are they paying you for it? I've never known you do anything for nothing yet."

"They're not paying me anything; they . . . oh, very well!" she added resignedly as he laughed derisively. "They are paying me, if you must know, but I'm fearfully in debt myself. I can't possibly help you."

"I haven't asked you to, yet; wait till I do. The girl's an heiress, I suppose?"

Mrs. Clare hesitated.

"Her people have money," she said at last evasively.

"Humph!—is she engaged?"

"No."

"Good." He glanced complacently at himself in a gilt mirror over the mantelshelf. "Well, I'll stay for a week or two."

"Harry, you promised me four years ago that you'd keep out of England if I only would help you."

"This visit is the exception that proves the rule," he answered; he took her hand and squeezed it. "You're not a bad sort. Wish you could find some decent fellow to marry you."

Mrs. Garnet flushed.

"I think . . . I'm not sure . . . perhaps there is——" she faltered and broke off to urge. "But not a word to Wanda, promise me?"

"Of course. Do you take me for a fool?"

"I've never been able to trust you, Harry."

"Poor old girl!" He looked really remorseful for a moment, then he laughed again. "I'll behave this time, I promise you."

"You've promised me before."

"I know, but——" He broke off as Wanda spoke at the door. "May I come in?"

He opened the door for her, and she brought in a tray laid for three.

"There! I've made tea, and the eggs are boiling! Oh, don't go, Clare; aren't you dying for a cup of tea?"

"You can bring mine to my room," Clare said. "I've had enough excitement for one morning."

She went back to bed again, and lay with closed eyes trying to collect her thoughts.

Surely it was an unkind turn of fortune's wheel that had sent Harry home just now.

Clare's life had been filled with mistakes and disappointments. By nature a weak and useless woman, she had married the wrong man, and had been unable to make the best of her mistakes even after she discovered it.

Since her widowhood she had lived more or less by her wits.

She had borrowed money from Wanda many times and had never repaid it, and Wanda had not minded.

In spite of her many faults, Wanda was generous hearted; she was genuinely fond of Mrs. Garnet.

As she lay there, Clare could hear Wanda and the black sheep laughing and talking together as if they were old friends.

Perhaps, after all, Harry's return might not be such a bad thing, Mrs Garnet thought helplessly; perhaps even it might be turned to good account if she was very careful how she went to work.

And there was always Paul Collinge.

Her heart warmed as she remembered his last words to her:

"I shall see you again soon."

Did he like her—just a little bit more than he liked any other woman?

WOMAN POLICE BENEFITS MORALE

Echos From National Conference of Social Work—Liquor Laws.

TORONTO, July 8. —(Canadian Press).—An education in itself could have been gained by those attending the various session of the National Conference of Social Work. Twenty-eight kindred organizations, most of them with continent-wide associations held stimulus enough and to spare for women interested in their neighbors The Lieutenant of Police for St. Louis is on record in praises of police-women.

"We believe that the morale of the department is lifted by the presence of women on the force," he said. The period for joining the police force in St. Louis so far as women are concerned, is between ages of 24 and 34. As a rule they do not arrest a man, but trace him to his home and then call a constable to take him into custody. Sometimes, however, the delinquent prefers to walk with a policewoman to the station, rather than submit himself to the public exhibition of being taken in charge by a uniformed officer.

Miss Jane Addams was decidedly interesting when discussing the "Pax special." She believed that the delegates to the Womens' International League for Peace and Freedom would return home "a little bit disillusioned in regard to Canada and the United States. I was inclined to stop the 'Pax Special' when it met with opposition in the States, especially from returned soldiers, but we decided to go on with it. I think the women from Europe were surprised. They didn't realize what the situation was over here. What surprised them the most is this: In all Europ ean countries the best representation we get is from returned soldiers."

Mrs. Woolley, who is director of the Merrill-Palmer school of Detroit is keenly interested in the prevention of delinquency and crime. She strongly denounced the telling of diplomatic lies to children. While this is not considered lying by parents, but merely an easy way of getting along with their children, it is an unsafe practice, especially if dealing with the ages of three and four, when imagination is apt to run riot.

The liquor law is the football of U. S. politicians, according to Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt, deputy attorney-general, United States Department of Justice. Too much politics, too much "sleeping sickness," and too much wasting of federal effort on the "hip-pocket" violaters of the anti-liquor laws were the factors which caused the much-talked of difficulties which the government had encountered, she believed. The law has not been given a fair trial.

Uncle Sam had not done his best, she admitted, but that there was to be greater activity was predicted. Mrs. Willebrandt is in charge of the federal prohibition laws, and also the income tax department. She told of a gang of bootleggers against whom no proof could be secured, till they investigated their bank balances and compared them with the income tax returns.

Inspecting garbage cans is not generally iisted in books on etiquette as a common method of entertaining visitors, but this was what Miss Mary McDowell wanted to do while in the city. Miss McDowell, commissioner of public welfare in Chicago, has for years been head of the University of Chicago Settlemen', "the house just back of the stock yards" amid the mingled odor of cattle from the west and immigrants from the east. She has lived for 28 years in a community which war "segrated for unpleasant things." As a result, it is more than natural that she should be interested in scientific systems of waste disposal.

TORONTO MAN GIVES FACTS TO THE PUBLIC

Freeland Says Tanlac Corrected Indigestion of Five Years Standing.

"Taking Tanlac was about the wisest thing I ever did," is the positive statement of Josias W. Freeland, a well-known carpenter, 275 Pape avenue, Toronto, Canada.

"Before taking this medicine I had been gradually going down in health for five years on account of indigestion. Everything I would eat disagreed with me and I suffered untold misery from indigestion. My appetite left me, my nerves were undone and I got to where I had to lay off from work a day or two nearly every week.

"I was getting a little closer to a complete breakdown all the time when my sister persuaded me to try Tanlac. Tanlac helped me at once and a few bottles made a well man of me. Not only that, but a bottle of the medicine now and then has kept me feeling right now for three years. My appreciation of Tanlac has no limit."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

SMELLS OUT THE RUM.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., July 8. — When in quest of bootleggers, C. S. Ragsdale, local detective, does not bother about wearing a disguise. Police authorities say Ragsdale can smell a distillery or beer joint three blocks away. Muskogee bootleggers have been trying to find some way to give Ragsdale a bad cold.

SOCIALISTS COME IN

Enlisted Under Lafollette's Presidential Banner Last Night.

CLEVELAND, July 8.—(Canadian Press).—The National Convention of the Socialist Party of Aferica last night formally enlisted under the Lafollette presidential banner. It adopted a report offered by a majority of a committee of 15, recommending that the convention concur in the action of the conference for Progressive political action in endorsing the Lafollette candidacy on his own platform. The vote on this report was 106 to 17.

TRAGEDY ENDED TRIP TO TWEED

Coupe Plunged Into Tennessee River a Few Hours Out of Nashville.

WOMAN DROWNED.

TWEED, July 8.—Last Thursday evening Mr. Harold Hopkins, son of Mr. Timothy Hopkins, of Tweed, and his wife, with Mr. Grayson Chambliss, left Nashville, Tenn., in their coupe, intending to spend July the fourth in Chattanooga, and then to proceed to Tweed by way of New York. The road was strange and they were just about two hours on the way when they approached Kelly's Ferry on the Tennessee River. The ferry boat was on the other side and the night was dark. Before they could realize what was happening they were in the water. Mr. Chambliss was thrown clear of the car, and after swimming about a little found Mr. Hopkins, who could not swim. They tried to find Mrs. Hopkins, but could not. Helpers came at their outcry, but the body was not found until Friday morning. The car had plunged into about 12 feet of water, and they expected that Mrs. Hopkins had been pinned in it, but she was found about 10 feet away.

The funeral will be held at Mrs. Hopkins' home in Syracuse, N.Y.

These young people had been married not suite a year, and Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins here were looking forward to meeting their daughter-in-law, whom they had learned to love through the happy, affectionate letters she wrote.

Last Friday evening the W. A. of St. James' Church went to the home of Mr. Albert Baker and surprised the bridre and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Baker, with a kitchen shower. A very happy evening was spent with dancing and nice things to eat.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Voice of thee people
To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—In my last letter to you I quoted the speeches of the Deputy Attorney-General of the U. S. and the Rev. Dr. Cameron, the Baptist divine who, in addressing the International Convention of the Social Workers of America, stated emphatically that prohibtion was a failure and must be so since a nation cannot be made either wise or good by compulsion. In fact driving the innocent has just the opposite effect and while it may do the vicious and the weak some good it utterly destroys all pretence of leading the well-disposed to a higher life. It is in fact the negation of Christ's teachings and woe to those who set themselves up in opposition to that teaching. They will yet repent in sack cloth if not in torment. But the point which I wished to make in this letter is a slightly different one. Some days ago a prominent church worker astonished me by saying that it might take millions of years, but that by striving man would at last lift himself up to God. This idea he considered quite new and modern, whereas it was the idea made ridiculous by the Tower of Babel. The poorest of intellects must see that the finite can never find the infinite. God must make himself manifest if we are to see Him and know Him at all. Moreover He must tell us what we must do and how we must go to meet him. Christ said: "I am the way." And Christ further said that He was the only way. My friend therefore spoke with an ignorance of religion or at any rate of Christianity, which amazed me He is a leading prohibitionist of course. Not knowing that Christ was the only way it was to be supposed that he and his prohibitionist friends are. The line to which we must hew is laid down by Christ, but our action must be voluntary. If it is not voluntary it destroys the whole fabric of character which can be builded upon one thing only. The spanking process is a very silly one and is causing enormous injury much more and more general than whiskey ever did. The horrors of drunkenness are admitted. Such things as the bar are not intelligible to the same mind. Churches paid no taxes, but enjoyed the fruits of the license fees of those bars. I remember when they demanded a still greater share in the plunder. If they would read their Bibles instead of taking their inspiration from themselves and the phrase-making flap-doodle of their leaders who ding them about like cattle to a fair, we would have a much finer world. As it is, their matchless egotism and ignorance are dragging us down to the level of those who live in daily or nightly dread of the police. Education seems to be making fools of us. We can't assimilate what we read. We apparently have not the brain power.

HASTINGS WINS LACROSSE GAME

Peterboro Juniors Put up a Good Game, But Were Outplayed.

HASTINGS, July 8.—The Hastings Juniors added another game to their list of victories on Monday afternoon when the Peterboro Juniors motored here for a friendly exhibition game. Peterboro was short one man, and Stanley Stevenson, a local player, made up the deficiency. Both teams played good lacrosse, in view of the weather conditions, which were disagreeable.

The game was billed for 3.30 but was delayed an hour and did not cease until half-time.

The first period started off strong, neither team scoring until thirteen minutes of the play, when Stevenson took a pass from close in, dodged the goal-tender, and threw the ball into the open net, this being the only goal scored in this period.

The second period started out with Hastings pressing strong, and Cruickshanks, on a nice pass from Way, scored the locals' first goal. The play continued fast from end to end, the visitors having as much of the play as the locals, and Dit Clapper s,ecuring the ball from defence, with a nice run down the field, passed the ball to Way, who scored for Hastings.

In the third period the visitors pressed hard, but the local boys proved that they were made of the right kind of stuff, and Scottie Clapper went through the visitors' defence and scored again. Clifford Baker went around two of the Peterboro defence men and scored a good clean goal.

The last period, being the fastest of the game, and Peterboro determined to pull down the lead, went right in strong, but the best they could do was to register while Baker and Waye registered again for the locals, thus making the score 6-2.

The game was handled by Irvin Doonan, of Hastings, in a very able manner, his eagle eye catching everything, which kept the game free from any roughness.

The official timekeeper was Fred. Wilson, an old Hastings boy, son of Mr. J. K. Wilson; the latter was a player with the famous Iron Clods.

The penalties were five minutes for Johnson and two minutes for Stevenson.

The line-ups were:

FLIGHT

Snowball, a prize Persian cat of Springfield, Mass., disappeared just before last Christmas. It's discovered he fled from the pampered life of a prize pussy, to run wild in the woods.

Civilization is unnatural, as much so for people as for cats. That's why nature incessantly makes it harder to earn a living and be healthy in the city. She's trying to break up the cities. The airplane will help her, enabling people to live hundreds of miles from where they work.

Hundreds of people witnessed the tragedy but were powerless to effect a rescue as there were no boats in the vicinity.

NO QUIET ZONE WAS COUNCIL'S FINAL DECISION

Opposition Declared it Would Work a Hardship on Automobile Owners.

PEACEFUL MEETING.

Deputation Urged Council to Pave Smith Street From Water to George.

In the most tranquil of recent meetings, the City Council last night disposed of a considerable amount of business and adjourned at ten o'clock.

On discussion of a by-law to provide a quiet zone bounding Victoria Park on evenings of band concerts, Alderman Fife showed himself strongly in opposition. Many attend band concerts, he declared, who cannot leave their cars. These people would be kept from enjoying the concert by the establishing of a quiet zone.

Mayor Turner expressed the opinion that the Council is on the right track in seeking to establish the quiet zone, and said no one would be imposed upon. Motorists could leave at intermission. As for Alderman Fife's argument, Mayor Turner said, "Even people sitting in cars cannot hear the band with autos tooting and rushing around. We spend a fair amount of money, and we would like to see the people get full value for it."

Aldermen Phelan, Crowe and Maher feared that the police, with the by-law, would cause trouble. On motion of Aldermen Maher and Morrison, the committee arose, killing the by-law.

Smith Street Paving.

J. Wells Fraser, speaking for the Chamber of Commerce, told the City Council he thought Smith Street should be paved between Water and George, this being the natural course for traffic. Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch spoke of the comfort for patients being removed to Nicholls Hospital and the convenience for doctors who visit the hospital once, twice or more every day. The paving of Smith Street would be far more benefit than the paving of Antrim Street. E. F. Mason also spoke in favor of the paving of this section.

The matter was referred to the Board of Works.

Gasoline Pumps.

Applications for permission to erect gasoline pumps started a discussion on the general evils of placing pumps at dangerous corners, that ended in an assurance by Mayor Turner that the question will be taken up in the near future.

Intimation was given by Alderman Maher that something will very soon have to be done about doing away with these pumps and establishing stations. The removal of the pumps when requested is provided for in the permits.

Re-appointed.

Mrs. Knox and Mr. F. H. Dobbin were re-appointed the city's representatives on the Mothers' Allowance Advisory Board.

Dog Catcher's Powers.

A resolution introduced by Alderman Crowe asked that the City Solicitor report on the authority of the dog catcher to collect $1 for informations given the police.

Alderman Phelan said there was no agreement with the dog catcher to pay him for informations.

City Solicitor J. Wearing declared there is no authority without a by-law.

Alderman Crowe—"It's a serious matter for the public. There are many more citizens have paid that dollar and should get it back."

Alderman Maher—"It seems to me that the dog catcher who is employed by the city is lending himself to other interests. It seems as if he is being used by someone in authority."

Alderman Maher regretted seeing clergymen and other gentlemen in police court on technical charges, and thought by-laws are not the best way of bringing out the best in men.

Alderman Crowe said the city assessor's roll shows the dogs in the city and the delinquents can be checked up from that.

Work to Start.

Construction of the outfall sewer and the sewage disposal plant was the subject of a discussion, in the course of which Mayor Turner intimated that work will probably start in winter.

Thanked the City.

Millbrook expressed appreciation of the service rendered the town by the Peterboro Fire Brigade on the occasion of the disastrous fire a few weeks ago.

UNIDENTIFIED MAN

He Was Found in River by Harbor Police, Who Say He Had $3,866 in His Pocket.

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 8.—(United Press).—Dozens of times in a year the Harbor Police of New York report "Unidentified man found dead in the river."

They made that report yesterday. They added to it: "There was $3,866 in the man's pockets. He wore a khaki shirt and trousers, a signet ring and a Longshoreman's Union button." Unidentified men found dead in the river usually are not important, but $3,866 makes a difference. Unusual efforts are being made to learn who he was.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

CHIPPY CHIPMUNK'S KITE.

So away he went with his new kite.

Chippy Chipmunk came into Mister Bags' store one day, in the woods, and held up a penny.

"If you please, sir, I want to buy a kite."

"All right," said Nick. "Here's a nice green one."

"Please tie a string on it, will you?" asked Chippy.

"Sure," said Nick.

So he got a nice long string and tied it on.

"I hope I won't see that horrid old crow," said Chippy. "He's always snooping around a-looking as though he'd like to eat me."

"Why, I don't think Mister Crow would hurt you," said Nancy. "He's pretty mischevious, but not really mean."

"And he's too full of Farmer Jones' corn to want to eat chipmunks," laughed Mister Bags, the fairy storekeeper.

"Well, I don't care," said Chippy. "Ma always told me to be careful of Mister Owl and Mister Hawk and Mister Crow, and I think she ought to know."

"You just run right along and have a good time," said the fairyman. "If we're always going to be afraid of something or other all the time it spoils everything we do."

"That's so," agreed Chippy. "It does seem as though I was always worrying. Hurray, everybody! Watch my kite go up."

So away he went with his new kite, which was as big as he was, and when he got out to the meadow, where there weren't any trees, he climbed up on top of a big stone and let out the string.

"Hooray! Whoopee!" he shouted, for just then a strong gust of wind came along and carried the kite up into the air like a bird.

"It's almost as good as flying myself," said Chippy happily, letting out more string.

Suddenly the string came to an end and Chippy was lifted off his feet with a jerk.

He didn't let go, for it all happened so quickly he was to much surprised. And when he wanted to let go he was too far above the ground to risk falling.

"Help, help, help!" he screamed with all his might.

Mister Bags heard him and the Twins heard him and his mama heard him, and everybody else in the Green Woods and the meadows heard him, and they rushed out to see what had happened.

They arrived just in time to see poor Chippy up in the air dangling at the end of a string like a bait on the end of a fishing line.

"Don't worry, I'll get him for you," croaked a hoarse voice, and Mister Crow flew up from the fence beside the cornfield, straight for the tiny figure. Then he flew right under him and Chippy let go and landed safely on his back.

It was exactly like an act in the movies.

Then Mr. Crow flew down to the ground.

"Oh, thank you, thank you," cried Mrs. Chipmunk. "I always thought crows ate little chipmunks, sir. I beg your pardon."

"Oh, that's all right," croacked Mister Crow. "Who'd want chipmunks when corn's just sprouting!"

PETERBORO MAN IN AUTO SMASH

CAR WAS WRECKED.

OSHAWA, July 8.—Lying in the Oshawa General Hospital are three men who yesterday morning were close to being fatally injured when the car they were driving from Peterboro to Detroit turned over in a ditch just west of Whitby and was wrecked. The men are: A. R. Hamilton and A. G. Taylor, 173 Windermere Ave., Highland Park, Michigan, and Charlie Sharpe, also of Highland Park, but recently of 125 Romaine Street, Peterboro, where his relatives live.

Taylor is the owner and driver of the car and is the most seriously injured, an operation being necessary, while Sharpe is also seriously injured. Hamilton suffered scalp wounds and will possibly be discharged in a day or two. All are being attended by Dr. McLaren, of Whitby.

The accident occurred about eight o'clock Monday morning, when the three men in a Hudson coach were proceeding along the highway and were overtaken by a car driven by Dr. G. Miller, 648 Danforth Ave., Toronto, who sounded his horn to pass the Hudson. The occupants do not know what happened them, but think the doctor's car touched their front wheel and the machine capsized into the ditch, completely wrecking the body of the car, and injuring the occupants, who were brought to the hospital on a passing truck.

HALF FAIL TO VOTE.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Almost 50 per cent. of the qualified voters of the United States fail to exercise their voting privilege, researches of Simon Michelet, a Washington lawyer, reveal. The largest vote ever cast for President was in 1920, when the total vote for all Presidential candidate was 26,713,832.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

MILLBROOK, July 8. St. Thomas church was filled to capacity on Sunday vening, when about 125 of the members of Cavan District L.O.L., attended divine worship, the Millbrook band heading the parade to the place of worship.

In the absence of the Rector, Rev. Canon Allen, who was conducting a similar service at Christ Church, Bailieboro, Bro. Rev. M. G. B. Williams preached to his brother Orange men from the text found in Romans 14:7: "For none of us liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself."

The fact that men were created rational beings for the sake of society, was emphasized. What interest would there be to anyone living alone? The wants and weaknesses of mankind render society necessary for their convenience, safety, and support, hence the three bonds of union for purposes of protection, the family, the tribe, and the nation naturally came into existence. God has made men with different powers and faculties, and placed them under different circumstances as they fight promote each other's good.

Many organizations have come into being for the welfare of the race and all have a common basis created by association. With union comes new duties and responsibilities, so that as Paul says, "Whether we live or die we are the Lord's." As members of the Orange order, striving to live according to the high principles and lofty ideals the organization stands for, love will be the germ promoting action and ample room will be found for doing good.

Joshuas' message, "Be strong, and of a good courage," exemplified both in word and deed, notes two necessary requirements if the principles of the order are to be loyally maintained and its standards raised to a yet higher level.

A very successful garden party, under the auspices of St. Enoch's Church, Garden Hill, was held on Thursday evening, people motoring from points far and near to be present at this annual occasion.

An excellent programme was furnished by the choir of St. Paul's church, Port Hope, the musical selections being varied with readings, humorous and serious, by an accomplished elocutionist. The choir is assured of a large and appreciative audience whenever a return visit is made to the community.

The receipts were in the neighborhood of $150.

The pastor, Rev. G. S. Gervan, was chairman, coming late in the evening to the lawn social at Mr. J. Miller's, Cavan, which was under the auspices of his charge at Millbrook.

Rev. S. T. and Mrs. Tucker motored over from Orono on Saturday and called upon a number of friends in town. Their two children, Ewart and Gladys, who have been staying with Ernest and Jean Burnham since Thursday, returned with them to Orono the same evening.

The annual strawberry festival of the Orono church was held on Friday evening, drawing a large crowd, and taking the form of a reception for the new pastor and his wife, giving opportunity for becoming acquainted with many of the people on their new charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Tucker were guests at the home of Mr. E. S. Burnham during their stay on Saturday.

Gladys will accompany the girls from Millbrook to the C.G.I.T. training camp at Lake Couchiching, July 12 to 22.

Mr. Walter A. Williamson of Leader, Sask., is holidaying in town. His wife and two children, Norma and Donald, who have been visiting her mother, Mrs. G. Locke, and her sisters in Millbrook and Cavan, for the past six weeks, will return with Mr. Williamson this month.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Smithson and daughter, Miss Aileen, of Port Colborne, are enjoying a motor trip from the western part of the province, and have been visiting friends in Millbrook, Peterboro, Bailieboro, Brighton and other places.

Lacing His Shoes To Go To Church—Fell to Death

NEW YORK, July 8.—Sitting in a fourth story window to lace his shoes preparatory to going to church Sunday morning, James Quinn, twenty-three, lost his balance and fell to the courtyard at No. 87 Jackson Street. He was killed instantly.

Quinn was a telegraph operator in the Broad Street office of the Western Union Telegraph Company. In a package beside the window from which he fell was a baseball uniform. He was scheduled to play with a semi-professional team later in the day.

America is said to have more garbage than any other country in the world.

COUNTY'S GRANT SUPPLIES A BARN FOR EXHIBITION

Work Completed on New Unit Added to the Exhibition Board's Plant.

WILL HOUSE CATTLE.

Benches For Dog Show Being Made—John Carroll Supplies Sixty Loads of Earth.

The County Council's grant of $1,000 to the Peterboro Exhibition has been expended by the directors in the construction of a new cattle barn 100 feet by 36 feet. It is a complete and commodious new unit in the Exhibition plant. The directors are delighted with this material gift from the county, and feel that their use of the money will be approved by every farmer who is interested in the development of Peterboro's Exhibition.

The new cattle barn is built of matched lumber with a corrugated iron roof. Platforms above the central passageway have been supplied as sleeping quarters for the attendants of cattle on exhibition.

Sixty yards of earth were drawn by Mr. John Carroll, paving contractor, from George street, south of Romaine street, and have been built up a level floor in the building. The first effects of this increased accommodation should be felt during the Exhibition in September by the housing of all the cattle, unless the exhibits should greatly exceed those of last year and also the number anticipated by the directors. For several years exhibits in this class have overflowed along the fence and outside the first cattle barn for the simple reason that there was not enough room within. The additional building is expected to relieve the congestion, and supply a deficiency that has been regretted by the directors and exhibitors alike. The cattle men have been patient and uncomplaining, and as their numbers increase from year to year building up the reputation of Peterboro's show the facilities for exhibition should not lag behind. With the help of the county and the city, and also merchants and manufacturers and the general public the directors are gradually assembling buildings that should invite the best stock from eastern Ontario to the local Fair.

At present Mr. Fred Finnie and Mr. James Brown are engaged in preparing stands for the dog show which will be held for the first time this year with promises of immediate success. The grounds never looked better groomed. Ample rains have kept them green, and the grass has not been allowed to grow long. Mr. John Gillespie was working on the baseball diamond this morning, picking out the stray blades of grass that come through the hard surface.

SAND DIAL PHONE CHECKS TIME

How many times, in the course of a time-limit pay phone call have you been interrupted by a sweet voice saying: "Time's up another nickel please!" By the time the nickel is produced the call frequently is "gone." The sand dial attachment, here shown, is expected to help out in this situation, for it takes just five minutes for the sand to run through and the phone user can watch his minutes slipping by.

To-day Murray is resting at his room as comfortable as can be expected.

Immediately following the ceremony, a long stream of automobiles commenced to move across the bride.

That within three years there would be a trunk highway all the way from Windsor to Montreal, with the exception of one or two gaps, was the assertion of Hon. Mr. Henry at a banquet tendered by the municipality.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY OUTING

A Large Number of the Members of the Board Journeyed to Bewdley.

The annual outing of the Board of Management of the Children's Aid Society took place yesterday afternoon, when the members adjourned after the regular meeting, to be the guests at Bewdley, at the new Kennedy Hotel, of the president of the society, Mr. B. F. Ackerman. Mr. Ackerman made a genial host, and the eighteen guests present had a jolly motor ride to Bewdley, where they enjoyed an excellent chicken dinner, returning early in the evening to the city. Those present for the occasion were Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, G. W. Powell, J. Edgar, C. S. Cummer, W. J. Hopwood, Rev. W. H. Young, Rev. M. C. Mackinnon, Mesdames W. H. Gibbs, W. J. Hopwood, J. Holmes, J. Welsh, R. J. Devey, J. Edgar, C. S. Cummer, J. Fanning, H. W. Darcy and D. Hill. At the conclusion of the dinner, a very hearty vote of thanks to the president, Mr. Ackerman, was moved by Rev. Mr. Mackinnon, and seconded by Mrs. W. H. Gibbs, followed by the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," three cheers and a tiger. Mr. Ackerman acknowledged the tribute in a few well-chosen words.

Business Session.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Management, which preceded the outing, was a short session. Mr. Ackerman presided. Mr. Powell reported 5 applications for children during the month just passed; 1 child (not a ward) returned to its parents; mail received 35; mail sent out 27; mileage covered, 330 miles; places visited, 7; police court attendance, 3; wards in foster homes heard from, 3; wards placed out, 3; wards returned to Shelter, 5; wards visited, 40.

Mrs. W. H. Gibbs read the report of the Purchasing Committee, and Mr. Edgar, the secretary, read the minutes of the previous meeting, also the matron's report, showing 17 children in the Shelter during the month, with 5 brought in and 5 sent out. The children are all in good health, with one exception, this child having an eye affection.

Mr. Edgar also read a letter from the Waterworks Department of the Peterboro Utilities Commission, asking the caretaker at the Shelter to refrain from watering the large expanse of grounds during the hours of the peak load consumption, from five to nine o'clock in the evening.

Mr. Kelso's Appointment.

Mr. Edgar also read a letter received from the Children's Aid Society of Brantford city and county enclosing a copy of a resolution passed by the Brantford society, and asking endorsement of same from the local organization. In its preamble, the resolution referred with satisfaction to the projected increased interest of the present Provincial Government in child welfare concerns, and expressed its belief in the desirability of co-ordination of Governmental activities along these lines, in the interests of economy. It therefore suggested that the present Provincial Superintendent of Children's Aid Societies, Mr. J. J. Kelso, of Toronto, be made a deputy minister, to administer such child welfare activities, and that he be provided with such assistance as might be necessary, representations to this effect to be made to the Premier of the province, the Attorney-General and the Provincial Secretary, and copies of the resolution sent to each society in the province.

After some discussion, during which comment was made on Mr. Kelso's experience of thirty years' standing in child welfare activities, and his demonstration during that period of outstanding qualities of good judgment, sound advice and careful administrative powers, it was decided to endorse the resolution of the Brantford city and county society.

Those present at yesterday's meeting were the following: Mesdames Hill(Welsh, Holmes, Gibbs, Fanning, Devey, Darcy, Rev. W. H. Young, Rev. M. C. Mackinnon, Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, J. Edgar, G. W. Powell, W. Stocker and W. J. Hopwood.

TORONTO BOOTLEGGING

Out of 29 Persons Interviewed Only 2 Had Prison Records.

TORONTO, July 8. — (Canadian Press).—Some interesting facts regarding the personnel of the bootlegging trade in Toronto are brought to light in the report issued by the Bureau of Industrial Research which was compiled with a view to ascertaining whether the traffic withdrew men needed in industry, and if so, from what trades. An outstanding feature is that of 29 persons interviewed, only two had prison records. Over one-thirds or ten were females, 3 of whom conduct business alone, and others with male partners. Foreign born numbered 13, Canadian born of Canadian parentage 10, Canadian born of foreign parentage 5, and one British born of British parentage. Only one ex-bartender was found. Of 20 houses visited, 7 engage in immoral traffic as well as bootlegging.

BRITISHER WON THE 100 METRES RACE WITH EASE

Abrahams Took Championship Away From United States at Olympics.

OLYMPIC RECORD.

Three Yards Ahead of Scholz, and Paddock Was Fifth.

OLMYPIC STADIUM, COLOMBES France, July 8. — (Canadian Press).—Capturing the 100 metres title for Great Britain and depriving the United States of one of its most cherished Olympic championships Harold Abrahams of Cambridge University was the outstanding star of yesterday's Olympic track and field events. Abrahams left no doubt of his superiority over the sprinters of all nations when he led Scholz, the fleetest of the Americans by three yards to the tape in the Olympic record time of 10 3-5 seconds. It was the third time that the Cambridge man had made the record time in two days.

United States stars showed up in three other events, smashing two world records and equalling an Olympic record. F. Morgan Taylor negotiated the 400 metre hurdles in the world's record time of 52 3-5 seconds Robert Le Gendre leaped 25 feet, 6 inches to a world's record in the running broad jump, and H. M. Osborne skipped over the high jump bar at six feet, six inches, to equal the Olympic record.

The feature of the day was Abrahams. The Briton, whose long, rangy stride on Sunday carried him to triumph and proved that he was the great danger in the sprints yesterday overcame apparently heavy odds against him with a speed that none of his opponents could match for more than half the distance.

Where he had won his previous races with sensational finishes, in the final he was off like a flash. He showed a yard in front of Scholz and Bowman at the half-way mark, and lengthened the margin as his powerful stride devoured the remaining space. Scholz's fighting finish was unable to bridge the gap. Porrit, a New Zealander, regarded as a rank outsider, came through with a closing burst that gave him third place over the three other United States stars, Gowman, Paddock and Murchison, who finished bunched in that order. No Canadians qualified for the final event.

Succeeding to the crown Paddock had worn since 1920 at Antwerp Abrahams gained the distinction of being the second athlete in Olmypic history to break the hold of the United States on the 100 metres championship. In 1908, R. E. Walker, the South African sprinter, upset the best laid United States calculations, as Abrahams did yesterday.

The Finns wound up the prolonged programme with further laurels when Lehtonen captured his second successive Olympic pentathlon, giving the little Scandinavian nation its third place in two days.

TIMELY TIPS TO AMATEURS

SAYS ROGERS HORNSBY.

Premier Batsman, National League.

Face every pitcher with the feeling that he fears your batting ability a great deal more than you do his pitching prowess.

Confidence in one's ability to hit them where they ain't is a batter's greatest asset.

Study your pitchers and adjust your batting position accordingly, Hug the plate on the curve ball pitchers.

Step right in to every pitch. Get the proper use of your body rather than putting it all up to your arms.

Watch your front foot. Never pull away from the plate. It is impossible to get power into your drive when you do so. Any long hit you might make under such conditions would be a fluke.

Never pass up batting practice. Do not indulge in it carelessly. Rather make an effort to place your hits. It will help in regular competition.

DARKNESS LOST GAME AT KEENE

Mackey's Men Were Leading 8 to 2 When Umpire Stopped Slaughter.

TRIPLE PLAY

Darkness robbed Bob Mackey's men of sure victory last evening when they played Keene on the village paddock. Mr. Pollard, the umpire, called the game at the end of four and a half innings of play when Mackey's were leading 8 to 2 on account of the fast-gathering night that was blanketing the playing field in a pall of darkness. Yet the Peterboro boys hold that the game could have been prolonged for the half innings thus making the full five innings held necessary to constitute a ball game. The finish was not the most exciting part of the game either, although a lively argument ensued after the calling of the game.

A triple play, which every team hopes for but generally take it all out in hoping, featured the game. Mackey's pulled the stunt in the third, Hardill to Dugan. "Ace" Powell dished them up for Mackeys and with good support allowed but two hits. "Red" Elliott hooked on to a hard line drive.

Robinson twirled for the mustard crew and was a trifle wild, owing to the wet ball, and he issued a bunch of passes. His brother and battery mate was stretching all over trying to grab his wild heaves.

Batteries: Keene—Robinson and Robinson; Mackeys— Powell and Taylor.

BIG GAME THURSDAY

Smelters in Exhibition Park to Clash With C.G.E.

Deloro, invincible team of the Trent Valley League, will clash with the C.G.E. Midland League team at the Exhibition Grounds on Thursday at 6 o'clock in an exhibition fixture.

The Deloro crtw has only been defeated once this season and the C.G.E. boys need no boosting.

The game will be worth seeing, and is being staged at a time when merchants and other workers can turn out.

GOOD GAME TONIGHT.

The Quaker Oats and Lockworks hook up tonight in a Mercantile League game at Riverside Park at 6.00 o'clock. The game should be a good one, as both teams have a chance of going into a tie with the Westclox for first half honors.

YANKEES OUT OF IT?

Ty Cobb, manager of the Detroit team, thinks the Yankees are through for the season. "Either the Tygers or the Indians will win the flag," he predicts.

BOILS KEPT HIM OUT

Johnny Farrell's failure to crash into the British open golf championship is attributed to a flock of boils which cropped out on his hands. It was almost impossible for Farrell to hold a club.

A CHINLESS WONDER

It takes a sharpshooter to clout Bud Taylor, the Indiana bantamweight, on the chin. Taylor has no chin to speak of. He is the Andy Gump of the prize ring.

The largest turquoise in the world, which formerly belonged to the grand viziers of Persia, has been presented to an American museum.

PARIS, July 8. — (Canadian Press).—The Canadian team in the clay pigeon trap shooting competition at Issy-les-Moulineau yesterday took second place, scoring 360 against the United States team's 363.

Other final scores were:

Finland, 360, third; Belgium and Sweden tied for fourth with 354; Austria, 347; Norway, 336; Great Britain, 328; Italy, 324; France and Hungary, 320 each, and Czecho-Slovakia, 309.

The scores were made out of a possible 400.

Protest Made.

At the conclusion of the shooting Belgium entered a protest against the present system of classification whereby six members can shoot for each team but the highest four scores only being recorded. This method was adopted in order to give teams which had only four members a better chance.

The Belgians contend that if the scores of all six members of a team were counted they would be the winners. The protest has been sent to the French Olympic Committee.

SOCCER NOTES.

On Thursday evening the Quakers and G.W.V.A. will meet in a league game at the Oval. Kick off at 6.15 prompt. Referee, J. L. Howarth. There is no game scheduled for Saturday.

The transfer of Thomas Wyllie, Canadian Woollens to the Quaker Oats was sanctioned by the executive.

James Sharman, Vets, outside left, has been suspended indefinitely, according to executive. He did not appear before the board to state his case.

A duly and legally signed transfer of Geo. Blowers from the Vets to Canadian Woollens was authorized.

On Monday July 29th, the Nomads and Thistle will meet in first round of Gordon Cup at King Edward Park. Kick-off at 6.30 prompt. Referee, J. L. Howarth.

Mr. Alex Mitchel, the local soccer referee, was highly recommended by the board for the splendid decisions and amicable manner in which he handles all the games.

After a splendid hearing of all parties in the case of two players being sent off by the referee in a recent game, players Mann, Vets and W. Logan, Quakers, were suspended for one game which means that they cannot participate in Thursday's game.

It was officially stated before the board that Harold Burrows of the Vets will not participate in football any more this season, owing to personal reasons.

The following letter is explanatory to all soccer fans and will settle all arguments pro and con:

Dear Sir,—

CANADIANS AT BISLEY SHOOT

Calgary Man Was Highest of the Four in Queen Mary Match.

HIGH IN SWEEPS.

BISLEY CAMP, July 8.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The opening day of annual meeting at Bisley was marked by good shooting in the Queen Mary prize competition which was won, according to unofficial returns, by Lieut. A. W. Barlow of the West York regiment with a score of 170 in a possible 200. The Queen Mary match is a rapid fire, snap-shooting, deliberate and fire with movement competition, 10 shots in each of the four "practices."

Lieut.-Col. Marchment, Gold medallist was second with a score of 166. The four Canadians entered in the match scored: Gunner Frank Ho Lem, Calgary, 150; Pte. D. Burke, Ottawa, 126; Sergt-Major F. J. Good house, Ottawa, 121; Lieut. H. W. Bishop, Ottawa, 120.

The Canadians obtained good practice in the sweeps. Sergt. R. Storrar Toronto and Sergt.Major W. A. Hawkins, Toronto, each scored 33 in a possible 35 with open sights on the 900 yard range. Using peep sights on the 1000 yard range in the sweeps Pte. H. J. White, Toronto, scored 32 in a possible 35 and Sergt. D. Stuart Ottawa, 34.

DO YOU KNOW BASEBALL?

BY BILLY EVANS.

QUESTIONS

1. Do the American and National Leagues now agree on all interpretations of the playing rules. A insists the two leagues conflict on a number of points. B says no. Who is right?—C.G.S.

2. Does a base on ball in any way effect a player's batting average —P. W.

3. With a runner on first base, he attempts a steal of second. Catcher made no attempt to throw, since runner had a big lead and was certain to beat a perfect throw. Catcher has the reputation of having a weak arm. Is it a stolen base?—R. P.

4. With three and two on batter, he strikes at next pitch and misses for third strike. Ball is low and gest away from catcher, runner reaching third before it is recovered. Is runner within his right in so advancing?—C. C. D.

ANSWERS

1. For years two major leagues differed on perhaps a half dozen rulings. Now they are a unit in their interpretation of playing code.

2. Since a base on balls does not count a time at bat, and does not enter into the hit column, it has no affect whatever on a player's batting average.

3. Baserunner is credited with a stolen base. Weak arm of catcher gets no consideration.

4. Unless there is a ground rule covering wild pitch or passed ball baserunner is entitled to advance at his peril, and was within his rights going to third.

YANKEE COACH MADE MISTAKE IN JUDGMENT

Robertson Went "Over There" With Opponents All Placed Below the U.S.

STILL SANGUINE.

Fearing a Few, He Believes Foreigners Will Yet Lie Down and Be Good.

By LAWSON ROBERTSON,
Head Coach of the American Olympic Team.

ROCQUENCOURT, France, July 6.—This afternoon's events have convinced me that several of our foreign competitors are better than we expected. Abrahams, of Great Britain, ran faster than I thought he could.

Bowman, Murchison and Scolz showed top form in the 100-metre dash, but Paddock was not so good. He was slow on the take-off and seemed to lack his usual pep. Abraham is the only man we have to beat in the 100 metres.

Other foreigners who looked to me were Lewdrer, the French high-jumper, who cleared six feet without removing his trousers. I watched him closely and he was in fine form. Osborne was in his usual good form and Brown seemed not bothered by his bad leg which is protected by a special brace. He complained of no pain.

Still other foreigners we fear are Lowe, Stallard and Moutain of Great Britain in the 800 metres, also Johanssen of Sweden who looked the strongest in winning his heat. Of our men Enck and Dodge looked best to me. Ward and Watters also were good, but Richardson is not at his best, being troubled by a bad cold. He also failed to use his head but managed to qualify.

Hof's withdrawal from the pole vault leaves the Americans in command, with the exception of Petterson of Denmark, who has done thirteen feet two inches. He is the only foreigner we have to fear in this event.

The running of Ritola and the non-appearance of Nurmi in the eight hundred and ten thousand metre races were the high lights of the day. Ritola's record-breaking performance was an epic of specialization and only came after a big argument with Nurmi, in which the two became bad friends.

Wide, of Sweden, was the only man Ritola failed to lap, our men being outclassed. Wide has a splendid leg action, but carried his arms in an exaggerated and wholly impractical style.

In addition to Ritola's effort other Finns proved themselves to be strong distance runners. Berg and Sipila surprised me by finishing third and fourth in the 10,000 meters. Both are fine runners and practically unheard of before today.

In to-morrow's events America should turn the score. I am confident Taylor and Brookins will run one and two in the 400 meter hurdles. For the finals Taylor is my favorite, as Brookins is looking a bit unstrung following his effort to-day.

July 8.—Abrahams lived up to the scare he gave Robertson by capturing the cherished Olympic championship yesterday.

MR. BABE RUTH

The Babe is the most stirring voice in baseball's big ensemble. The nation bends a reverential knee to the eloquent, rumbling bass of his bat.

The Babe not only hits twice as many homers as anybody else but hits 'em twice as far, twice as robustly and twice as magnificently.

The Babe is the only player in baseball who is sure of a rousing razz when he fans. This is the true test of genius. Errors of the mediocre never stir the multitudes to commotion.

The Babe is the hero of the masses, idol of the bleacher soviets and high priest of balldom's black shirts. He has wrenched the sport from the clutch of the cold, unromtive technicians and stripped it bare of such parlor shams as "inside stuff" and "managerial strategy."

The Babe has brought simplicity and a democracy to the game that it never knew before. Translated in terms of the field it is, "Swing from the hip."

The Babe never leaves any room for speculation. The pitcher knows in advance that the Babe has blood in his eye and murder in his bat. The pitcher has no choice. Either he must throw the ball over the grandstand or pitch and watch the ball sail over the centre-field wall.

The Babe's system satisfies the bugs thoroughly. It requires no great amount of thought and perception to grasp the subtle ingredients of a four-base hit. And besides it is much easier to get worked up over a four-base hit than a one-base hit, or a swinging bunt, or a Texas leaguer.

The Babe will go down in athletic history as one of the immortals. A few may object that he could do nothing but hit. Still, it will have to be added that he hit with uncommon vigor. Shakespeare is remembered only as a dramatist and Rodin as a sculptor. But both of them, it seems, were pretty fair in their line.

Good or bad, the umpires so we are told, never get a hand ....But in St. Louis they often get a fist.

The great Mr. Ruth thinks that the Yankees have a hard row to hoe.. And come to think of it they have been playing like a lot of farmers.

The record for suicides in United States was broken last month....Mr. O'Goofty thinks the defeat of the American fencing team in Paris was a contributing factor.

The Low Down on One Stroke Scully

Dear Sir: My attention has been called to your remarks concerning One Stroke Scully, claimed by you (who pose as a sports writer) to have been an oldtime Olympic oarsman. That is to rock with laughter. He got his name, so my grandfather told me, for a reason as far removed as Cleveland is from California. (Advt.) My grandfather, who was One Stroke's brother, in a moment of exaggerated anger, said:

"You dern drone, put your back into that corn husking. You never did a stroke of work in your life."

"I did too," cried out our hero, for indeed it was he.

"How many?" bullied my grandfather.

"One," triumphed our hero.

And that's how he came to be known through the so-called English speaking world as One Stroke Scully.

Yours with no respect at all,
FRANK SCULLY,

Strange, isn't it, now that Washington is leading the league, no one has accused Clarke Griffith with interfering with the management of the club?

Three baboons were present at a dinner party given by a New York show girl the other night.....The names of the gentlemen were discretely withheld.

There was one nice thing about the late spring ....It kept the "is it hot enough for you" pests on the side lines.

The Ringlings are going to buy the Giants .....But for real clowns they can hardly afford to pass up the Phillies.

Walter Johnson was knocked out of the box the other day ....We predicted years ago that this fellow would never do.

CANADA'S OLDEST HOUSE STANDS

Historical Treasure Made a Gift to Quebec Commission of Historical Monuments.

BUILT IN 1639.

QUEBEC, Que., July 8.—(Canadian Press).—Canada's oldest house, the first residence of the Jesuit Fathers in Sillery, Que., is now the property of the Province of Quebec. Two sons of the late Hon. J. R. Dobell, minister in the Laurier Cabinet of 1896, have just given what is considered as one of the most valuable treasures of the country to the Commission of Historical Monuments, lately created by the Provincial Government.

The first residence of the Jesuits in Quebec was built in 1639 by Father Masse, the first missionary who arrived in Canada, and M. le Commandeur le Sillery.

Pierre George Roy, historian of Quebec, says the residence is the oldest in Canada and second oldest in North America, the first being located at Ste. Augustine, Florida. In front of the Jesuits residence the Jesuits built a church, the second in Canada. Father Masse was buried under this church when he died in 1646. The church has been destroyed by time, but the residence defied the centuries.

The properties were transferred to the state in the first years of the 19th century, and they then became a royal store. Later they passed into the possession of a lumber merchant, and finally became part of the Dobell's mansion. The residence is located at the foot of the cape, at L'Anse au Foulon, where Wolfe's soldiers arrived on the eve of the battle with Montcalm's men on the Plains of Abraham.

It is the intention to propose the transformation of the residence into a museum, wherein everything that belongs to the history of the Jesuit fathers may be kept.

KEENE TO PLAY HERE TO-MORROW

East Peterboro League is Going Strong, With Lots of Pep.

The Keene boys will mix things with the George Stree hopefuls tomorrow evening in an East Peterboro baseball game . Keene is a hardy aggregation of ball flingers, and trimmed the Methodists by a close margin in an exciting fixture on their home lot a matter of a few weeks ago. The village lads were also right in the whirl last year and were treading on the Cognawagas' heels during the full course of the race in which the Cogs. copped the ribbons. This year Keene are hopeful of doing even better and of coming out and winning the honored title instead of finishing a close second.

George Street are no slouches either, and any team that has championship aspirations, had better not overlook the Northerners, because they have a world of good material and are shaping together better for the last of the race. George Street have been in a batting slump the last two games, but to-morrow night they hope to cross up the jinx and go right after the Keene hurlers.

It may just as well be mentioned that the race in the East Peterboro League is very close. Although no official team standings can be made public in this League because of a few disputed games, yet a fairly accurate standing can be given. Cognawagas and George Street are in the front with perhaps a few points separating them either way. Then Mackey's and Keene with Mackey's also well in the front. Then comes Sam. Copperway's braves of Curve Lake. And right here let it be known that the Curve Lake tribe is proving the dark horse of the League. With the benefit of good coaching from some American friends, they are showing that they can wield more than just fishing rods and traps. They are swinging their bats, one and all, and their clubs will be notched often with the mark of victory before the season is over. It is prophesied by one who saw them knock the George Street speed artists high, wide and far, that they will not lose a single game on their own stamping ground and will prove her griddle for any team while even playing away from their native shores.

Lakefield is acting as the rearguard of the League, and is performing that duty supremely well, by dropping all their games. Lakefield is making certain that no team will thwart them in their purpose.

The game to-morrow will be a real battle for the fans, who like a close argument with lots of hitting, and who are not too pernickety about a few errors.

SUMO JAPAN'S GREAT SPORT

Giant Grapplers With Billowy Waistlines Are Idolized by the Wrestling Fans.

A COUPLE OF THE "POWERFUL KATRINKAS' DOING THEIR ARTISTIC STUFF.

TOKYO, July 7.—In spite of earth quake and fire, Tokyo is to be a great center for Japanese wrestling this summer as in past years.

Already the toad-like "sumo" men, with their hair drawn up in a curiously feminine knot, are gathered in the capital for practice. Ryogokobashi wrestling hall, gutted by fire last September, is being rebuilt, and an 11-day tournament is in prospect.

Sumo must not be confused in the occidental mind with jiu-jitsu. Sumo is the sport of the strong and heavy, jiu-jitsu the protection of the weak.

In sumo, "heft" counts for much. The competitors grapple, strain, grunt, push and present the general aspect of two bulls trying to shove each other through a round corral fence. The corral, in this instance, consists of a circle on the floor. To be pushed over this, or to be compelled to touch hand or knee to the floor, spells defeat.

Jiu-jitsu is entirely different. In this ,competitors make use of their opponent's movements to bring his downfall. Let the aggressor start to make a step forward, and by a dextrous sidewise kick the other has put him on the floor.

"Jiu-jitsu is a science, an art," explained an expert. "It is an ideal accomplishment for a small, wiry people. But masculine ideas are the same in every country and it is the big chesty sumo man who is idolized by the Jpanese populace."

PRINCE GLAD TO SEE U. S. BEATEN

He Presided at Banquet Given to Competing Nations at Olympic.

PARIS, July 8. — Canadian Press. —The Prince of Wales presiding at a banquet given by the British Olympic Association last night, in honor of competing nations, in flawless French, gave an unusual toast: "The Sovereigns of Nations here represented."

The Prince referred to "the unforgettable spectacle" at Colombes, in which 45 countries were represented, and said: "If we could teach our young boys to be good sportsmen, that would be worth while."

Referring to the British victory attained by Abrahams in the 100 metre race, the Prince said he was pleased that Britain ha "put one over the United States."

He said he was sorry that 420 competitors representing the British Empire were not present at dinner.

When the Prince concluded his speech the guests sang "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and cheered again and again.

DO YOU KNOW BASEBALL?

BY BILLY EVANS

QUESTIONS

1. There are two out and three men on the bases. The count is three balls and two strikes on the batter. The next pitch is wide of the play, making the fourth ball. While the runner from third is jogging toward the plate, the coacher runs alongside him and pats him on the shoulder. The umpire called the runner out because of the actions of the coacher, retiring the side. Was that the correct ruling?—H. W.

2. What is the proper ruling on the following situation? There is a runner on first. On the hit and run the batsman drives a ground ball to the first baseman, who touches the bag, retiring him. He then throws the ball to the second baseman, who touches the bag ahead of the runner. Does that retire the runner or must he be touched? If the runner, when he saw the throw beating him to second, turned and got back to first before being touched, would he be safe?—J. C.

ANSWERS

1. The umpire should have paid no attention to the action of the coacher. The base on balls entitled the batsman to first and all runners to advance one base, scoring the runner from third. The pat on the back by the coacher in no way interfered with the play, which is the thought of the rule.

2. Mere touching of the base did not retire the runner at second When the batsman was retired, the force was removed, and the runner had to be touched. He had a perfect right to back to first.

JUNIOR GAME RIVERSIDE PARK

Important Game of Series Takes Place at Riverside Park Wednesday Evening.

There is a big game for the fans to-morrow night at Riverside Park when the Crescent and Lakeviews in the Junior series hook up in a league game at six o'clock. The Lakeviews who a while ago were down and out with two losses and no wins are now on top of the league with three wins and two losses, while the Crescents are right on their heels. The Lakeviews are sure of a win but they realize that they will have to give everything they have got to get away with it. The Crescents still have a great chance to cop the championship and are eager to get another crack at the Lakeviews while they are in the best of shape. Both teams are full of pep and sluggers all the way and will provide the fans with some snappy ball .These teams have to survive as well as the big teams and why should they not get some support and encouragement as well as other teams. They put up a high class brand of ball that any fan would be tickled to death with.

LOWE OF BRITAIN WINS 800 METRES

Feature Olympic Event on Two Successive Days Credited to British.

OLYMPIC STADIUM, Colombes, France, July 8.—Great Britain conquered the United States in the feature event of the Olympic games for the second straight day, when D. G. A. Lowe, team mate of Harold Abrahams, winner of the 100 metres yesterday, led a brilliant field to the finish in the 800 metres final event event this afternoon.

It was the team work of the Britons that gave them victory, for H. B. Stallard, the favorite, set a terrific pace for three quarters of the way when Lowe came through with a burst and broke the tape only half a second slower than the time of Meredith's world record.

JUVENILE FIXTURE AT FAIR GROUNDS

Maple Leafs and Curlers Meet in Game to Decide First Half To-night.

The Maple Leafs and the Curlers clash to-night at the Exhibition grounds in a Juvenile league game that is sure to be full of excitement. A win for the Leafs will give them the first half of the Juvenile series, while a win for Alex. Kay's hopefulls will tie them with the Maple Leafs. When the two teams met in their first appearance about two weeks ago they battled for seven innings, the Leafs winning out in the last innings, when one man scored on a wild pitch by Woods. It was a great game and was one of the finest pitching battles seen in a long time. Chuck Bradley on the mound for the Leafs pitched a no hit no run game and fanned 18 out of the 21 men that faced him, while Carl Woods whiffed ten of the Leafs.

Both pitchers are in the best of condition and another game like the former one is expected.

GARAGE CONSIDERED.

Plans for a nine-car garage for their fleet of trucks and cars were considered by the Utilities Commission yesterday evening, and after the meeting the members visited the property at the corner of Aylmer and Sherbrooke streets, suspending their decision for the present.

It was suggested that the garage be built along Sherbrooke street, with the doors opening into the yard. One of the advantages of this arrangement was its harmony with a scheme to enclose the property, and to have the employees enter by one gate, so that their going and coming could be easily observed. On the other hand it was pointed out, yard room for turning the cars would be saved if the garage doors faced the street. An alternative plan lays out a square building with entrances on each side for cars.

Mr. Robert Hicks, chairman, said that the Commission required not only adequate garage facilities but also storage room and a place that the linemen could call their own.

The Bell Telephone Company's garage will be looked over by Mr. H. O. Fisk and Mr. R. L. Dobbin for ideas that may be incorporated in the proposed garage.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn, M. P. P., expressed himself in favor of building the garage, providing the commission had the money. He remarked that there was no great hurry for the garage.

"We can go ahead with them as soon as we are sure we have the money to do it," said the chairman, who indicated some of the savings in the Commission's construction programme out of which the garage will be largely financed.

Mr. Mason agreed with the other members but no action will be taken until a further report is received from Messrs. Fisk and Dobbin.

Lansdowne Street Main.

Approval for the construction of an eight-inch water main on Lansdowne street from Lock street to Sherbourne streets, was given, providing sufficient revenue is forthcoming. Mr. Dobbin said he had already been given assurances of 13 services from the city's side of the street and five from the township.

The commission went over the ground yesterday evening and authorized Mr. Dobbin to proceed with the work as soon as sufficient applications for services have been signed.

Power Line Passed.

Mr. Fisk's recommendation for a 7,500-foot power line into Otonabee from a point directly opposite Purdy's sawmill, extending down the River Road, was accepted.

Twenty-four residences will be served at the beginning at $9 each.

The estimated cost of constructing the line is $1,957.60.

The Commissioners were uncertain as to whether the government's assistance to rural power lines would apply in this case, and when they are next in Toronto they will interview the Hon. Mr. Cook for full information on this point.

Casually discussing rural extensions Mr. Fisk said that there would be good business for the Commission in Chemong if it were not for the fact that it is "only a ninety day proposition."

Mr. Bradburn remarked that there would also be considerable demand for power in Bridgenorth, and this territory may be tapped eventually if satisfactory arrangements can be made with the prospective power consumers in both the village and Park resort.

West End Lines.

Construction work on Homewood avenue and Gilmour street, at an estimated cost of $771.40, was recommended by Mr. Fisk, and approved by the Commissioners.

Eight houses, all within the city, will be connected to the new power line at a minimum rate of nine dollars, producing a revenue of $72.

Incidentally it was pointed out that before going into Otonabee township right will have to be obtained from the municipality to enter upon their roads for the erection of the transmission lines.

The secretary was instructed to write to the Otonabee council requesting that a bylaw be passed in order that the residents of the township could obtain the power they have asked for.

Lack one Meter.

Referring to the operation of the new distribution station, Mr. Fisk said that it was working splendidly. The equipment was complete with the exception of a frequency meter, which the manager advised the Commission to supply for the benefit of the sub-station operator. It provided information which would greatly help him in his work. The cost would be $75. This matter was laid over for the present.

Payment to the C.G.E.

An account of $308.72 was passed as a final payment to the Canadian General Electric Company for the switching equipment they made for the sub-station. A balance of $500 had been withheld by the Commission from which $191.28 was deducted for extra engineering and inspection expenses.

Move Meter Department.

It was decided yesterday to transfer the meter department from the city hall to the upper floor of the sub-station. Mr. Bradburn said that the new quarters could be equipped right away and the meters would be removed from the danger of fire risk, because the new sub-station is a fireproof building. The Commissioners were unanimous in their desire to keep this department as efficient as possible and abreast of the times.

Mr. Fisk intimated that he was not entirely in favor of this change, but the Commission anticipating the growth of the city's electrical business even mentioned the possibility of entirely vacating the Simcoe Street offices and centralizing them at the corner of Sherbrooke and Aylmer streets.

DEPOSITORS OF HOME BANK WILL GET NO RELIEF

Depositors Proposed That They Receive 60 Cents on the Dollar.

BEEN PAID SOME.

OTTAWA, July 8. — (Canadian Press).—There will be no relief from the Federal Government for Home Bank depositors this session. That much was made clear in answer to some inquiries made here yesterday whether or not there will be any governmental reimbursement of those depositors next session is yet to be determined. It will be recalled that when the Home Bank depositors' representatives appeared before the Committee on Banking and Commerce a few days ago, Acting Minister of Finance Hon. Jas. A. Robb asked what they hoped to realize from the liquidation of the bank's assets. In reply, they submitted to the Acting Minister of Finance the proposal that they be reimbursed to 60 cents on the dollar. They had already been paid 25 per cent. by the liquidator, and they stated that they would take a change on getting an additional 15 per cent. from further liquidation.

While no expression of the Government's attitude can be obtained, it is understood on good authority that it will move cautiously in the matter and that it will await future indication of fruits of liquidation before making any proposal as to Federal reimbursement. The strongest argument against reimbursement is that of the establishment of a dangerous precedent. On the other hand, there is a recommendation of the Committee on Banking and Commerce—not a unanimous report—that while the Home Bank depositors had no legal claim, they the moral claim in equity. The committee's report, however, refrained from specifying the amount to which the Government should reimburse.

In the House itself it is doubtful if a sufficient number of votes could be mustered in favor of reimbursement.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

LIVELY COMEDY AT ROYAL.

Bryant Washburn in "Try and Get It" Is in His Element.

Those who enjoy a hearty laugh and a lot of romance interwoven, will do well to see "Try and Get It" at the Royal Theatre this week until Wednesday night.

It isn't a heavy drama; there are no moments of intense human passion surging relentlessly like the waves against a rocky shore—but there are a hundred laughs, there is satisfaction and real entertainment.

Bryant Washburn, the star, is sent to collect a bill that is a standing joke. The one against whom it is charged thinks he has paid it and naturally refuses to consider doing so again.

The collector has the time of his young and innocent life trying to get the money. He eventually does so, wins the daughter of the man and gets a job as general manager.

Billie Dove is the girl. Others in the superlative cast are Edward Horton, Lionel Belmore, Joseph Kilgour, Carl Stockdale, Mme. Rose Dione, Hazel Deane and a bevy of fashion show beauties.

ORIENTAL SPLENDORS LEND CHARM TO TOURNEUR PICTURE AT THE ROYAL MONDAY

Oriental dancing girls— a hundred of them.

Nubian slaves.

Eunuchs.

Slave girls.

Hanging lamps, fountains, rich tapestries, luxurious rugs, brilliant-hued cushions, hookahs, all the trappings of ancient Oriental splendor.

With these Maurice Tourneur took the most magnificent scenes of "The Brass Bottle," the unique intertwining of Arabian Nights' Entertainment and a modern English love story that is appearing at the Royal Theatre and is presented by M. C. Levee.

A whole day and most of a night were spent in perfecting the scenes of sumptuous entertainment that form one episode of this First Nation picture.

Harry Myers is seen in turban, jewels and robe as Horace Ventimore, the young English architect whose modern home has been transformed into a palace of ancient Arabia by a genie, six score dancing girls pirouetted before him in an endeavor to turn his mind from his lovely fiancee.

The unusual beauty of the scene held most of the cast of the picture, which includes Ernest Torrence, Tully Marshall, Barbara La Marr, Charlotte Merriam, Ford Sterling, Otis Harlan, and others, stayed on the set watching it long after their own work was through.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"Remember, there is a snake and devil in every woman," said his wise friend to Juan Ricardo, when the young soldier came under the spell of Guerrita, the wife of Pedro, the Fox. Pedro was a smuggler of Spain crafty and ailing, and Guerrita was his wife, beautiful, young, unscrupulous.

"Thy Name is Woman," the feature picture now showing at the Capitol Theatre, is unusual. A peculiar quality of the production is the character of the sub titles. The elemental emotions of the three actors in the triangular tragedy, Pedro, and his wife, and the young, handsome Juan, are portrayed without artifice or effect on the screen, mainly in the wording of their odd conversation. It is not so much by her actions that Guerrita inflames the imagination and passions of the young, enslaved soldier, as by her words, and it is with words that Pedro calls her back to him, to keep his own forever.

With a vehicle like this, a thrilling colorful, passionate picture of old Spain, with a youth and romance and beauty of Ramon Novarro and Barbara La Marr, with a story of intrigue and vain passion and fierce in fatuation, the feature can hardly help but be tense and interest-holding. Between the old-sickly Pedro and the flaming youth of Juan, flashed the lure of Guerrita, and the finale is as logical as the unfolding of the story. Only the bright dagger in the hand of Pedro could solve the problem and cut the thread of the three lives. And then comes the soothing touch of the other woman, the good woman, that justifies the final subtitle, "Love! Thy Name is Woman." Warm, intense, passionate, different and startling, it is an entrancing picture, one of the most interesting seen here in some time.

AT THE REGENT.

VIOLA DANA'S NEW FILM TALE OF PARIS INTRIGUES

"In search of a Thrill" Gives Metro Star Great Role as Paris Butterfly

Viola Dana in her zippiest melodramatic comedy, "In Search of a Thrill," a Metro production is the treat in store at the Regent Theatre for their patrons this week, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Adapted from Kate Jordan's short story, "The Spirit of the Road," and directed by Oscar Apfel, "In Search of a Thrill" promises to top in popularity all Miss Dana's previous productions, for it is a rare combination of comedy and thrills done with the charming verve and dash that is char acteristic of the Peter Pan girl of the screen. Warner Baxter, Mabel Van Buren, Templar Saxe and Rosemary Theby head the supporting cast..

Miss Dana has the role of an American flapper, in Paris, whose passion for continuous excitement leads her into breath-taking adventures. Fans will get all the action they want in "The Saerch of a Thrill," for the story speeds from one adventure to another, culminating in a dramatic episode at a rendezvous of the Paris underworld.

Ann Clemance, played by Viola Dana, occupies a villa near Paris with her aunt. In the French metropolis she meets Adrien Torrens (Warner Baxter), a young American author, to whom she was formerly engaged. They are attracted to each other again, but Adrian, a serious-minded chap, has no patience with Ann's reckless frivolities.

Feeling that she has lost his respect, and knowing his interest in the poorer unfortunate classes, Ann disguises herself as a crook and breaks into his apartment, hoping to win his sympathy. Instead of freeing her, Adrian compels her to accompany him on a tour of the slum district, where she realizes for the first time the horrible conditions brought about by the indifferent attitude of a few of the wealthy aristocracy.

In a Montmartre dive, Ann is recognized through her disguise by a leading gangster, who was a witness of one of he rearlier escapades. This thug plots with his Apache cohorts to kidnap the girl and hold her for ransom.

What follows is one of the most thrilling battles royal ever screened —that will make "In Search of a Thrill" a photoplay long to be remembered.

KNOT IN DEADLOCK WILL BE CUT SOON

Several Members Frankly Confess to Continued Deadlock.

OTTAWA, July 8. — (Canadian Press).—While several members of the Ontario sub-committee on redistribution frankly confess to the continued deadlock, there is a broad rumor to the effect that the main committee will cut to-day the gordian knot by bringing to the Commons a majority and minority report. As weeks pass and the solution of the redistribution problem seems ever more remote, politicians of all parties are becoming reconciled to what appears the inevitable outcome—two reports with a consequent prolonged and bitter debate in the Commons.

Should this happen, the present session is very likely to continue until the end of the month, if not longer. The entire hope of early prorogation lies in the compromise on redistribution.

FISHING LICENSES ARE SELLING WELL

Provincial Government Taking Precautions to Prevent Illegal Transfer of Permits.

Mr. Chris. Graham reports that 150 fishing licenses have been taken out by Americans in Peterboro. This does not represent all the licenses purchased by Americans who are fishing in Kawartha waters as many buy their licenses at points of entry as they enter Ontario, especially those who travel by motor.

The Provincial Government is taking special precautions this year to prevent the transfer of licenses. One license in other years has been used by five or six persons in some instances.

To overcome this practice the Government requires the issuer of licenses to write on each permit, the age height, weight, colour of hair and colour of eyes of each purchaser. It an inspector finds a person whose description does not tally with the description on his license, his suspicion is immediately aroused and already there have been convictions for transfering licenses this year by the local Fish and Game Inspector.

The price of a fishing license is $5.50 and each member of a family is required to purchase one.

Mr. Graham stated that many fine catches have been made and the general report is that fishing is good this season. Because licenses may be purchased at border points it is impossible to compare accurately this year's trade with last, but about the same number of licenses have been issued this year up to the present time as compared with last year at this date.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

DOLLAR BUYING TWICE AS MUCH

According to Figures Quoted by Citizen Comparing Costs of Staples Now and in 1920.

SUGAR SOLD $25 THEN

A citizen who waited until the Postal strike had passed over in order that he might not be regarded as inimical to their interests has estimated that the cost of many of the articles of food and clothing are fifty per cent less than they were four years ago.

Referring to the costs in 1920 and comparing them with those of to-day he cited these salient declines in the prices of what are regarded as staple goods. For example: granulated sugar at this time in 1920 was selling around $25 a hundred pound as against $8.74 ,the prevailing price a few days ago when he called attention to the contrast., Potatoes four years ago were $7 a bag as against $2.25 and $2.00 now. The list may be made as follows:

White sugar	$25.00	$8.74
Potatoes	7.00	2.00
Flour	7.50	3.90
Lard	40c	22c
Bacon	60c	25c
Ham	75-80c	60c

These are index prices, said this informant. Boots he affirmed are fifty per cent. cheaper than they were four years ago. Cotton is fifty per cent. lower. Rolled oats are down to half their cost four years ago. And so on over an extensive list which excludes some conspicuous items such as rentals which have become oply slightly more favorable to the tenant, probably due to the fact that the taxes which property owners are called upon to pay, refuse to recede to any appreciable extent.

CANNOT BULLY HIM ON C. N. R. SAYS BENNETT

Senator Wants to Know Facts About Sale of Lake Vessels.

ATTACKS THORNTON

Declares C. N. R. Official Desired to Sell Boats to Party Friends Cheap.

OTTAWA, July 9 (Canadian Press), — Senator W. H. Bennett, charged in the Senate yesterday that when in 1923 there was a shipping combine on the Great Lakes to hold up the public for insurance and space rates, two of the largest vessels of the Canadian Government Merchant Marine were handed over to the combine at a ridiculous rate. At this time, Senator Bennett added, the Government Merchant Marine had twelve vessels on the Great Lakes, and it had been expected that this fleet would have been sent to the head of the lakes to bring down grain.

Senator Bennett claimed there was an even more scandalous condition in handling the coal for the railways on the Great Lakes. The Canadian National Railways required 1,500,000 tons of coal on the upper lakes. They had twelve ships of their own, but the contract for handling the coal was given to the combine on the Great Lakes. He said the Government was frightened to let the public know the profit made by the steamship company out of these coal contracts while the railway steamships were idle.

Nearly all these vessels had been sold, and he wished the proposed committee of inquiry to find out on whose suggestion they were sold. He wanted to know if higher up officials in the Canadian National service had ceased to have connection with the Canada Steamship Company, and also when Grand Trunk officials had ceased to hold stock in shipping companies in their clerks' names. Some of the vessels sold were declared to be not adapted for the lake service, but as soon as they were sold to private companies they were put into commission. He felt that the Canadian National Railway officials had wanted to depreciate the value of these vessels in the public eye and have them placed on the bargain counter for party friends. He took objection to the position taken that there should be no criticism of the Canadian National Railway management, and declared that he would not be bullied, cajoled, or coaxed into silence on this subject.

Enormous Salaries.

Senator Bennett then referred to the "enormous salaries" paid on that railway, and particularly to one man who received over $20.000 and probably $30,000 per year and was provided with a palatial car to joy-ride around the country. He also referred to another "importation from the Long Island Railway" at an enormous salary. He declared it was time for a show down, that the people were tired of this "mismanagement, waste and extravagance."

Hon. Gideon Robertson drew attention to the statement that officials and employees of the National Railways had voluntarily offered to give up one day's pay per month. This, he said, was not done by the employees, as they had their salaries cut in both 1921 and 1922, while the salaries of officials remained at war peek prices.

He could not state that the officials had not voluntarily made this offer ,but he could state that they had been served with notice that very shortly their salaries would be reduced 4 per cent., and this was about equivalent to the loss of one day's pay per month.

Defends Thornton.

Senator F. F. Pardee argued that Canada had been forced into Government ownership of railways, and no man had undertaken a bigger task than Sir Henry Thornton. He had brought a number of disjointed railroads into a splendid system, which was giving a better service than we had ever had. He had never seen any extravagance, but we must always remember that money must be spent to obtain results, and Sir Henry Thornton was spending money wisely . He was making the road a first-class proposition, and in time would turn it into a national asset. If we kept the railway in politics we would destroy its usefulness. He pointed out that the voluntary proposition of the officials and employees to give up one day's pay per month would mean a saving of $5,000,000 per annum.

CURIOUS WOMEN SCALP INDIANS

"White" Indian Children Were Maltreated by "Civilized" Souvenir Hunters.

YOUNSTERS AFRAID

NEW YORK, July 9. — The three "white Indian" children who came here to submit themselves to scientists had a narrow escape from being "scalped alive" by a crowd of nearly four hundred men and women yesterday.

Hysterically crying and cringing with fear behind the handful who tried to protect them from the mob of curious and credulous, the little boys and their sister were finally shoved into an automobile and then whisked off to safety.

It was their first half hour in the 'civilization' of North America.

Going to Ellis Island.

The attack upon children occurred yesterday morning when they were being taken from the steamship Calamares, on which they arrived on Sunday, to Ellis Island, where they were to be held while Richard O. Marsh, who headed the expedition, which brought them, obtained the necessary $500 bond for each of the party of eight Indians.

As the smiling children came out of the darkness of the pier to the sunlight of South street, which temporarily blinded them, the crowd of curiosity seekers which had gathered descended upon them. In a minute the children were surrounded. The few protectors they had were shoved away by the crowd.

Pulled out Tufts.

Hands nearest to the children snatched at their hair. As golden white tufts were pulled out the children cried in pain and terror.

Policemen were called by Marsh, and the crowd finally dispersed but not until many a lock of hair had been yanked out.

Last evening when Marsh had obtained the band and the children with their copper colored parents and three other Indians, were brought back form Ellis Island to the Barge Office, Marsh feared that souvenir hunters would repeat the performance of the early morning. The children also were nervous.

But other than ogle them, the crowd about South Ferry did nothing.

TEACHERS PAID $16 PER MONTH

No Hope for Female School Boards in Quebec, Declares Dean Laird.

MONTREAL, July 9. Canadian Press. — Dean Laird, addressing the 11th annual convention of the Women's Institutes of Quebec at Mac-Donald College, recounted the following story to prove that in the matter of education rural Quebec has a long way to go.

Not so long ago a rural school board on the Gaspe coast requested of Dean Laird that he send them a teacher. The Dean asked the vital question: "How much salary will you pay?" "Thirty a month," was the answer. "You can't expect to get a teacher for that," said Dean Laird.

"Oh, yes, we can—we have one teacher now,and we are paying her 16." "She must be half witted to work for that," said Dean Laird.

The secretary paused, and then being an honest ma apparently confessed, "Well, I believe she is!"

The Dean told the women quite frankly that he saw no hope of their being appointed to school boards in his time at least, but nevertheless, they could help to remedy matters. They should be able to do quite a bit through their husbands. Perhaps this method wasn't the ideal one but it was the only one available.

Mrs. G. M. Leade, president of the Quebec Women's Institutes, urged the women to grasp their work more firmly. In one sense they were at the cross-roads. The discontinuance of the Federal grant to agricultural colleges for their extension work meant that other means of financing would have to be found. They would welcome some aid from the Provincial government. Work had reached the stage where the appointment of a paid superintendent was desirable, encouraging feature was that the Frederic Macfarlane Memorial Scholarship fund of $1000, had been completed, making provision for a yearly scholarship of $50 to the girl from rural Quebec who secured the highest standing in the first of the two-year domestic courses given at MacDonald.

EMPIRE IS NOT A PARTY ISSUE SAYS L. GEORGE

War Premier Tells Canadian Newspaper Men Unity Must Be Sought.

LOVES THE EMPIRE

Reconcile All Diversities Into a Great Pattern Without Prejudice.

LONDON, July 9.—(Canadian Press Cable). —Lord Beaverbrook, the former Montreal financier who is now a newspaper publisher in London had 500 guests at dinner last night to meet the weekly paper editors from Canada who are now concluding a tour of Europe. The guests included Lloyd George, Lord Birkenhead and Winston Churchill.

"You are welcomed as kinsmen to the old hearthstone", declared Lloyd George, addressing the gathering. "We have not forgotten what our partners in the Empire did with us in the name of honor and humanity when we accepted the most formidable challenge ever hurled. I have thought in fear and trembling of what might have happened if that million men from overseas had not come. Europe is not in a satisfactory state to-day but it is getting on; it will work through. It is a troubled old continent but it is a gallant old continent too and somehow finds its way in its own muddled fashion.

Loves the Empire

Continuing Mr. Lloyd George said: "Canada could maintain 600,000,000 people but we must study the limitations and dangers of Empire as well as its possibilities. Its true mission is to consolidate and reconcile all the diversities into one great pattern, setting aside prejudice and predilection. I speak as one who recently did the most unpleasant thing a politician can do. I voted against my party on an imperial question and I want to make a fervid appeal to all sons of the Empire that unity should be sought along lines which do not breed discord in any province of the Empire. In all the provinces, including Britain, the oldest of all, there are internal issues which excite controversy. The Empire must not be made a party question. I am now detached and lead no party but I love the Empire and believe in it."

PIRACY CHARGE HEARD

Owner of 3,363 Cases of Whiskey Says It Was for Cuba.

MONTREAL, July 9 (Canadian Press). — Further descriptions of the raiding of the s.s. Lutzen off New York in October of last year and the alleged unlawful sale of her liquor cargo by Captain Samuel Forde, a New England shipmaster, who is charged here with piracy on the high seas, were given at the resumed hearing yesterday by H. Adilman, financial broker of this city.

Adilman testified that a company, of which he was a director, owned the Lutzen, while he himself, he said, was owner of her 3,363 cases of whisky and bulk liquor.

The cargo was destined for Cuba. Jack Morris, supercargo, who had been held prisoner by Captain Forde, together with J. N. Isaacs of Winnipeg, while Forde sold the liquor to rum runners, gave evidence as to his experiences, and corroborated in great part the story previously told by Isaacs.

AD GOT A WIFE BUT NO KISSES

Savings of 15 Years Lavished on Blue-Eyed Bride in 5 Months.

TALE OF WOE

NEW YORK, July 9.— Married since last February and not yet even a kiss.

His savings of fifteen years, amounting to $2,300, gone.

These were the complaints made yesterday to Assistant District Attorney Lehman by William Waller, fifty-three years.

Until February he had remained a bachelor, but his pay was raised from $1,600 to $1,700 a year and he advertised for a wife. Marion Eleanor Rice, with gold teeth and grey-blue eyes, a ravishing smile and a perfect form, applied for the job as bride.

But just hear the dolorous tale as the bridge tender gave it to Mr. Lehman yesterday:

"She said to me: 'Willie, you can't sleep here till we get a larger apartment.' I gave her $200 to get it. She took her little niece with her but wouldn't let me stay. I have been going up to her flat twice a week and buying her groceries and aspirin. She said she was hurt as a nurse in the war, but I learned she fell off a bus during a party. I gave her $100 to buy an engagement ring. She bought a glass one for a dollar and kept the change.

"Weddings are certainly expensive. The preacher cost ten, the breakfast cost five, a handbag cost $3.50 and she wanted forty phonograph records. Only two weeks ago I gave her two alarm clocks, but neither of them ever woke me up.

"Yes, Mr. Lehman, I never knew how much it cost to get married. I bought her an aluminum milk bottle, sugar, eggs, butter, bread. And a ham, ten pounds. Thirty pairs of silk stockings I bought her and slippers and more than six dollars' worth of beef, iron and wine tonic."

A Perfect 36.

The ancient mariner mopped his red brow, breathed hard and delivered his climax:

"You'd fall in love with her yourself, Mr. Lehman. She has blue-gray eyes, a whole top row of gold teeth, a pretty slim face and a perfect 36-figure. But not a kiss."

Mr. Lehman issued a subpoena for the unkissed bride and directed Waller to return to his office on Wednesday for a conference. All his savings have melted away.

110,000,000 BUSHELS!

Grain Shipped From Head of Lakes This Year.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., July 9. (Canadian Press).—Three of the four grain boats which cleared from the harbors of Fort William and Port Arthur yesterday were United States freighters, two of which took full cargoes of oats totalling 680,000 bushels to Buffalo. The Laketon and Moll carried wheat to Port Colborne and Buffalo, respectively taking out 540,000 bushels. Yesterday's shipments bring the total amount of grain shipped from the head of the lakes since the opening of navigation to more than 110,000,000 bushels. Two vessels are loading grain and three grain carriers are on the way up the lakes.

DEFECTIVE LAW BREEDS CRIMES

Speaker Calls It the "Shame of America" at Meeting of Lawyers.

PLEA FOR JUSTICE

PHILADELPHIA, July 9.—The rising tide of murder and other crimes of violence in the United States challenges the bench and bar to close the loopholes through which criminals dodge or delay justice, Casper H. Yost told delegates to the American Bar Association yesterday after noon.

"Defective justice in America is the shame of America," said Mr. Yost. "In the United States life and property are less secure from criminal violence than anywhere else on the globe that is not in a state of barbarism.

"Approximately 10,000 murders were committed in this country last year, fifty times as many as in the United Kingdom, while in such cities as New York, Chicago, and St. Louis more crimes of violence are committed annually than in the whole of England. And this disgraceful condition is not due to a greater degree of criminality, but to the comparative immunity from punishment or correction that the criminal enjoys in his country.

"The instruments of justice and of law enforcement throughout America are manacled by a preposterous system of criminal jurisdiction that gives crime every advantage over justice, and creates the disgraceful paradox that law often cannot be enforced because the law will not permit its enforement. Crime is disgracefully prevalent in America because the administration of justice is not sound, because, in fact, it not only permits but encourages crime."

Mr. Yost's summary of a situation for which the Bar Association itself is seeking a remedy was built around the topic, "Co-operation of the Press With the Bar in the Administration of Justice."

In discussing the co-operation of the press Mr. Yost said: "In the main the press of this country is directed by men of conscience, who realize their responsibilities to the public, and who are as deeply concerned in the souid administration of justice as are the most public-spirited members of the bar.

"The newspaper so conducted seeks accuracy above all things in its reports. There are difficulties that we all recognize and seek to overcome. The human element, the human limitations are constant obstacles to the statement or ascertainment of truth, in the press as well as in the courts and neither in the press nor in the courts is the whole truth and nothing but the truth ever attained."

As remedies to fight the wave of crime, Mr. Yost urged a searching examination by the bar of what needs to be done to establish the administration of justice on a sound basis and then to array the forces of public opinion in support of concrete and uniform State and national programs.

CATHOLIC WOMEN MEET

Routine Business at Opening Session of League Convention.

EDMONTON, Alta., July 9 (Canadian Press). — Concluding the morning session of the National Convention of Catholic Women's Leagues, a resolution was adopted expressing the League's appreciation of the efforts of His Eminence Cardinal Donatus Sharetti of Canada, former apostolic delegate, in bringing to th notice of His Holiness the Pope the labours of the League, and thereby being instrumental in obtaining the letter from His Holiness read at the formal opening of the convention.

Routine business occupied the remainder of the session, letters of greeting from the Archbishops and Bishops of Canada were read.

M'ADOO STAYS IN THE WHIRL AT BALLOT 94

He Refuses the Invitation to Drop Out With Al. Smith.

DELEGATES SOBER

Compromise Move Stopped by Immovable McAdoo as Convention Tires.

NEW YORK, July 9.—(Canadian Press).—After more than a week of furious warfare over McAdoo and Smith, the Democratic National Convention has begun at last a sober and chastened search for a compromise candidate for the presidency.

For a time yesterday it turned its attention to Senator Ralston of Indiana, but was told definitely he would not accept. Then, at a night session and in many conferences among the leaders, it reviewed again the claims of John W. Davis, Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Senator Glass of Virginia, and several others who have remained in the background of the long aad bitter fight between the two leading contenders.

Outwardly the McAdoo and Smith managers continued deaf to all suggestions of withdrawal, but under the surface there were forces at work which carried some hope of a settlement to end the long deadlock, now approaching its 100th ballot.

Governor Smith's withdrawal from the contest, on condition that W. G. McAdoo also withdraw at the same time, was announced when the convention reconvened by Franklin D. Roosevelt, Smith's floor leader.

Shortly afterward David Ladd Rockwell, McAdoo's manager, asked what he was going to do about it, said "nothing." As the ninety fourth ballot proceeded it became apparent that Roosevelt's announcement had merely served to tighten the lines, while McAdoo managers had launched a drive to bring their man out of second place.

RAIN IN FIRE AREA

British Columbia Forests Saved by Heavy Downpour.

CALGARY, Alta., July 9.—(Canadian Press).—Rain has relieved the forest fire situation in the railway belt of British Columbia, according to advices received by the headquarters of the forestry service in Calgary.

According to word from Sicamous, from four to eight hours' rain fell in that district and it is expected that this applies to the Revelstoke area also. While even such a heavy rain would not put out the forest fires entirely, it will greatly aid the fighters who have been busy since the big electrical storm last week.

BISHOP HITS DRYS

Menace to Cause of Temperance— House of Lords Throws Out Restrictive Bill.

LONDON, July 9. — (Canadian Press). — A bill introduced in the House of Lords by the Bishop of Oxford to restrict trade in alcoholic beverages by popular control to be exercised by periodical voting of the inhabitants of different boroughs yesterday was defeated, 166 to 50, after a three-days' debate.

The Government supported the bill on the understanding that it would be considered in detail in committee but its fate was sealed by the Bishop of Durham, who denounced the bill. Teetotal fanatics, he said, constituted the only faction which could defeat the victory of temperance in England.

TRAGIC DEATHS ALL AFTERNOON

Series of Accidents in Montreal—One Man Shot By Police.

FOUND IN RIVER

MONTREAL, July 9.— (Canadian Press.)— Beginning at noon yesterday a series of tragic deaths and accidents were reported to the police.

Telesphore Levesque, 30 of Sherbrooke, Que., was shot through the back by police officers when he attempted to escape on being questioned as to how he came into possession of a car he was driving in the east end of the city. Eugene Bedard, 32, address unknown, who was with him in the car, ran away but was arrested later and will be charged with being in possession of a stolen automobile.

The condition of Levesque who was taken to the hospital is critical.

John Picotte, 35, in a fit of despondency when his wife left him after a quarrel, swallowed carbolic acid on Monday night and was found dead in his room yesterday.

The body of an unidentified man was found floating in the harbor yesterday afternoon. There were indications that the body had been in the water a long time.

Pinned against a telegraph pole when sruck by an automobile in the north end of the city yesterday evening, Wilfrid Gareau, 60, of Outremont, was instantly killed. The automobile is stated to have been out of control at the time of the fatality.

ASKS CORRECTION

Canadian Woollen Manufacturers Objects to Statements.

TORONTO, July 9.— (Canadian Press.)— Taking exception to a cabled despatch from London which quotes the Yorkshire Observer and which is alleged to be based on statements made in England by by His Majesty's Senior Trade Commissioner to Canada, George A. Dobbie, President of the Canadian Woollen Manufacturers' Association, has sent the following cable to the Department of Overseas Trade, London:

"Canadian Press cables quote Yorkshire Observer as publishing that F. W. Field, H.M. Trade Commissioner to Canada, made public statements at Huddersfield to the effect that Canadian woollen manufacturers were asking adjustment or abolition of special selling privileges in Canada granted United Kingdom manufacturers in order to benefit ill-equipped mills in Canada. While we do not believe that Field made such statements we ask as manufacturers within the British Empire that if Field did make such statements our unqualified denial of their truth be given equal publicity. If Field did not make statements that waranted Observer's interpretation please see that Observer publishes corrections."

In the Canadain Press cable referred to the Yorkshire Observer quoted Mr. Field as follows :Only the really expert ola-established Canadan mills are doing any volume of business to-day."

The sentence in the cable to which exception is taken seems to have been the Observer's own comment. It reads: "It is for the benefit of the ill-equipped mills, according to the Observer, that the abolition of the preference is being urged."

MILLBROOK MAN WAS MURDERED BY AN INGRATE

Offered a Lift to Wayfarer Who Shot Him in Cold Blood.

SLAYER CAPTURED

Faraday Mills Found by Roadside Where Thief Threw Him.

WINNIPEG, July 9.—(Canadian Press.)—To be murdered and robbed of his personal possessions, including his automobile, was the reward meted out to Faraday Mills, pioneer of Western Canada and former resident of Winnipeg, by a wayfarer to whom he had offered a lift in his car, according to word received here from the Sheriff at Mountain Home, Idaho.

Mr. Mills who was enjoying a motor tour of the Western States is reported to have overtaken a man on the road whom he greeted with an offer of aid. The stranger, whose name was not contained in the despatch, after riding for a good stretch, suddenly whipped out a revolver from his pocket and without warning shot Mr. Mills dead.

Discovery of the body by the roadside led to investigation and pursuit, which resulted in the capture of the criminal who is in custody of the Mountain Home police force.

Mr. Mills, who was 61 years old, was born near Millbrook. Ontario, and came west in 1881. He is survived by a widow and six children.

GOVERNMENT ASKS FOR SPECIAL TUBE

Special Radio Receiving Set for Use of All Departments at Capital.

WASHINGTON, July 9. — Government radio men have decided upon a special receiving tube for use by all departments.

They have therefore drawn specification for manufacturers to follow in construction of these tubes.

The tube is of the dry battery variety, not unlike the WD-11 and the base is of a size that fits into UV-199 sockets.

Its difference from other tubes lies in its contact points. These, instead of being prongs, are of the knife-blade type and make contact permanent and certain.

The filament requires a fourth ampere with a nominal voltage of one volt. It will generally be used with 60 volts on the plate and a negative grid voltage of three volts.

Several manufacturers are said to be ready for production of these, tubes, for the government departments.

Nothing is said of tube's adoption for general use outside government departments, but the innovation may be taken up by the public as fast as it becomes known.

CEMETERY MUST BE WELL KEPT SAYS NEW ACT

Percy Township Council Informed of New Legislation Affecting Burying Grounds.

COUNCIL LIABLE

WARKWORTH, July 9.—At the meeting of the Percy Township Council held here on Monday, Councillor Poole called to the attention of his colleagues an amendment to the Cemetery Act adopted at the recent session of the Legislature, and which is designed to save rural cemeteries from neglect. This amendment provides that when the owner of a cemetery cannot be found, is unknown or is unable to maintain it, the municipality in which such cemetery is situated shall be deemed to be the owner and the council shall be charged with the duty of keeping it in order.

Every county council shall have the power to appoint one or more inspectors to look after the cemeteries and to enforce the Act. If a township council fails or neglects to properly care for a cemetery the inspector may secure a court order directing the council to do so. If this order is not obeyed every member of such council can be held liable for contempt of court and punished accordingly unless they can prove to the satisfaction of the court that they were not consenting parties to the neglect.

The rural cemeteries have in the upast been saved from utter neglect, to a large extent, by the exertions of Women's Institutes. The amended Act will at least assure such organizations of the co-operation and financial support of municipal councils.

ONE MORE ALIBI STRIKES THE ROCKS

OMAHA, Neb., July 9.—Women may finally clinch one of the most favorite alibis husbands have for an evening out.

It's the regular weekly lodge meeting.

For now lodge meetings can be attended at home—by radio.

The pioneer in this new departure from the regular diversions of men is the Woodmen of the World, from whose headquarters here regular proceedings are broadcast monthly to the members at their homes. The organization has its own broadcasting station, WOAW, which is said to have one of the largest religious radio congregations in the world.

Helps Travellers.

Earl E. May, president of the Chamber of Commerce at Shenandoah, Ia., conceived this idea when he visited the station last year. It was to hold a world radio camp or lodge meeting, once a month, for the benefit of those who could not attend the meetings in person.

This is of special benefit to those living in towns where no local camp is chartered and to members on the road.

To these men, May believed, the Woodmen of the World could bring their meetings and rituals by radio, whether they be in hotels, isolated homes or trains — provided they have a radio receiver nearby.

Nothing Omitted.

May was made consul commander of the camp and as such performs the rituals. At each meeting, May stands before the microphone, holding the ax symbolizing woodcraft and reading the rituals.

The entire proceedings of the camp meeting are broadcast. These include roll call, reading the minutes, reports of committees, initiations, orations and prescribed rituals.

Besides the order of business and the rituals, a social programme is broadcast, including vocal and instrumental music, so that the members of the Woodmen of the World lack nothing in their radio camp meetings.

REDISTRIBUTION BILL THURSDAY

Committee Will Likely Bring Down Report To-morrow—Commons Defeats Alberta Act.

VOTE WAS 104 TO 27.

OTTAWA, July 9. — (Canadian Press).—An amendment to a motion to go into supply, censuring the Federal Government for its disallowance of the Alberta Mineral Lands Tax Act was defeated in the House of Commons last night on division. The vote was 27 for and 104 against. The amendment, if adopted, would have constituted a vote of want of confidence in the Government. It was introduced by C. G. Coote, Progressive, and seconded by J. T. Shaw, Progressive.

The Alberta group in the House took the stand that the Alberta Act was within the powers of the Provincial Government, and that even if the Federal Government found it necessary to disallow it, the Provincial Government should have been notified accordingly before the adjournment of its Legislature to permit an amendment of the Act.

It was announced at the conclusion of the sitting of the Redistribution Committee that the report of the committee will likely be brought down to the Commons on Thursday.

A bill to confirm an agreement between the Dominion of Canada and the Province of Ontario, defining the respective rights of each Government regarding the disposition of lands in Indian reserves surrendered by Indians for the benefit of the particular band, received a third reading.

Robert Fork, Progressive leader, read a letter to the House from counsel for certain tribes, who declared the proposed bill to be a "malicious document.

DENOUNCES REPORT

Third International in Manifesto Attacks Ruling Classes of All Countries.

MOSCOW, July 9. — In a manifesto to "the proletariat of the world" on the occasion of the forthcoming tenth anniversary of the outbreak of the World War, the Fifth Congress of the Third International, in session here, attacks the ruling classes of all the coutries which it holds responsible for the conflict.

The manifesto declares that the occupation of the Ruhr is a continuation of the hostilities and denounces the report of the Dawes Committee as "only a hidden form of war."

"The United States, whose pockets are crammed with European gold and supported by the French military forces," this manifesto adds, "directs the economic policy of Germany as a penalty for Germany allowing herself to be beaten. Only imposters could say that the decision of the Dawes Committee embody a peaceful democratic solution of Europe's troubles. The Entente dictates its decisions by holding a revolver at Germany's head.

"The antagonism between Japan and the United States, growing out of the recent decision on the immigration question, gives the problem the colour of a racial struggle."

The Congress calls upon the workers and peasants to unite in efforts to prevent war, and urges the peasants of Europe and the farmers of the United States to join the revolutionary labour movement as the only safeguard of humanity.

NEWS OF HASTINGS

Moving Pictures of the Trent Canal Shown Last Evening.

HASTINGS, July 9. — Moving pictures of the Trent Canal were shown in Mr. E. J. Lynch's hall last evening. They were taken two years ago and were loaned by the Ontario government. A party of pleasure seekers who are at present enjoying a trip through the Trent canal by boat, presented the pictures to the residents gratis. One shown which was particularly interesting to Hastings, was that of Mr. James Logan, lockmaster here, opening the lock gates prior to the boat passing through. Not only were the pictures interesting but educative as well, and much was learned by those present of the magnificent scenery and wonderful workmanship of the Trent canal.

HARTLEY DEWART, K.C.

The death of Mr. Hartley Dewart, K.C., removes one of the best known public men in Ontario, as well as one of the most brilliant and distinguished members of the Canadian Bar.

Mr. Dewart was regarded as being at the height of a starry career, especially in the legal profession, in which he had risen to the position of one of the most able counsel in Canada.

Although he was most largely concerned in criminal cases, he enjoyed a large civil practice as well, and his reputation as an authority in constitutional law was of the highest.

Mr. Dewart had also made his mark in politics, and for some time was leader of the Liberal Party in Ontario, a position for which his keen brain and his powers of oratory peculiarly fitted him.

As a man Hartley Dewart enjoyed the regard of his fellow-men to an amazing degree.

His personal popularity knew no limitations of party or other restrictions.

He numbered as many friends among his political enemies as among those whose political views were the same as his own.

A "bonnie" fighter, a hard hitter in debate, Mr. Dewart had the happy faculty of grappling to him the friendship even of those whom he was forced to oppose in the Legislature, and his death will be mourned as sincerely by political foes as by political allies.

HERE'S A GOOD INVESTMENT.

If there are a couple of citizens who are willing to invest $5.00 each and secure a dividend of some thousands of dollars in fun for some of Peterborough's children, the Examiner would be glad to hear from them at once.

The money is needed to help pay for some twenty loads of sand which have been secured to make a beach for the youngsters in connection with the swimming and wading pool at Jackson Park.

Thanks to the efforts of the Health Association and the Kiwanis Club and the generosity of many citizens, the plant at the park is well nigh complete.

The equipment has been reinforced by the addition of a commodious refrigerator, the swimming pool is in use, bathing suits have been furnished.

The only thing that was lacking was a sandy beach, nature so lavish in other respects in its gifts to Jackson Park having overlooked the joy that the childish heart can take out of a pile of clean, warm sand.

So the good fairies who have been keeping an eye on the needs of the Health Association camp decided to supply the beach and the sand is there.

One citizen has donated $10 to help pay for the beach; two other donations of $5.00 each will meet the balance of the cost.

The first two offers will be accepted by the Examiner with the guarantee that the donor will get his money's worth the moment his eyes alight upon the group of happy children building castles and playing games on the beach.

THE BY-ELECTION.

The result of the by-election in Northwest Toronto where W. H. Edwards, Government candidate, was elected to succeed Hon. Thos. Crawford in the Legislature, was a foregone conclusion.

The only opposition came from a representative of the Canadian Labour Party, who was conceded no chance of success, and had none, being beaten by nearly 6,000 majority.

There was nothing at stake in the by-election, and the result means nothing politically, except that it should cause Labour politicians to realize that they have scant hopes of reaching any position of strength for some time in this country.

When a Labour candidate in a city riding cannot make any better showing than was accomplished by Candidate Young in a straight fight against a Government nominee, the chances of Labour candidates in a general election can be estimated.

The chief point of interest was the smallness of the vote cast.

The total amounted to only 9,323, almost 5,000 short of the majority accorded Hon. Thomas Crawford in the last general Provincial election.

There are fifty thousand voters in the riding, so that only one in every five bothered about marking a ballot, and had it not been for the fleet of motor cars drawing voters to support the Government cause the total would have been appreciably smaller.

Evidently the electors of Northwest Toronto do not seem to consider it of much importance who represents them at Queen's Park.

"SORRY, YOU'RE TOO OLD."

At 18 years a boy in England has outgrown his industrial usefulness, according to F. Mander, British educator. He says the old cry of "too old at 40" is being replaced by an employers' attitude of "too old at 18" because boys and girls at 18 are being discharged to make room for younger and cheaper labor.

The London Chronicle comments: "In recent years the question (that of maintenance grants to keep children in school) has too often been debated as if it were purely a question of finance. We, for our part, have no doubt that the continuance of education beyond the age of 14 has become a national necessity. Even the working man has perceived that the labor market is clogged with the proffered services of children whose minds are underdeveloped and whose futures are cramped from the outset."

We have a tendency toward the same situation here in Canada. About 30 years ago, a man was never too old to find a job. Then came the era of fast production in industry.

More work could be squeezed out of young men. So old men went from door to door, seeking a job, only to be told: "Sorry, but we want younger men."

"Too old at 60" became a common expression.

Then it became "Too old at 50."

Now 40 is getting to be the age line in many businesses.

"It's a young man's game" is the word in scores of basic activities.

The pressure of modern competitive business is so intense that nervous breakdowns are becoming common.

You have noticed the increasing number of men in their thirties or early forties who suddenly go to pieces—fall out of good jobs, are unable to make new connections, pack up and vanish—no one knows where.

This is an age of youth.

The sun shines only a few years for most of us, and if we don't make our hay early in the game we lose out. Recommended especially to youths who are idling away their time, dreaming about what they'll do later.

There is no "later."

SHOULD ADMIRAL FIELD WEAR A GAG?

It turns out now that Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick Field did not volunteer the suggestion that Canada might contribute four cruisers—two on each coast—to the common cause of naval defence. He did not even make the statement. What seems to have happened was that, in the course of an interview with Canadian newspaper men, one of them mentioned that suggestions had been thrown out that two cruisers on each coast would be effective for protection. The Admiral did not say "yea" or "nay" to this. He may have quite other ideas of what Canada should and could best do. But, having been presented with the suggestion by a Canadian interviewer, he discussed as a practical naval man just how such a quartette of cruisers might be used.

If a visiting British Admiral cannot talk about the technical side of his profession to enquiring Canadians, after having most carefully refrained from expressing any opinion whatever as to what Canada should do, it would seem as if a humane Admiralty should provide any Admiral about to enter the supersensitive atmosphere of Canada with gas-masks or Maxim silencers. Or he might be instructed to reply—when some daring Canadian, without a proper fear of politicians in his soul, should ask him, say, whether submarines can be portaged like canoes—that he had come to the ripe conclusion that British Columbia apples are the best in the world. This would be noncommital, complimentary and not likely to tear the Empire asunder.

The trouble with Admirals, however, is that they are somewhat give to free speech. We would dearly like to hear what good old "Charley" Beresford would say if told that he must be very careful not to explain the working of a turret to any chance Canadian citizen who came aboard, lest the ever-suspicious Parliament at Ottawa should deduce the remarkable conclusion that he was inculcating subtle "propaganda" intended to coerce Canada into building wicked warships with still wickeder turrets. "Jacky" Fisher, too, would have made an interesting visitor if he had been compelled to don an official gag the moment he entered the three-mile limit off the Canadian coast.

Frankly, we cannot for the life of us see how Admiral Field has erred. He did not offer advice. He did not seek to put the prestige of his name, of his expert knowledge, and of his splendid services behind even the most shadowy suggestion of a demand that Canada ought to do thus and so. To accuse him of "propaganda" is to accuse him of the very crime he most meticulously avoided—unless it be "propaganda" for such heroes to live at all, and especially to bring their fighting ships into our peaceful harbors; peaceful because these lean, sinewy watch-dogs prowl outside.

It would have been supremely silly for the Admiral, when interviewed on naval questions, to have said that the navy was the one thing he could not discuss in Canada because Canadians are so sensitive on the subject. It would have been more than silly—it would have been insulting; and such of our friends at Ottawa as habitually dwell under the barn would have been the first and the most furious to resent the insult. Admiral Field may be a great authority on horticulture, but the world does not know it. What we all want to hear him talk about is his life subject, naval defence.

The distinction surely is that he can talk "navies," but must not talk "politics." Those who are warning him that he must set a very careful guard on his tongue when he visits this part of Canada—and are even hinting that "responsible circles of the Admiralty" should give him "specific instructions"—would be franker and more fundamentally courteous if they warned him and his big, brutal battleship away altogether. That would be a creditable sign to put up at the entrance to each Canadian port:

"Everybody Welcome Except the British Navy."

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Some of the United States sprinters are beginning to wonder why anybody ever called the British slow.

A lot of people in Northwest Toronto apparently didn't know anything about the by election until they read the results on Tuesday morning.

Canada can have a Canadian Minister at Washington if the Canadian people wish to foot the bill. Is it worth the expenditure?

Once more the suggestion is offered to the Democratic convention: Why not Andy Gump as a compromise candidate? He wears no man's collar.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, July 9.—Trading on the Union Stock Yards on Monday finished a good deal better than the morning promised; of 4,046 cattle on offer, 3,895 were sold. Yesterday morning's receipts were only 42 cars; 428 cattle, 541 calves, 1041 hogs and 284 sheeps and lambs. There was a second delivery, but not heavy. The result of Monday's business was to restore a little to the low prices of last week, and in some cases this was 25 cents a cwt. The exporters bought everything available on Monday and finished with 972 head. Steers were bought all the way from $7 to $8.25 a cwt., and a few choice heifers cost $7.50.

The exporters were buying again yesterday, but the selection was small and the quality not high. For a load of twenty steers, 1220 lbs. each, they paid $7.10 a cwt. but these will only go for short keeps. A few other steers 1250 lbs. each, cost $7.25 a cwt. For local butchering Chas. Lunness paid $7.50 a cwt. for two loads of 1250-lb. steers, and this is about the top for medium weights. Choice handy weight butchers', 900 to 1000 lbs. each, are going 15 to 25 cents a cwt. below this.

The general run of useful mixed butchers', 800 lbs. and up, are selling from $6.75 to $6 a cwt. and poor quality killers are $5 to $5.25. Only a small number of cows were on sale, and the top was $5.25 and good cows sold at $4.80. The market was practically bare of bulls. A load of 28 feeders was sold by Shields & Co. at $5.50 a cwt. These averaged 900 lbs. each. A novelty on the market was a load of big rough Western oxen from Winnipeg, and there is some difficulty in marketing them. The good to choice cattle sold readily and some holders preferred to take a chance on to-day's market.

Calves are steady to firmer, with Buffalo a lever for higher prices. Choice calves sold yesterday morning at 9½ cents, and good calves were 8½ cents. Medium quality were generally 7 to 7 1-2 cents, and common to heavies as low as 3 cents.

Choice lambs are being stopped at about 14½ cents a pound, although a few fancy ones brought 15 cents. Light lambs are only good for 10 to 12 cents and yearling lambs sold at 9 cents. Heavy sheep are bringing 5 cents.

Monday's hogs sold generally at 11c cents above the packers quoted bid at $7.75 a cwt. f.o.b. and the same bid stood yesterday.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 9.—(Canadian Press.)—Broad active demand for corn yesterday both for immediate and future delivery led to a sharp new advance in price. Corn smashed the season's top record and Number Two Yellow here commanded $1.03 a bushel, likewise a new high record. The corn market closed strong, 1 1-4c. to 1 7-8c. net higher, July 98 3-4c. In wheat the finish was unsettled, 1-4c. to 1 1-4c. down, with oats 1-4c. and 3-8c. to 5-8c. up, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to 7c. advance.

Scarcity of receipts, together with unwelcome showers and relatively low temperatures, had much to do with the eager buying which sprang up in the corn market. Besides, Texas reported crop damage in some sections, and the fact that the Government crop report was due after the close seemed to operate as an additional stimulus. Sales came almost entirely from holders who wished to realize profits, and the close was at the highest point of the day. Shipping business from here was the liveliest witnessed in a long time.

Wheat values were bearishly affected by increased movement of new wheat in the southwest and consequent hedging sales as well as by rains in Canada. Black rust reports from Minnesota and word of damage by hot winds in the Pacific northwest gave the market a good rally at one time, but the effect failed to last, despite evidence that foreigners were purchasing rather freely. Traders inclined to the opinion that the Government report would prove bearish.

Complaints of smut and blight had some bullish inuence on the oats market.

Provisions reflected the corn market advance and the firmness of hog values.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, July 9.—(Canadian Press.)—Cattle, receipts yesterday 8,000; killing class firm; spots higher on fed steers yearlings and fat she stock; shipping demand fairly broad, some longfed heavies bid 10.75; top yearlings 10.10; bulk fed steers and yearlings 8.50 to 9.75, vealers uneven, largely 50c. higher; packers buying freely up to 11.00.

THE PLAYGROUND OF THE ROCKIES.

Perhaps no country in the world can boast such a number of inimitably beautiful areas of hill and lake and forest to warm the heart of the summer vacationist as Canada.

Chief of these is Jasper National Park, 4,400 square miles in extent—the largest game sanctuary in the world. In this protected area, situated at the base of the Canadian Rockies, wild life of every description roams unmolested. Gigantic, snow-tipped mountains marked with slow moving blue-green glaciers, divided with deep, awe-inspiring rock-walled chasms form a rugged sky line indescribably beautiful.

There is amusement and sport for every taste. Exploring the banks of the rivers that leap through the gorges and tumble in white foaming cataracts, motoring, hiking, or riding along the tree-bowered forest trails; climbing, swimming, boating, tennis and golfing. Dancing in the evening at luxuriously equipped Jasper Park Lodge, where the lights glimmer on the sparkling waters Lac Beauvert, the scene is bewitchingly beautiful and exhilarating.

Ask any Canadian National Railways Agent for illustrated booklet and further particulars.

A WOUND IS AN OPEN DOOR

Absorbine Jr. enables you to shut the door quickly.

The skin is Nature's own protection against germs. When it is bruised, broken or cut, that protection is withdrawn. The door is open. As quickly as possible Nature closes it by forming what we call a scab and renders you comparatively safe against infection. But this scab sometimes takes days to form and until it has fully sealed the wound, even until the wound has thoroughly healed again you must furnish the required protection yourself.

A few drops of Absorbine Jr. in the water will give you an antiseptic wash that will kill all possibility of infection and help nature to heal the wound. As well as being a very powerful germicide, Absorbine Jr. will draw out the inflammation and bring instant relief.

Absorbine Jr. is antiseptic, germicide and liniment in one container—handy to keep always in the house; easy to carry around if you travel.

PARK STREET SEWER

Work is Finished and Road is Now Open for Traffic.

NORTH MONAGHAN, July 9. — The new sewer on Park street south is finished and the road is now open for traffic.

The district immediately south of the city has been favored with welcome rain on several days last week while districts farther north and west of this district were in the dry belt.

Pending the arrival of the new rector to St. George's church, the pulpit has been filled for four weeks by the Rev. Mr. Gardiner of Toronto. Mr. Gardiner has seen four teen years service in Labrador and Northern Ontario amongst the Indians also four years at Apsley to the north of us. Being on outpost duty, as he terms it, it has given him a life full of wonderful, if sometimes very strenuous experiences, all of which enables him to speak with a wonderful confidence in the Divine Master whom he serves.

Next Sunday, Mr. Stuart from St. John's preaches morning and evening.

The Rev. Mr. Hughes expects to commence his duties as rector on July 15th.

NEWS OF ROSENEATH

Women's Institute Held a Meeting—District Convention.

ROSENEATH, July 9.—The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Tuesday evening, July 1, instead of on the afternoon of the regular day, July 3, as that was the day chosen on which to hold the district convention. The meeting opened in the usual manner, with seventeen members present. The chief item of business was a motion by Mrs. Halstead and Miss Vera Varcoe that no more street lights be bought at present, but a gasoline lantern for each of the church sheds. Mrs. Turner, who had been one of the committee to wait upon the Council at their last session, reported a grant of $50.00 to be paid by them towards the expense of keeping up lights. The next place of meeting will be at the home of Mrs. J. Milne in August.

District Meeting.

The district convention on July 3 opened with the President, Mrs. A. J. Nill of Fenella, in the chair. Some time ago Mrs. Nill sustained a very painful accident, and although she is still suffering, was able to be in her accustomed place.

The District Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. R. C. Allen of Cobourg, is also convalescing after a second operation. Her daughter, Miss Edith Allen, has been carrying on the work very efficiently. On motion of Mrs. Turner and Mrs. Alex. A. Brown of Roseneath, Miss Allen was named to take the books for the day in her mother's absence.

Mrs. W. H. Mann of Baltimore, 1st Vice-President, and Mrs. Jessie Phillips of Grafton, 2nd Vice-President, were asked to come to the platform.

The officers of each brand and their respective directors were asked to take side seats together that they might vote. The institutes that had a membership of over twenty-five were allowed four votes and those under that number just three votes.

Mrs. Nill gave a short address telling that she had visited Grafton, Harwood, Roseneath and Cobourg braches, but had been unable to meet with the rest.

At this juncture three local young men who are home from their schools delighted all the ladies by rendering two humorous trios. They were Messrs. Bruce Ingham, Lewis Roberts and Wilfrid Davey.

The reports of the different branches in the district were given as the Acting Secretary read their names—Cobourg, Harwood, Roseneath, Fenella, Baltimore, Grafton, Wicklow and Vernonville. Centreton were just newly reorganized, while Coldsprings were not organized and had held no meetings. This made the Secretary's report show a decrease in members. However, there did not seem to be any lack of interest or enthusiasm.

Mrs. Allen had sent her thanks to the branches for their prompt reports and words and letters of kindness and sympathy from the President and others.

Mrs. Middleton, on behalf of the Auditors, said they had found the books in good order.

The names of the representatives from the different institutes were read and confirmed.

Mrs. Nill, the President, said that before leaving the chair to her successor she wished to thank Miss Edith Allen for her services, as the work had gone on just as smoothly as when her mother had been in charge.

Mrs. Stanley of Grafton made a motion, seconded by Mrs. D. Leach of Fenella, that a letter and flowers be sent to Mrs. Allen.

Mrs. J. A. Brown of Roseneath made an amendment that a letter be sent, but something more lasting take the place of the flowers, something that could be kept in future years. This was seconded by Mrs. Mann. The amendment carried.

It was moved by Mrs. Crozier of Grafton, seconded by Mrs. Davey of Roseneath, that the money be taken out of the district funds to buy the present.

A motion by Mrs. Leach and Mrs. Burgess named the old officers as the committee to buy the present.

The next order of business was the election of officers, which were all by acclamation:

President—Mrs. A. J. Nill, Fenella.

1st Vice-President—Mrs. W. H. Mann, Baltimore.

2nd Vice-President—Mrs. J. Phillips, Grafton.

Secretary-Treasurer—Mrs. R. C. Allen, Cobourg.

The representative to the Federated Board was Mrs. Burgess of Baltimore, while Mrs. J. A. Brown of Roseneath is the representative of the district to the convention in Toronto.

Mrs. Butler and Mrs. Middleton of Cobourg were re-elected Auditors for the present year.

There was a good deal of discussion as to the raising of Federated funds. It was finally decided that each branch send the sum of $6.00 to the District Secretary, $2.00 of it to be used and sent on as federation funds an dthe remainder to be applied on her expenses.

A motion by Mrs. Naylor and Mrs. Butler was tendered the Roseneath ladies for their hospitality, to which Mrs. Brown replied.

A vote of thanks was also given Miss Allen for the work as Secretary done by her.

The remainder of the programme was as follows:

A recitation, "The Proposal," by Miss Bernice Brown.

Solo, "Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses," by Mrs. C. W. Varcoe.

Paper by Mrs. Harrison George of Fenella on home and social duties and entertaining the stranger in our midst.

NASHUA PAPER COMPANY PICNIC

Their First Annual Picnic Was Held Saturday to Wallace's Point.

On Saturday, July 5th, the first annual picnic of the Canadian Nashua Paper Co., was held at Wallace's Point, and proved a great success. About 150 employees and their friends took advantage of the outing.

Busses met them at the mill and conveyed them to the point where games and races were participated in and a good time was enjoyed by all.

The first was a soft ball game, played between two teams from the mill captained by George Crowe and George Gimblett. The game was very closely contested, and was won by George Crowe's team by the score of 9-6. Many brilliant and sparkling plays were made, the feature being a home run by Mr. Stewart Anderson. The effective and very masterly pitching by Mr. D. McLeod, was mainly responsible for the win. Mr. George Wagar was umpire on balls and strikes, and his decisions were not always as they should have been but all in all were called as he saw them.

Mr. J. J. Cunningham was base umpire and while his decisions were close they were also impartial.

After the soft ball game dinner was partaken of. All assembled at the long tables in the shade and did ample justice to the good things provided by the wives of the employees.

After dinner all assembled on the hill where a few photos of the group were taken. Tickets were given to all the children on the grounds for the booth. The children had a very delightful time on the slide, swings and teeters.

All adjourned to the large field to the north of the grounds, where the following list of sports were run off:

50 yards race, boys 6-10 years—Harry Marsh, Douglas Gabbit, Bobbie Cunningham.

50 yards, girls 6-10 years—Elsie James, Vivian Greer, Jean Crowe.

50 yards, boys 10-14 years—Harold Hamilton, Douglas Gabbit.

100 yards, single ladies—Hazel Plunkett, Nellie Thomas, Almada Feeley.

100 yards, married ladies — Mrs. Skinner, Mrs. Lockie, Mrs. Anderson.

Running broad jump—George Gimblett, 14 ft. 4 inches; W. G. Lockie, 14 ft. 2 inches.

Running high jump, ladies—Hazel Plunkett, Nellie Thomas.

Wheel race—T. Skinner, H. Welsh

Centipede race — 1st team: H. Welsh, George Gimblett, H. Scott, A. Parker. Second team: V. Hamilton, B. Hamilton, G. Crowe, W. James.

Volley ball, All Stars v. Invincibles:

All Stars—R. A. Brown, V. Hamilton, D. McLeod, J. Thompson, S. Anderson, G. Gimblett.

Invincibles—G. Crowe, W. James, H. Scott, L. Bristow, H. Gabbit, A. Parker.

All Stars won two out of three games. Scores were as follows:

1st—All Stars 9; Invincibles 15.
2nd—All Stars 15; Invincibles 5.
3rd—All Stars 15; Invincibles 9.

After this list of sports supper was partaken of and this was immediately followed by the tug of war which was won by McLeod's team 2 out of 3 falls.

Busses met the parties at 7 o'clock and all were safely conveyed home after a most enjoyable outing.

Picnic Notes.

The clarion notes of Messrs. Maybee and Lockie's voices in making the announcements awoke the silent marshes for miles around.

The giant frogs which abound in the marshes added their deep bass to the already nerve-racking din.

Another feature of the forenoon was the umpiring of Mr. George Wagar in the soft ball game. The distance of the playing field from the river was the only thing that prevented the members of the teams from giving him a needed bath.

The 100 yard dash for married men brought out many aspirants for Olympic honors. The running of Mr. Harry Welsh was a feature. He with careful training and handling would make Padocks and Murchison or some of the lesser lights, look like plough horses.

The fat man's race was a scream. Some had excess fat, and some had no fat at all, hardly even flesh.

Mr. George Crowe won the 100 yard matched race, beating Vic Hamilton by inches. The special prize for this race was a pig. This added to his game chickens and other birds makes a great collection.

The girls 100 yards race, from 14 to 16 years, brought out a great bunch of starters. This race was won by Miss Hazel Plunkett, aged 36. The time for this race was 36 seconds flat. Considering the state of track and weather conditions this was we consider remarkable time.

SACRED HEART SOCIAL.

Three Thousand People Thronged the Beautifully Decorated Lawn.

Another of the very successful socials which the Sacred Heart parish has a habit of holding annually passed into history last evening. An attendance that came fully up to expectations, and nearly reached the three thousand mark, was registered during the evening, and there was a splendid crowd present for an excellent supper, served at long, white-cov ered tables, where a variety of home made delicacies were dispensed. Energetic men and women of the parish helped to make the entire affair a success from start to finish, and the weather man also smiled on the undertaking.

Several booths were gaily decorated with bright Chinese lanterns and quantities of flags and pennants. A double row of overhead electric lights provided plenty of illumination for the grounds. Centres of amusement were thebusy fish pond and a couple of games of skill that caught the attention of numerous patrons.

The lottery booth had plenty of patronage. Hundreds of useful and fancy articles were on sale, including quantities of children's dresses and suits. The vendors at the two booths devoted to the sale of ice cream and soft drinks had a busy evening, and there was a good audience for the band which gave a programme of popular selections. Another interesting feature was the sending up of numerous colored balloons.

LAKEFIELD HAS A BUSY SEASON IN SUMMER TIME

Catholic Women's League Entertained by Mrs. G. A. Charlton at Her Home.

HONOR MISS KENNEDY.

L.O.L. Paraded to Church on Sunday—Rev. W. Cox Preached the Sermon.

LAKEFIELD, July 8. — Mrs. George A. Charlton entertained the members of the Catholic Womens' League at her home on Friday evening at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Margaret Kennedy, who is a bride of this week. After the ladies were all gathered, Master George Charlton Jr., drew in a prettily decorated waggon filled with gifts for the bride. Miss Roleen Darcy read a brief address expressing the good wishes, not only of the members of the C.W.L. but also St. Paul's parish, to Miss Kenedy, who has been a valued worker in the parish since she came to the village. Miss Kennedy, who was very much surprised thanked her friends in a pretty little speech for their rememberance. Refreshments were served and a social evening spent with music and conversation. A bevy of pretty young girls assisted Mrs. Charlton.

Miss Kennedy was the first secretary of the Catholic Women's League and is a diocesan officer at present and she has always been an active worker in all branches of church work and has been a capable worker in the Ladies Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A. and was also secretary of the local committee of the Traveller's Aid.

She has made many friends in the village, who are joining in good wishes for her future happiness.

About sixty members of the Orange lodges of Lakefield and the vicinity held their annual church parade on Sunday evening to St. John's Church. The procession was headed by the North Smith Brass Band. Bro. R. J. Webster, Master of the District headed the procession. Mrs. Osborne rendered a solo "Son of my Soul" in splendid voice immediatey after the sermon which was given by the rector of the parish, Rev. Walter Cox.

Bridge Progressing.

Work at the new county bridge is progressing favorably, the frame work of the first arch is practically complete and work is in progress also on the west side of the river. The detour is working well and the guardians of temporary bridge are efficient and extremely watchful. Many turn off Queen street at Burnham street, finding it easier to turn from north Water street onto the dam.

Visitors Coming.

License plates of foreign cars are noticed in the village with increasing frequency, Quebec and various states of the union being noticed. Some cars carry an extra plate with the name of their city. This gives the city a considerable amount of advertising as the cars travel about through various states and provinces.

Beautifying Streets.

Mr. Frank Darling has had a strenuous week cutting the grass which owing to numerous showers has grown very long on the sides of the streets. The village mowing machine was brought into use and a number of very respectably large haycocks are the result. The grass had grown very long in some streets and after a rain was rather a menace to the delicate fabrics so dear to ladies hearts for summer costumes.

Schools Closed

The examinations are at last all over and teachers and pupils are free to enjoy their summer vacation. The entrance examinations occupied Wednesday, Thursday and Friday and the lower school examinations were held at the same time for those who failed in one or more subjects.

The drive which has just arrived at the dock is as popular with the youngsters as in the pre-jazz days, the cookery being a very popular result. Times have certainly changed and many things with them, but the popularity of the beans and pie at a lumbermans cookery remain the same as in the golden days when Lakefield was a real lumbering centre and the busy hum of the saw mill was heard for nearly six months every year.

Fishing Popular.

Fishing on Lake Katchewanoonka has been fair and one sees the patient fisherman paddling along in his canoe with his line in his mouth hoping to catch that game but elusive fish, the lunge.

Mr. Robert Carter, who is one of the most successful fishermen in the village, has a unique display of lunge heads on the side of his workshop on Water street. The detour over the dam has given this street unusual publicity and there is a great deal of interest shown in the collection.

"Pal o' Mine", the very attractive cottage on Strickland's Point, built by Messrs. Roy Green and William Hendren is occupied again, receiving many compliments from tourists on the artistic rustic bower built at the dock with its accompanying rustic benches.

The tri-weekly dances in Riverside Pavillion are well attended and afford a pleasant rendezvous for the young people in the delightful summer evenings.

Gardens Do Well.

Gardens are doing well, all the vegetables being almost up to normal in spite of the very late season. Potatoes are showing blossoms and also, sad to relate, bugs so that the time honored preventatives are being used and small boys home fo the holidays are paid small sums for large quantities of potato bugs which they are expected to pick. Peas and beans are in blossom and spinach and other green vegetables are ready for use. Corn is rather slow but cabbage and cauliflower are growing well and are of good size. Beets, carrots, turnips and parsnips are arriving at the period when thinning may be begun. Lettuce, onions and radishes are rather an old story now as they have been ready for use for some weeks. The tomato plants are showing friut, the largest being about the size of an egg. The showery weather has been ideal for gardens and also for strawberries which are a good crop, good sized full flavored berries. The local crop is excellent and the price fairly low.

Hay Crop Ready.

The hay crop is being cut and surpasses the expectations as it is excellent. The late season added to the worries of the farmers but the results regarding hay are encouraging. Grain crops are doing very well and corn is growing well. The heat wave which has been prefaced but numerous showers has advanced growth at a rapid rate.

MENIE FARMERS TO MEET HYDRO IN POWER TALK

Meeting Arranged to Endeavor to Fix Satisfactory Basis for Supply.

COST EXCESSIVE

Farmers Consider $50 Service Charge Makes Proposition Impossible.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 9—William Rannie and from other prominent farmers in the Menie district who are anxious to secure hydro power for their farms, appeared before the Seymour Council at the last meeting of that body. These farmers some time ago united in a petition to the Hydro Commission asking for an extension of the time for the Burnbrae community. An engineer was sent to look over the ground, the necessary number of customers was secured to make the investment pay at schedule prices. These prices were $35 to the consumer who took one horse power $60 for two and $75 for three. It seems that these figures were satisfactory to the prospective customers and it was believed by them that the arrangements would be carried out.

Then the Hydro demanded a service charge of $50 a year in addition to the above rates and the farmers felt that this made the proposition excessive. That is the present status of the affair.

Township Clerk Hay was instructed to arrange for a meeting of the farmers and Hydro officials this to be held in the Ferris block on the 23rd of July, when an effort will be made to straighten out the differences between the contracting parties.

Early Closing

The Council received a petition from residents of Trent River asking that the dancing pavilion be permitted to remain open until midnight instead of being compelled to close at 11.30 o'clock. As there was another and more numerously signed petition in the hands of the clerk in favor of the earlier closing hour, no further action was taken.

Bills to the amount of $5,860.08 were paid, the most of this outlay being for work on the roads of the township.

No Cheese Sold

No cheese was offered for sale at the meeting of the Board and it is not the intention to have any sales unless by special arrangements. There will be a meeting of local dairymen in the Public Library today when addresses will be delivered by H. B. Cowan of Peterboro and others. The local Board is retained now as an organization to watch the situation rather than to put cheese on the market.

Big Butter Shipment

The Trent Valley Creamery yesterday shipped a carload about 40,000 pounds of butter to Toronto. This was the output for the past two weeks. As the butter market is slack at present, the butter will be stored in Toronto until prices improve.

This industry of which R. S. Southworth is manager, has a branch at Keene which as been in operation for the past three years and where the business is steadily growing. The cheese factory at that village closed down this spring for lack of patronage.

He's From Missouri

Dr. S. A. Peake of St. Louis, Mo., and a former resident of this district arrived in town Sunday, for a brief visit with J. A. Loucks and other friends. The doctor was called to Rochester, N.Y., last week on professional business and before his return South decided to have another trip to the home of his childhood.

Dr. Peake is another Canadian who has made good in the United States. He left here after graduating from the High School and qualified on the American side for the practice of both law and medicine. He is also president of the Telegraphers' National Bank of St. Louis.

The former student has not forgotten the High School in which he received his secondary education and every year gives a gold medal to the student making the highest stand at the Middle School examinations.

Dr. Peake is an ardent Republican and is confident that that party will win the next Presidential election. Col. Ingersoll, the famous American Agnostic once publicly declared that he would embrace Christianity when the State of Missouri went Republican. Ingersoll died an unbeliever but since his death Missouri has taken thought to her ways and is now reckoned among the States safe for Coolidge.

Business Changes

Linton Brothers, the new proprietors of the Windsor Hotel building have converted two sample rooms on the Bridge street side into business places and have already secured tenants. C. A. Wilson will move his insurance business into one of these this week and J. I. Adams will open a harness shop in the other in September. Mr. Adams was obliged to give up active business last winter on account of ill health but is now able to take it up again.

Personal

Mrs. F. Clarke, formerly Miss Jennie Nancarrow and who for a number of years, was in business on Front street, is visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. John Nancarrow. Since her marriage Mrs. Clarke has been residing in Flint, Michigan, where her husband, a son of ex-Reeve Clarke of Cramahe township, is in the automobile business.

IN LAKEFIELD AND DISTRICT

Vote of Thanks to Rev. Walter Cox—Quiet Zone Suggested.

When the members of Beresford Lodge No. 313 returned to their lodge room on Sunday evening Bro. F. J. Moore moved a resolution of thanks to Rev. Walter Cox, the choir and church officials of St. John's Church for the courtesy extended to the brethren at their annual church parade. Mr. Cox delivered a remarkably fine sermon setting forth the tenets of the Order in a masterful fashion, clearing away many misapprehensions regarding the object of Orangemen in the present day.

Bro. Robert Carter seconded the resolution which was heartily endorsed by all the members.

Bro. F. J. Moore who joined the lodge in 1872 is the veteran member of Beresford Lodge, as none of the present members were there when he joined. Bro. Moore has ascended the ladder of progress having been County Master, District Master and also holding other high positions in the Order.

A Quiet Zone.

Now that the summer season with its open windows and tooting motor cars has arrived, it is not out of place to suggest that during church services it would at least be courteous to drive as quietly as possible past churches. Allowing for the fact that the non-church going population appears to greatly exceed the church goers, it is but a simple matter to drive as noiselessly as possible past the house of God. Children who are not in church should be forbidden to play noisily about a church building while service is in progress. Last season the noise of mowers was a disturbance to many and does not add to the solemnity of the services.

A Boy's Camp.

A shack has been erected on the lower island of the two just opposite the dock. The shack can be dimly seen through the trees from the steam boat dock. The building of a shack in which to enjoy a taste of camp life seems to be stronger than ever in boys and young men. Some of these shacks are very comfortable and homelike. A few years ago a shack was erected on Third Island well out of sight of prying visitors, it had a crows' nest on look out in the top most branches of a huge pine tree which grew nearby. The passion for adventure which is an heritage of the British born found an outlest in this mysterious shack. The builders are gone now, some are staid married men and some are asleep in Flanders fields, having embarked in that greatest of all adventures. The shack served its day and filled an important place in the boy's lives. Neither the island nor the trees were damaged in any way.

Churches Unite.

Beginning Sunday next the Presbyetrian and Methodist churches will have Union service for eight weeks. The morning services will be held in the Methodist church for the first four Sundays and the evening service in the Presbyterian church. For the last four Sundays the morning service will be in the Presbyterian church and the evening service in the Methodist church.

POST OFFICE ACT UP BEFORE HOUSE

Act May Be Amended To Increase Registration Compensation.

OTTAWA, July 9. — The bill to amend the Post Office act increasing the compensation that may be paid for loss on registered letters to $100, was read a second time in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon. Under the present law the limit of compensation is $25 for registered articles, but insurance may be obtained up to $100. Hon. Chas. Stewart, acting postmaster general, stated that the rates for registration for increased values under consideration were 20c for $50; 30c for $75; and 40c for $100.

T. L. Church (Conservative, North Toronto, said the Postmaster general had not been anxious to increase rates for the postmen but had used the big stick on them. There was a general impression in the country that the postal rates were already too high. The rate on drop letters in the city of Toronto should be cut to one cent.

Sir Henry Drayton (Conservative, West York) pointed out that the amendment struck out of the law the present maximum rate of ten cents, but did not substitute any other maximum. He asked whether the Minister really wanted to stand for legislation of that kind.

Mr. Stewart said that he did not have information available on the point raised by Sir Henry Drayton, and on his suggestion the bill was allowed to stand over for the present.

DAMAGED PROPERTY

Vandals Put Eggs in Beds and Fish Hooks in Couch.

FENELON FALLS, July 9.— A crime which for meanness has probably few equals, was perpetrated at the home of Mr. Naaman Everson, Verulam. Mr. Everson, who lives alone was working on the roads and during his absence, some person or persons unknown entered the house, broke windows, dishes and furniture, put broken eggs in the beds, concealed fish hooks in the couch, poured coal oil into the churn, butter and bread, and in some way damaged everything in the building. No trace of the perpetrators of the outrageous deed has been found as yet. There is a severe penalty for offences of this kind.

CAMPELLFORD NEWS.

Road Officials Here.

Reeve Davidson recently received a letter from Colonel MacNachtan, clerk of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, advising him that it was the wish of the Highways Department to look over the situation here before the $1,600 voted by the Counties Council for improving the connecting links in Campbellford of the county provincial roads.

County Road Superintendent Greer and Engineer McVicker of the Highway Department were in town yesterday and with Mayor Meyers, Reeve Davidson and Councillor Abernethy, inspected the Hastings road, which is too narrow at the curve at Sebastopol street. It was agreed to spent the county grant improving the road and widening it at that point.

WITH THE "FUGITIVE SENATORS"

No stranger situation is recorded in American political history than that obtaining in Rhode Island where Republican senators have turned fugitive, following a riot and the gas bomb incident. They are now "fugitives" in Rutland, Mass., where several of them are here pictured, and are under guard of private detectives. By their flight they left the Democrats without a quorum. The lieutenant governor of the state has issued orders that the missing senators show up under penalty of arrest. But the dozen or more "runaways" pay no attention and while away the time outside the state limits playing croquet, or smoking on the hotel porch. Shown in the picture are Senators Robinson, Hammond, Drew and Cole.

MUIR WILL HANG

Execution Will Take Place on Friday Morning.

MONTREAL, July 9.— (Canadian Press.)— Walter Muir, the young New Yorker, who shot and killed Henri Laviolette, at Valleyfield, September 22nd, last, during an argument in a tavern, will be executed Friday morning at Valleyfield. Information was received last night in Montreal that the Governor-General had decided not to intervene, the Gazette says this morning.

THE AMERICAN FLYERS.

LONDON, July 9. — (United Press). — America's world's flyers, who arrived safely at Bagdad, were scheduled to fly on to Aleppo to-day.

A FINAL STRUGGLE

Redistribution Committee ronto, Hamilton, Niagara and Peterboro.

OTTAWA, July 9. — The re-distribution committee of the House is scheduled to have its final meeting to-day, and if no agreement can then be reached over the points of dispute in Ontario the matter will be taken to the House and threshed out there.

Difficulty is encountered in Toronto, Hamilton, Peterborough, Welland and Essex.

In Toronto, where nine seats are conceded, Conservatives on the basis of "Rep by Pop" want twelve.

In Hamilton, the Government proposal is to have two seats, East and West Hamilton, divided by Wentworth Street, but taking from Wentworth the part of Hamilton now in that constituency, Gordon Wilson, M.P., is objecting.

Conservatives want a new seat in the Welland-Niagara Falls district, and point to the fact that an extra seat has been created around Windsor . The difficulty is in finding a rural seat to wipe out. None is willing to be effaced.

Conservatives also wish to merge the Peterboroughs, and this is objected to.

The sub-committee for Ontario, which met again yesterday, was unable to agree.

TOBOGGAN FOR M'ADOO STOCK

Also Ran Nominee Releases His Supporters and Attacks Opponents.

NEW YORK, July 9.—(Canadian Press).—The Democratic National Convention adjourned at 4 a.m. today, after taking the 100th fruitless ballot in an endeavor to choose a Presidential nominee. The feature of the convention session came in the early hours of to-day, when Chairman Walsh read a letter from William G. McAdoo, releasing his supporters from their pledges. In the release letter he attacked "the wet and reactionary forces which, he said, had opposed his nomination." In the 100th ballot which followed immediately, McAdoo's vote fell to 190. Smith forces held firm and John W. Davis rose to second place in the balloting with 203½. The convention will meet again at noon to-day. The result of the 100th ballot follows:

Smith, 351½; Davis of West Virginia, 203½; McAdoo, 190; Underwood, 41½; Glass, 35; Robinson, 46; Ritchie, 17½; Walsh, 53½; Saulsbury, 6; Owen, 20; Meredith, 75½; Houston, 9; Ryan, 2; Daniels, 24; Baker, 4; Gerard, 10; Berry, 1—total, 1,089; absent, 9.

THE VOTE STILL A GRIM SECRET

Queen's Park Refuses to Make Date of Plebiscite Known.

TORONTO, July 9, — Queen's Park remains secretive as to the date of the coming plebiscite on the O.T.A. It is altogether probable that the announcement of the day of balloting will be made this week.

Beyond intimating that the matter was under discussion, and that a conference of the Cabinet would be held this week, Premier Ferguson yesterday had no further information to divulge.

An Old Traveler Says:

"Selling To-day Reminds Me of 30 Years Ago"

A FEW days ago we were talking to an "Oldtimer"—a "Knight of the Grip," who has been calling on the trade since away back 30 years ago.

Waxing reminiscent he remarked:

"It was hard selling in those days of long ago. I used to keep everlastingly calling on the trade. I sold small quantities. I booked small orders of my line for future delivery. The dealer was a hand-to-mouth buyer.

"Conditions changed in the course of time. I began to make fewer and fewer trips. I booked big orders for future delivery.

"In fact, it got to be the custom for me to make just two trips a year and to book big orders for Spring and Fall delivery. Sorting orders came in by mail. It was easy selling and I had long holidays between trips. But now that's all over," and the Oldtimer sighed with regret. "We're back again to the days of 30 years ago."

"History repeating itself," we suggested.

"That's right," Oldtimer said. "The trade is again buying cautiously. They don't want to be caught with big stocks on hand. Afraid of falling prices. Hardly booking ahead at all. Just buying in small quantities. And I'm calling on them early and often just like 30 years ago. It's the days of hard selling all over again.

"I'm often sorry for the younger generation of salesmen and business men these days. They're meeting conditions new to them. They feel as if the bottom has been kicked out of things. But the country is solid all right. There's business to be had. But you've got to be content to do it on a different basis and comb your territory harder and oftener to get it."

* * * * * * * * * *

It strikes us that the "Oldtimer's" remarks apply to many lines of business to-day; that many manufacturers are going to find their dealers doing exactly as "Oldtimer" finds them doing.

Where this is the case, it seems to us that Advertising to the Consumer is more than ever necessary.

Under present conditions it is essential to keep up an active flow of goods from factory to dealer to consumer if the desired volume is to be reached.

Advertising that creates a strong consumer demand makes orders from the trade more certain and more frequent. It helps the traveler sell. It makes it safer for the manufacturer to carry larger stocks for filling sorting orders. It makes it easier to do business under changed conditions, and to keep up factory and sales volume.

No matter whether you are an "Oldtimer" or one of the younger generation of business men, we would welcome the opportunity of discussing with you the question of "Doing Business Under Changed Conditions."

Paul In Possession

By RUBY AYRES

Copyright, 1924, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate

The story thus far:

When John Collinge died, he left behind him his adopted daughter, Wanda Griffin, a headstrong, passionate and overbearing girl, and his son Paul, with whom he had quarrelled, and who had gone abroad. After the death, Paul comes home for the reading of the will, and to Wanda's surprise she finds she is disinherited, and that he is the heir. Paul dislikes Wanda intensely because of her behaviour, and tells her she must leave the house immediately; she refuses and, in order to stay there, pretends to be ill. At last matters reach a crisis, and Paul orders Wanda out of the house. She goes up to London with Mrs. Garnet, her one friend, with whom she is to live. The day after Wanda arrives Clare's brother, Harry, the black sheep of the family, arrives unexpectedly.

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT.

XXII—AN OFFER.

Wanda was right about Clare Garnet's brother, for he certainly brought life to the quiet little flat, and at the end of the week Wanda was surprised to find how far away her life at Grey Chumley seemed, and how rapidly her homesickness was fading.

But there was always the question of money to worry her.

She had managed to save a good deal during the lifetime of old John Collinge, which she knew would carry her on for some months, but at the end of that time—what then?

One morning she spoke to Clare about it.

"You must let me pay while I am here, or I shan't be able to stay. You can't afford to keep me for nothing."

Clare pretested eagerly.

"Look at the times you have paid for me! Look at all you have done for me. Please let me do this, to show you how grateful I am."

For once in her life she overruled Wanda.

"Very well, but I must look for a job at once."

Mrs. Garnet frowned.

"Wanda, why can't you be sensible and take the allowance Mr. Collinge offers you?"

"Because I won't be dependent on him. He hates me, and I don't love him, and the situation would be intolerable if I knew I was spending his money."

"I think you are very foolish."

Wanda's face grew obstinate.

"I don't care. I shall work."

She spoke to Harry Courtney about it that day when they were walking across the park.

"Do you know anyone who would like me for a secretary?"

She spoke flippantly, and he did not take her seriously.

"I should like you myself," he answered.

Wanda laughed.

"Yes; but would you like to pay me? To pay me a living wage, I mean."

"Nonsense; as if you wanted money.'

She raised her eyes to his face.

"Want money! My good man, it's the one thing in the world I do want. I've been cut off with the proverbial shilling."

He looked down at her.

"Are you serious?" he asked.

"Perfectly. Mr. Collinge, who adopted me, died, and we had a violent quarrel just before he died, and he left everything to his son."

Courtney's face changed subtly.

"Bad luck!" he said rather shortly.

"Yes. So you see I've got to work, but the question is what sort of work can I do?"

"You'd far better get married."

She laughed derisively.

"Who would want to marry me?" I've got a vile temper, and I should be a useless wife, unless there was plenty of money."

"Must there be a condition?"

"What do you mean?"

"Plenty of money."

She sighed and smiled together.

"I'm afraid so. Why do you ask?"

"Because, if not, I would rather have offered myself for the post."

She thought he was joking, but when she raised her eyes to his face she was surprised at his seriousness. "Oh!" she said softly.

"I mean it," he urged, and was surprised to find that he did. "I know we've only known one another for a week, but it's long enough for me to know that you're the only woman in the world for me. I wish now that I'd been a better sort of chap. I've been an awful rotter. I daresay Clare's told you? Well, it's all true."

Wanda held up a silencing hand.

"Oh stop, please stop! I don't want to hear. I've been anything but an angel myself. If you went down to Grey Chumley, where I used to live, the people there would give me anything but a nice character! They hated me, and I was horrid!" She laughed bitterly. "I was spoilt, I suppose, though somehow I never saw it till I came to London. Paul is the only person who ever dared to tell me the truth about myself."

"Paul?"

"Yes. The son of the man who adopted me. I quarrelled with him too dreadfully! I don't know why, but he used to rouse all that was hateful in me."

"I can't believe that."

"It's true all the same. In the end he practically ordered me out of the house."

"What a cad."

Wanda flushed: "Oh, no, he wasn't. In some ways he was very nice. I've often thought since——"she stopped and sighed.

"Thought what?" Courtney asked, but she shook her head.

"I don't know what I was going to say."

Bridgeburg Mushrooms.

George Carson Claims the Record For Niagara District.

BRII GEBURG, July 9. — George W. Carson, of the Canadian Customs staff at Bridgeburg, claims a record for mushrooms in the Niagara district, size, quality and quantity.

On his grounds along the Niagara Bouleyard to-day, Mr. Carson gathered the following luscious specimens: ½ pound mushroom, 24 inches in circumference; one 21 inches in circumference, weight 6 ounces; another 22½ inches in circumference, weight 7 ounces; and a fourth 20 inches in circumference, weight 5 ounces.

SILVER VEIN STRUCK.

Rich Vein Has Been Found Near Fort William.

FORT WILLIAM, July 9. — That Fort William may yet become a centre of one of the richest mining district on the American continent, is indicated by the strike of a rich vein of silver within 100 miles of this city by two Fort William men.

The mineral, which local mining men say is the richest tha they have ever seen, is to be found in an open vein on the side of a mountain, and is six feet in width and about 16 feet in depth.

PARK ST. SEWER FINISHED UNDER ESTIMATED COST

Outlay of $29,139.47, Leaving $2,162.03 For Link at Lock and King George Streets.

CONDITIONS DIFFICULT.

Solid Pipe 1,500 Feet Long Laid to the River.

The Park Street sewer, last winter's work which was carried on under City Engineer Parson's department, was finally completed several weeks ago except for a connecting link at Lock Street, at an expenditure of $29,139.47, leaving a balance of $2,162.03 from Mr. Parson's estimated cost of $31,301.50, at which he was given the contract by the Council.

"That shows what can be done by day labor and under our own Engineer and staff," said Ald. Stocker last night. He regarded the accomplishment as eloquent testimony of the policy which he, with other members of the Council, has advocated from time to time for the prosecution of work which could be included within the scope of the city's engineering department.

Tenders Recalled.

By way of refreshing the citizens' memory of this job, it was recalled that the tenders received by the Council were as follows:

City Engineer—$31,301.50.
R. Sheehy and Sons—$53,197.50.
F. F. Fry, Limited—$54,121.25.
John Carroll—$71,101.49.

Delayed By Water.

"We were practically finished in April, but the work was held up by the high water in the river backing into the sewer," said Mr. Parsons. "As a result we had to quit for a while, and it was not until in June that we could complete the connection at the corner of Park and King George Streets. The sewer was begun last October and was pushed along all winter with very few interruptions except during the severest weather. We had our difficulties down there, and not the least of them was putting up with the snow that blew across those Monaghan fields, filling up the trench."

Experience Valuable.

Mr. Parsons said that the quicksand formation on Park Street gave considerable trouble, but he and the foreman, Mr. John Thirnbeck, have had extensive experience in sewer work in that district, and they profited from the similar work they had executed in the past.

Instead of laying three-foot pipes and cementing them together, the City Engineer has built one complete, undivided pipe from King George Street to the river. After the trench was lowered to the required depth a platform of two-inch planks was built on the bottom and a foundation layer of concrete, six inches thick, was laid on it. It was slightly troughed at the centre to assist in carrying off water and to give the circular effect of an ordinary pipe. The upper part is horse-shoe shaped and the circumference of this fabricated pipe is thirty-three inches. The top section was constructed on forms in the usual way and is an integral part of the base, the whole being reinforced by steel rods set longitudinally and transversely, making a job of which the engineering department is justly proud. The work has been inspected since its completion in the only way possible, that is, by crawling through the 1,500-foot pipe with a flashlight. The City Engineer himself went through his concrete tunnel to satisfy himself, and another test made early in the spring has been reported, showing that the concrete set perfectly.

Thus in point of cost and workmanship this undertaking of the City Engineer's department has been carried out with complete success.

Water Added to Cost.

Ald. Stocker declared that a greater economy would have been shown had the spring freshet not caused a delay of six weeks. Although the workmen were idle, an expense of eight dollars a day was incurred, which was unavoidable. Besides, it was a winter operation, and, taking all the circumstances into consideration, Ald. Stocker said the Council and the citizens should be well satisfied with the achievement of the City Engineer's department.

For the completion of the sewer a link of 120 feet at the corner of Lock and King George Streets remains to be constructed. When this is done the flow of the sewer will be reversed to Park Street, a step that will doubtless wait upon the construction of the sewage disposal plant. The main sewer empties into the river at the foot of Lock Street. Eight years ago the first section of the Park Street main was built south to King George Street, and easterly on that street to Lock Street, at which corner it was then proposed to locate the pumping station. The plans were altered and a temporary tile pipe outlet to the new sewer was laid on Lock Street from the corner of King George Street to the river.

The completion of the project, therefore, calls for the link from the Lock Street to the Park Street sewer at the corner of King George Street, and the work is ended. This will include cutting off the Lock Street sewer from King George Street to the river when the time comes that a disposal plant will be doing business on the Otonabee side of the river opposite Park Street. The section of the Park Street sewer built this year is temporarily cut off from its upper part and also from the pipe reaching along King George Street. It is blocked in the manhole at Park and King George Streets, but the removal of the temporary plugs will be a simple job.

Mr. Parsons particularly mentioned his foreman, John Thirnbeck, in the success of this job, saying that Mr. Thirnbeck had proved his ability under difficult conditions.

NEW APPOINTMENTS.

Important Changes in Collegiate and Public School Teaching Staffs.

The Board of Education decided they would not proceed with the renovations to South Central School this year, at last night's meeting.

The Board arrived at the conclusion that the contemplated repairs would prove a greater menace to next year's pupils than the present inadequate heating, plumbing, and ventilation systems.

Mrs. Kate Morris, chairman of the Property Committee, announced that with no delays and taking for granted that the City Council would make an adequate appropriation and the work on the school would be commenced on 15th July, sufficient accomodation could not be provided for the commercial classes of the Collegiate Institute until 15th September, and the repairs on other parts of the school would not be completed until 1st November.

This would mean that the pupils of the commercial department would lose about two weeks' schooling and would be subjected to the noise and inconvenience created as a result of work going on in the building for six weeks.

Mrs. Morris stated that the matter of proceeding with the renovations this year was of great importance, and the Property Committee were asking the Board to consider the advisability of proceeding or abandoning the proposal for the present.

It is a question of whether we are doing the children an injustice, said Mrs. Morris.

The members were generally of the opinion that the continuance of the work during school hours would seriously handicap the pupils in the course of their studies.

In case of a cold autumn, it might prove necessary to close the building to the pupils until the heating system was completed. Lavatory accommodation during the period when improvements to the plumbing system were being made was another obstacle that helped to block the proposals. When the many questions confronting the members in proceeding with their South Central School improvement policy were raised, it was obvious that the Board would be doing the pupils a greater injustice in avoiding a lesser one by continuing with the proposed renovations this year.

On a motion sponsored by Mr. Roland Denne, and seconded by Mr. A. A. Fowler, it was resolved that the proposed improvements to South Central School should be left over until next year, with a recommendation that the members of the next Board proceed with the work immediately after the conclusion of the school term. It was embodied in the resolution that the heating system of the building should be inspected frequently by a competent furnace man during the next school term, and that all necessary repairs be made.

At the present time the heating system is composed of five hot air furnaces, and the menace of fire is probably the greatest reason for urgency in proceeding immediately with the alterations. In view of this the Board will take precautions and have the furnaces inspected twice a week, if required.

The plans have been drawn and will be in readiness for next year's Board. The cost of the proposed alterations based on the plans and specifications prepared is in the neighbourhood of $32,000.

The report of Mr. R. Denne, acting chairman of committee on appointments, is noteworthy, inasmuch as many important changes have been made in the teaching staffs of the Collegiate Institute and Public Schools.

Your committee has not as yet succeeded in securing a successor to Miss Elliott of the Commercial Department, of the Collegiate Institute, but hope to be able to in the near future.

Water Supply.

A communication was received from the Utilties Commission, requesting the Board's co-operation in the Commission's effort to meet all demands for water supply. The letter explained that between 8 and 9 million gallons of water were used daily and that although the pumping capacity was not exhausted last year, the Board would assist in decreasing the peak by instructing the janitors of the schools to only use the water from 5 a.m. to 9 a.m. and from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. The letter also proposed that since the Board is a big user, an arrangement would be made with the commission to use the supply at other than the regular hours.

The proposition met with favour and the members expressed their willingness to co-operate and left the matter in the hands of the Property committee.

The following is a statement of the attendance and enrollments at the Public schools and Collegiate Institute for the month of June:

SPECIAL TRAFFIC REGULATIONS FOR SATURDAY

Police Department Ask Co-operation of Motorists and Public in General.

EMERGENCY CASES.

Provision Has Been Made to Meet Urgencies.

Special traffic regulations will be in force on Saturday next during the hours when the Orange parade will be in progress. The Police Department have provided a means to allow the parade to proceed uninterrupted with as little traffic congestion as posible, and Inspector James Reid, acting Chief of Police, asks the co-operation of motorists and the public in general in making this 12th of July free from accidents and annoying traffic situations.

From the hours of 2.15 p.m., until the end of the parade, the west side of George, from London to Perry will be cleared of all vhicles, thus permitting a continuous clear path for the Orangemen.

It has been arranged with those in charge to create a gap of twenty feet after tach lodge in the course of the parade.

This will permit Charlotte bound street cars to turn off George, and will allow ambulance wagons, mail carriers, fire trucks and doctors to cross without delay, any corner on which the Orangemen are walking.

I fit becomes necessary through emergency for anyone to pass through the parade, Inspector Reid advises that if the person so desiring get out of his car, and speak to the traffiic policeman, he will be allowed to cross te street.

The crowds that will swarm the streets, if present expectations are corect, can greatly assist by remaining on the sidewalk. As traffic will be travelling both ways on the east side of George during the course of the parade the police department will not be responsible for accidents.

Traffic regulations are under the control of the police, and the special rules for Saturday have been provided to cope with the unusual situation.

Drivers must go slowly and exercise extreme care on the east side of George street, and persons crossing the street at an ytime can well afford to remember the Kiwanis motto: "Stop, Look and Live." However glorious the affair may be, the success of the day would be marred should a fatality or a serious accident occur.

The march wil proceed from Central Park, west on Murray to Aylmer, north on Aylmer to London, east on London to George, south on George to Perry, west on Perry to Aylmer, and south on Aylmer to King Edward Park, where the lodge groups will disband.

Not since 1920 have the Orangemen chosen Peterboro as their place of celebration, when about 5,000 took part in the walk.

It is not hard to imagine the difficulties the traffic policemen will have in handling the anxious crowds on the sidelines, the immense parade, and the motorists that wil come from all directions for the occasion. A knowledge of the traffic rules and the exercise of care, promulgated by a spirit of co-operation on the part of everybody, will ensure safety and reduct to a minimum traffic congestion.

PREMIERS FAIL ON AGREEMENT

The Most Serious Problems Remained Unsettled After Conference Yesterday.

PARIS, July 9 (United Press). — Premiers Herriot and MacDonald failed to reach an agreement at their conference on the Anglo-French unity which lasted until early to-day.

When the heads of the Governments of Great Britain and France finally separated, it was learned that the most serious problems remained unsettled.

It would be an exaggeration to say that the Franco-British Entente is again menaced, but it is apparent that the viewpoints of the Premiers still are radically divergent.

A heated debate resulted from Herriot's insistance that Britain promise to assist France in the event of Germany defaulting execution of the experts' plan.

The conference was resumed in Herriot's private office at the Quai d'Orsay this morning.

The British Premier put in an appearance about 9.30 a.m., looking very fatigued. MacDonald was ill when he came to Paris, but so fervently does he believe in the experts' proposals, that he is determind to leave nothing undone to achieve a Franco-British agreement before the proposed Inter-Allied conference starts.

A semi-official announcement said there were indications that Herriot and MacDonald would eventually reach an agreement and draw up a joint Franco-British programme for the forthcoming London conference.

To-day's conversations were introduced for a "get together" luncheon tendered Premier MacDonald by Premier Herriot and Mme. Herriot, at which were present many notables of French political life.

It was the French Premier's idea to create an atmosphere of goodwill and his guests included such political strangers as Raymond Poincare, Aristide Briand, Louis Barthou, the Presidents of the Chamber and the Senate, several Ministers, Louis Loucheur, the multi-millionaire, and the British Ambassador.

Curlers Beat Maple Leafs 3 to 1--Cincinnati Went 16 Innings

CURLERS CATCH LEAFS NAPPING WITH A SINGLE

McDonald Whaled a Million Dollar Shot to Right Field.

TIED THE ROUND

Three to One Victory Last Night Was Well Earned by Alex. Kay's Crew.

McDonalds million dollar single into right field, with two on, scored both runners and gave the Curlers a 3 to 1 victory over the Maple Leafs at Exhibition Park last evening.

The Curlers fine win tied the two teams for the honours of the first half of the Juvenile series. The play-off should provide an interesting battle.

Curlers got the drop on the Leafs in the second when consecutive passes to Baker and Wood and a high peg to second by Delanaye in an attempt to make the third out allowed Bakers grounder to go through. Wood was retired on strikes. Barrie singled. Hall rolled to Bradley, who got Baker going into third. Hillier was hit filling the bases. Then came McDonald with a single into right to score Barrie and Hall. On the throw-in Delahaye pegged out Hillier trying to make third. The Curlers' gardener pulled off the feature play when he gathered in Delahaye's fly in the third. Carl Wood pitched a neat game ,and did not issue a pass. He was given fine support especially by Alex. Baird who put in a busy evening, and by McLeish at first.

Maple Leafs were retired in order in the first, third, fourth, and fifth, going out on strik-outs in the latter frame. The Leafs attempted a rally in the sixth, when with one down, Grant and Delahaye drew singles. Jack LeBarr trie dto shoot one through first, but McLeish handled the ball nicely, and Baird ended the trouble by taking Bradley's liner. The attempt was continued in the seventh. Scully yas retired by McLeish. Franks hit for three bases, and went home when Corbett's grounder was fumbled by Baird. On Holland's hit to centre, Corbett tried to make third, but was thrown out easily. Masterson fanned to retire the side.

Bradley did not appear to be up to his usual form, as he passed four batsmen and hit one. However. McDonald's hit in the sixth was clean and timely, and the win was well earned.

Umpire Edgar LeBarr, who started at the plate, was badly gashed about the face when a foul tip from Scully's bat struck the mask. Lew LeBarr relieved him and the game was well handled.

EXAMINER V. LOCKWORKS

The Lokworks and the Examiner will meet tomorrow night at 6.00 o'clock at Riverside Park in what should prove a good battle. Both teams are still in the running for first half honors in the league and will be out there tomorrow battling all the way. The game will get away on time and it should draw a good crowd owing to the Thursday half holiday. The Lockworks are last year's champs and are in the hunt for the honors again this year. They have been playing good ball lately and should give a good account of themselves. The Examiner have been improving steadily and in their last start held the C.G.E. to a tie.

FIRST AND LAST SHOTS HARDEST

Walter Hagen Still Has Stage Fright at Start of Tournament.

BY JOE WILLIAMS

Walter Hagen says the two hardest shots for him in a big championship tournament are the first and last tee shots.

"I've been playing the game for years," relates Hagen, "but I never fail to experience an emotion somewhat akin to stage fright when I step up to hit the first shot in a championship. I imagine this is due to the faith I have in the first shot as a barometer. If I get away in good style, I fell rather assured that I am in for a low score.

"The last tee shot is a terrific ordeal, especially if you have a chance for the championship. Even if you are leading by four or five strokes, the threat of possible disaster is inescapable. You have visions of a badly trapped ball, an unplayable lie, a complete loss of control. The nerve pressure is at its greatest during the final moments.

Hagen is, no doubt, right. At Oakland Hills, in the open championship, Cyril Walker, who was destined to win the title, didn't make more than three or four wild tee shots all during the tournament. One of these came at the 18th tee on the final round, the last tee shot he was asked to make.

Walker tore into the ball too quickly, got his hands in ahead of the club head, sliced badly to the right and was almost completely stymied by a tee. Fortunately, he was able to get to the ball, and played a safety shot in the open.

Had the ball been in the rough a foot or so farther Walker might have had to spend several shots getting out and the title which seemed so surely his would have gone to another.

Davey Robertson, gray-haired Detroit professional, in this same tournament, needed a three at the 17th and a four at the 18th to tie Bobby Jones, who had finished with 300. Robertson was on the short 17th green with his drive, and then took three putts. On both greens he missed threefooters.

The finishing pressure was too tight, even for this seasoned campaigner.

OFFER TO DEMPSEY

Bartley Madden Tries to Pick a Scrap With the Champion.

NEW YORK, July 9.—(Canadian Press).—Promoters of the Queensboro A.C., in Long Island City yesterady announced that an offer of $200,000 had been made to Jack Kearns, Jack Dempseys' manager, for a title bout between the champion and Bartley Madden, of New York, to be held in the Queensboro Stadium on Labor Day. Kearns would not say whether the offer would be accepted or not.

GALLERY FANS MISS GREATEST FAIRWAY SHOTS

They All Saw Walker's Wonder Effort at Oakland Hills.

OTHERS IGNORED

Galleryites Usually Somewhere Else When Master Stroke is Played.

Some of the great shots of golf are borne to blush unseen on the desert air of far-flung fairways. The most remarkable shots Gene Sarazen made in compiling his record round of 68 at Skokie two summers ago were witnessed only by his caddy and himself. It wasn't until word reached the bulletin board, announcing that the hitherto obscure Italian was on the threshold of a championship, that the gallery swarmed to him.

Circumstances frequently gild an ordinary shot with the luster of a miraculous accomplishment. The golf world, for instance, will never forget the long iron Bobby Cruickshank played to the 18th green to tie Bobby Jones for the open title at Inwood last season. It had distance and direction, but it was no different from scores of other shots that had been played to the same green during the tournament. The thing that made it important was that a title hung in the balance.

The one shot that stood out above all the rest in the eyes of the gallery at Oakland Hills this year was Cyril Walker's iron approach through a roistering gale over a lake to the 16th green. That was the shot that won the diminutive Britisher the open championship. It came at a time when pressure was tighest and any mistake meant ruin. But after all, it was just a simple stroke, perfectly played.

A much greater shot in the sense that the demand on skill and technique was eminently heavier was played by Walter Hagen earlier in the round at the seventh green, and only a few scattered wayfarers saw it. Hagen's second shot was off the line and fell on hard, barren ground to the left of the green.

It's tricky business, this playing a chip shot off a slate-like surface. It's particularly tricky with a strong following wind on the job. Plenty of back spin was necessary and allowance had to be made for the wind. Hagen took a full swing with the niblick. His wrist action and judgment were perfect. The ball rose in a high arc, spinning backward instead of forward, and came to rest seven feet from the pin. He got his four when a six seemed sure to be his fate.

No billiard player ever attempted a more intricate shot and only a master could have played it as Hagen did. But the eager galleryites, who had come out to see the fireworks, were elsewhere, watching Jones, Walker and Melhorn.

RACE HORSE IN N. B. IS HONORED BY BRASS BAND

Chesley H. Searcy, Champion Pacing Colt of Season, First on Record.

STARRED IN 1923

A Thousand Horse Lovers Were at Station to Greet Him on Gala Day.

Times without number, the village brass band has met the conquering hero, at the railway station, the congressman from the district, the famous baseball player or the noted screen star.

Now for the first time in the history of the sport of harness horse racing it is recorded that a brass band met a hero of the race course. The honored horse was Chesley H. Searcy, 2.05¼, champion pacing colt of the 1923 season. Fredericton, N.B., his new home, welcomed him with a band the other day.

* * * *

Not only that but one thousand lovers of the light harness horse in that city came along with the band to pay homage to the champion.

It was a gala day in New Brunswick and one that will not soon be forgot. It established a precedent in the harness horse world and gives somewhat of a blow to the antis who claim there is no sentiment connected with racing.

* * *

It will interest the fans to know that Chesley H. Searcy, named for a prominent Louisville (Ky.) man, has become a "syndicate" pacer, being owned by the New Brunswick Club, composed of a large number of horse lovers, and will be raced exclusively in the maritime provinces.

* * *

He was raced in 1923 by Harry Stokes, well known Springfield (O.) reinsman, and it was his son, Ralph, who had charge of the racer when he left for Canada.

Chesley H. Searcy is a handsome bay horse by Silver Axworthy and was bred by Roscoe H. Searcy, prominent in Republican political circles in the Blue Grass state. The colt holds the world's race record of 2.07¼, for the age, over a half-mile course. His campaign on the Grand Circuit last season was brilliant and he should win additional honors in the north-east.

* * *

If he never does another thing, he can retire with the one honor of being the first harness horse in America to be met at the railway station with a brass band.

LAST DAY

LAWN BOWLERS GO TO COBOURG

Four Rinks Journeyed to Cobourg and One to Orillia To Take Part in Annual Tournaments.

The Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club sent four fast rinks to the Cobourg annual tournament to-day.

The rinks are highly recommended and will likely bring home some of the bacon. They are skipped by Dr. Allen, Tom Curvin, Jack Sedgwick, and T. C. Elliot, all first-class skips who have brought honour to Peterborough in former years.

One rink skipped by George Cairns also journeyed to Orillia to compete in their annual tournament.

The rink that went from this city last year to Orillia were very pleased with their greens, and also made a good showing.

It is hoped that they will do as good this year, but with Mr. Cairns at the helm they will likely make them all step.

The Glover Challenge Trophy, which is competed for every twenty-four hours by the members of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club, was won last night by T. C. Elliot, who gave Jack Sedgwick, the former holder, an awful trimming.

The next challenger will meet T. C. Elliot in a free-for-all battle on Thursday evening.

The Ladies 'Lawn Bowling Club which was formed this year has proven a great success. The ladies, although rather wild at first, have settled down, and are showing some of the old codgers up in great style. They have taken great interest in the game, and are well on their way in the scheduled games. The ladies find it a very interesting game and a pastime that all women should take part in. It is a very healthful game and exercises and strengthens every part of the body.

DON'T PLAY TOO MANY METHODISTS

Jack Deanneard Issues Word of Advice to Baseball Managers.

Baseball managers take, a word of advice from Sergeant Jack Deannard and choose an assortment of players. By all means, don't have too many Methodists playing on your team. Mix them up and have a team representative of every church in town.

Jack Deannard discovered this morning that seven of his proteges, belonging to the Young Cops' outfit were Methodists and they, have all left on the annual picnic of the St. James' Methodist Church to-day for the lakes, despite the fact that a bantam fixture between the Young Cops and the Kiwanis team is scheduled for to-night.

"Pitcher and catcher included have gone," said the manager this morning.

If baseball managers do not wish to be confronted with the perplexing problem facing Sergeant Deannard to-day, they had better find out the religious denominations of their players.

ALD. CROWE'S MOTION

His Motion in Connection With Dog Fees as Interpreted by Himself.

Ald. Crowe told the Examiner that his motion in regard to the collection of fees from dog owners, was slightly in error. His motion seconded by Ald. McIntyre, he said, was as follows:

"That the city solicitor give a ruling on what autority has the Police Chief or that department to levy a charge and collect $1.00 in addition to the license fee for dogs from those who have not complied with the bylaw, and paying that sum to the dog catcher for reporting those who have not taken out a license."

G.W.V.A. EXECUTIVE MET.

Discussion Why the Band Did Not Parade Last Sunday.

A meeting of the executive of the Great War Vetefans' Association was held last evening, when the matter of the refusal of the band to join the annual decoration parade of the Veterans to St. Peter's Cemetery last Sunday was discussed. The actions of the bandmaster, or those responsible for the non-attendance of the band, were severely criticized. The secretary was instructed to ask the press to publish the statement that, owing to the fact that a military enquiry into the affair has been instituted, decision on the matter will be left in abeyance until such time as the findings of the investigating committee have been reported to the officer commanding.

Y. W. SWIMMING MEET TUESDAY

Small Children Ranging in Ages From 4 to 14 Took Part in Contests.

A swimming meet for juniors from four to fourteen years of age was an interesting event yesterday afternoon at the pool of the Young Women's Christian Association. Miss Littlefield's class of small, clever swimmers, numbering about thirty-five altogether, with five little boys and thirty little girls, took part in a series of entertaining and skilful demonstrations showing their advancement in the very necessary art of swimming. The eager little things, in their tiny suits, alert, well trained, seemed to love the water, and their prowess in the different races and contests was a credit to their own attention to directions and the careful tuition of their instructress.

Winners in the various events were as follows: Junior race—Margaret Dunlop. Beginners' race—Louise Lundy. Boys' junior race—Howard Cunningham. Junior life-saving race—Margaret Dunlop and Margaret McCulloch. Babies' race—Florence Scott and Jean Doris. Beginners' race (twenty feet across the pool)—June Best; second race, Beatrice Florence and Louise Spriggs.

Egg and spoon race—Junior, Anna Edmondson; senior, Kathleen Kelly; senior school girls, Mary Dunlop.

At the conclusion of the programme of events, Miss Littlefield gave a special test for speed swimming, several of the small pupils showing a particular aptitude for swift work in the water. The length of the forty-foot pool was negotiated in ten seconds by Margaret McCulloch and Mary Dunlop; twelve seconds was the time taken by Barbara Foster, and two little ten-year-old girls swam its length in fourteen seconds. One little boy also covered the space in the same time.

It is Miss Littlefield's intention to hold swimming meets of this type twice a month, to give exhibitions of the advancement made by the various classes in the work.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

JOHNY JUMP UP

A Fairy climbed up the Vine to their Window-Sill.

Nancy and Nick, my dears, were Twins.

One night when the Twins were asleep, a fairy climbed up the vine to their window-sill.

He did a little dance, and he did a little prance and then he turned a somersault. Then he blew out his cheeks until they looked like apples, and whistled.

Nancy and Nick woke up like a shot and sat up in bed and rubbed their eyes.

"Did you hear something?" whispered Nancy.

'Yes, did you?" asked Nick.

Then suddenly he began to laugh, and Nancy looking where he looked, began to laugh, too. And they laughed and laughed and laughed, both of them. And if you had been there you would have laughed t o.

For the little fairyman was making the funniest faces at them, and jumping around like a clown.

Finally he gave a spring and landed right on the bedspread where Nick's knees made a fountain. "Hello!" he cred, "Are you wide awake enough to listen to what I'm going to tell you?"

"Yes," laughed Nancy, "I feel as though I never, never could be sleepy again."

'Or me either," said Nick. "Who are you?"

"I'm Johnny Jump Up," answered the funny little creature. I'm Johnny Jump Up, the Garden Fairy. The Fairy Queen sent me."

"What did you come for," asked Nick.

"To get you, and you," said Johnny Jump Up, pointing to Nick and then to Nancy.

'All right, we'll go right away," cried Nick throwing the covers back and jumping out of bed.

"Hey, there! Hold on!' said the fairy. "You can't go that way. You're too big, and you're not dressed or anything."

"Well it won't take long to put our clothes on," said Nancy, "And as for being big, I guess we have been in the garden lots of times just as big as we are now."

"But not where I am going to take you," said Johnny Jump Up mysteriously. "But don't worry! That's easily fixed. There! I see you are all ready but your shoes."

Nick was reaching for his little brown leather shoes with laces when Johnny Jump Up stopped him. "Oh don't do that! Don't put an old shoe on when you can get new," he cied. "See here!" and he pulled out of his pockets two pairs of the tiniest green shoes that you ever looked at.

'Oh, ho! Are those for us!" exclamed Nick. "Why we couldn't get them on the ends of our little fingers."

"Oh, yes, you could. An elephant could," cried the fairy. "These are magic and stretch and shrink worse than woollens in a wash tub. Put them on and see what happens."

So Nancy put on one pair and Nick put on the other pair and behold they fitted marvellously.

But wait until you hear what happened. Instead of the tincy shoes stretching to fit the Twins, the minute the children touched them they shrank until they fitted the shoes.

"Now we are ready to start," shouted Johnny Jump Up. "Jump up on the window-sill my dears, and we'll be off. The titmouse is waiting."

BRITAIN GAVE FEATURE RACE IN 800 METRES

Lowe Came From Behind to Win Final of Spectacular Race.

CLIPPED RECORD

OLYMPIC STADIUM, Colombes, France, July 9.—(Canadian Press).—Athletes of the United States yesterday captured the greatest number of points, but Great Britain again provided the feature thrills in the Olympic track and field battle of nations. The United States representatives managed to nail thirty-six points in the broad jump and shot putting honors, thus putting their country far at the head of the list of point scorers with 99. Finland, who is second, only has 54 points. However, the third final of yesterday's programme and the event which took the eyes of the crowd was the 800-metre run D. G. A. Lowe, college mate of Harold Abrahams, Britain's greatest sprinter, won the race from the swiftest field of middle distance men in the world. Lowe came from behind in the last 200 metres to win with a spectacular burst of speed when his team mate, H. B. Stallard, the favorite, faltered, after setting a terrific pace for three-quarters of the way. The time was 1.52 2-5, half a second off the world's record.

The story of the British victory in the middle distance race is the story of British team play, and the apparent strategy of having Stallard, who was most closely watched by rival runners, set the pace for almost the entire distance with Lowe holding back and reserving his strength for the final dash. Lowe was first to show in front after the gun barked, but Stallard took the lead rounding the first turn, with Lowe second, and Enck and Watters leading the United States quartette.

Despite challenges by Enck, Martin and Watters, the blond-haired Briton kept the lead until the bunch rounded the last turn into the stretch. Here Lowe moved up and shot out in front with long sweeping strides.

Enck tried gallantly to cut down the ever-widening gap, but, like Stallard, he was tiring and only Martin had enough left to push Lowe, who crossed the line fully five yards in front.

The surprise of the race was the great running of Martin, of Switzerland, who came out of the ruck in the stretch with an amazing spring to take second place. It had been expected that stars from the United States would show up in this event, but the best they could do was to take third, fifth and sixth places.

John Watters, Harvard crack and middle distance intercollegiate champion of the United States, finished seventh, outside the scoring.

The two United States representatives crowned as new Olympic champions were De Hart Hubbard, the University of Michigan's negro star, who won in the broad jump, with 24 feet 6 inches, and Clarence Houser, University of Southern California, whose winning toss in the shot put was 49 feet 2½ inches.

The United States scored an unexpectedly overwhelming victory over Finland in the shot put, taking four of the six places.

The United States again led in men qualifying in the trials in the three other events of the day, landing four in the 200-metre semi-finals and three in the 110-metre hurdles finals, both slated for to-day, while John Romig, Penn. State, furnished the only thrill the United States has yet had in the distance races, by defeating Elvin Wide, of Sweden, and Willie Ritola, of the Finnish team, to clinch a qualifying place in the 5,000 metres.

On the heels of the blow he struck at the much-heralded United States sprint supremacy on Sunday by winning the 100-metre final, Harold Abrahams, the Cambridge comet, last night again loomed as a most formidable menace in the 200-metre race to-day, in which the United States has qualified four stars, Scholz, Paddock, Norton and Hill. The fleet Britisher showed himself as dangerous in the longer dash as in the shorter by taking the measure of Charlie Paddock by the margin of a foot in a thrilling contest in the first trials, and then conquering Bayes Norton, of Yale, in the second eliminations.

Finland's sterling corps of distance men, who are just getting warmed up for an expected clean sweep of everything over 1,500 metres, gave a typical exhibition in the 5,000-metre trials. Four Finns landed among the dozen who qualified for the final, to be run Thursday, including Nurmi, the world's record holder, who made his first Olympic appearance and walked away with the second heat after spending most of his time coaching along his team-mate, Sipila.

Rastas, another Finn, captured the first heat, while Willie Ritola, running his third race in as many days, easily qualified in the third.

On form, Nurmi appears a certain winner, although he will be forced to run the final a short time after the 1,500 metres final Thursday.

DUFFUS MOTOR SALES

Sell Many Tractors and Power Farming Machines.

Recently Duffus Motor Sales, Lincoln, Ford and Fordson Dealers, have disposed of a goodly number of Fordon Tractors and power farming outfits, and already there is another carload on the way.

A unique mowing machine has been designed and perfected which can be attached to the Fordson Tractor in a very few minutes which enables a farmer to have a machine which will cut his hay, peas, etc., without the use of horses, the price of which is about the same, or less than a horse drawn mower.

They also report the sale of a number of Wood Bros.' threshing machines which met with such universal favour during last season.

This separator is built in three sizes, the smaller one especially for the Fordson Tractor, and the larger sizes for heavy power, and the farmers and threshers who purchased them last year speak in the very highest terms of them.

DENNE OPPOSED TO ACCLAMATION FOR G. N. GORDON

He Will Have to Fight For Cabinet Position, Declared Conservative Leader To-day.

FEELERS PUT OUT.

Vacancies in Cabinet, and Gordon May be Named For One of Them.

"Mr. Gordon will certainly have a fight on his hands in any bye-election in this riding," declared Mr. Roland Denne to the Examiner today in regard to certain feelers as to whether West Peterboro's member of Parliament would be opposed in the event that he was named by Premier King for a position in the Federal Cabinet.

Three portfolios are likely to be reopened in what may prove to be a general shake-up of the Cabinet. Hon W. S. Fielding has been unable to carry on his duties for several sessions, Hon. Chas. Murphy, Postmaster General, has been absent nearly all this session due to illness and Hon. T. A. Low, Minister of Trade and Commerce is also in poor health.

Sounding Opinion

From a statement which Mr. J. H. Burnham gave the Examiner today it appears that local Conservatives have been sounded as to Mr. Gordons' chances of re-election by acclamation if he was selected for Cabinet honors.

Mr. Denne was emphatic in his answer. If Mr. Gordon became a Minister, he would have to fight for, was Mr. Denne's attitude, and he intimated that Mr. Gordon might find it rough-going in the riding he had twice carried.

Mr. Burnham's Statement

Mr. J. H. Burnham expressed himself as in no way politically opposed to Mr. Gordon's re-election by acclamation. "If it is the general desire of the electorate to approve the policies of the King Government by electing a Minister by acclamation by all means do so," said Mr. Burnham. "But if the electors are protesting against those policies how could we grant Mr. Gordon that favour? I understand City Clerk Armstrong acting as agent for Mr. Gordon put this proposal up to Mr. Denne, the president of the West Riding Conservative Association last evening. Mr. Denne asked my opinion and whilst I would like to do Mr. Gordon a favour, if the electors approve of that favour, it might be a disastrous move to attempt check an expression of popular opinion."

City Clerk Armstrong told the Examiner that he had made no "proposal" to Mr. Denne, and in that respect, Mr. Burnham's statement was somewhat misleading.

WAS MURDERED BY A WAYFARER

Faraday Mills Was an Old Resident of This District 43 Years Ago.

Faraday Mills, who was murdered and robbed of car and all personal belongings near Mountain Home, Idaho, is an old resident of this district, having been born here, and resided in this vicinity for about eighteen years.

Mr. Mills was 61 years of age and was born near Mount Pleasant at lot 13, concession 12, of Cavan. He moved west in 1881 and took up farming at Souris, Mantoba, where he lived on his farm for a number of years. He then moved to Winnipeg so that he could give his children a good education, as schools were practically unknown in the district of Souris at that time.

The late Faraday Mills was a son of the late Robert Mills of Cavan, who resided on his farm in Cavan for 44 years. He died in this city 24 years ago after residing here for 3 years. In adition to his widow and six children, he leaves to mourn his loss one brother, Lemuel, of Craik, Saskatchewan, one half brother, Fred Mills of Los Angeles, Calf.; and two step brothers, George Richardson of North Portal, Saskatchewan, and Mr. G. P. Richardson, of 272 Sherbrooke street, Peterboro. Mr. G. P. Richardson of this city received a letter from his step-brother's wife a few days ago stating that he had been kelled in an automobile accident; but another letter was received to-day from Vancouver stating that he had been murdered.

Mr. Mills had been in Los Angeles for the winter and had just been home a short time when the tragedy occurred. He was planning on taking his family with him to live in Los Angeles.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

"TRY AND GET IT" TO LEAVE ROYAL TO-NIGHT.

When you start out to collect a bill—a bad one—make up your mind that "nil desperandum" shall be your watchword. That's what Bryant Washburn as Joe Merrill in "Try and Get it," resolved and he got it! But not before he had a lot of lively adventures.

"Try and Get It." which will be shown at the Royal Theatre for the last time to-night, was adapted by Jules Furthman from the Saturday Evening Post story, "The Ringtailed Galliwampus,' by Eugene P. Lyle, Junior.

Mr. Washburn's supporting cast includes Billie Dove, Edward Horton, Joseph Kilgour, Rose Dione, Carl Stockdale, Lionel Belmore, and Hazel Deane.

NO SLAPSTICK IN THIS RIP ROARING COMEDY.

Maurice Tourneur for the first time has tried his hand at comedy.

But he hasn't forsaken his forte—the unusual.

And the combination brings a laugh with every scene. Sometimes a chuckle. Sometimes a deep, hearty laugh that leaves the ribs sore. Sometimes a titillation of the brain—a mental laugh.

There isn't a bit of slap-stick in 'The Brass Bottle,' a First National picture, showing at the Royal Theatre on Thursday. But every situation stirs the risibilities.

With the production of "The Brass Bottle" Mr. Tourneur realised an ambition he had held for years to concentrate on the creation of laughs in place of the gripping dramatic situations which have marked his work in the past.

The story of a young architect's amazing experiences following his acquisition of an old Egyptian brass bottle, is replete with highly amusing situations following each other with lightning rapidity and offers an unusual screen vehicle for the talents of this director.

The comedy touches which have marked Tourneur's work in various picturisations have given an idea of his possibilities in the field of entertainment and with the production of his possibilities in this field o enter-his newest picture it is confidently expected that he will win new laurels.

With the idea for ensuring the laughs okered in the unusual situations of this plot, Mr. Tourneur has surrounded himself with players whose past performances prove them supreme in this line of work. Harry Myers, as the young architect, Ernest Torrence as the genie, and Tully Marshall as the crabby old professor appear in the leading comedy roles. To this trio is entrusted the portrayal of situations that must be delicately handled in order to get the most out of them.

AT THE CAPITOL.

MISS TALMADGE IS CHARMING IN BREECHES

Constance Talmadge proves that she is an expert horsewoman, a skilled fencer with the rapier and makes a charming figure in a boy's costume in "The Dangerous Maid" her latest First National photoplay, which will be shown at the Capitol Theatre commencing Friday and Saturday.

In the cast of "The Dangerous Maid" besides Constance Talmadge are Conway Tearle, her leading man; Morgan Wallace, Tully Marshall, Marjorie Daw, Charles Gerrard, Lou Morrison, Otto Matiesen, Wilson Hummel, Kenneth Gibson, Anna May, Kate Price, Thomas Ricketts, Phillip Dunham, Jack Dillon and Ray Hallor. To Glenn MacWilliams goes the credit for the superb photography.

The story of "The Dangerous Maid" is laid in the turbulent times when the Duke of Monmouth rebelled against King James II of England. Consance Talmadge has the role of a madcap little rebel who dons a cavalier's sword and costume and engages in a thrilling series of adventures with the officers of the kings.

The story gives Constance her first opportunity to play a dramatic role, and the picture, although it contains many humorous situations, is replete with romance and love interest, and is embellished with superb sets designed by Stephen Gooson.

ROYAL RACE AT WEMBLEY DREW A RECORD CROWD

110,000 Move From London at Rate of 30,000 an Hour Without Rush.

ROYALTY PRESENT.

Hundreds of Canadian Visitor Attend—Thanksgiving Service in St. Paul's Cathedral.

(By Panton House—Canadian Press)

LONDON, July 9.—Nearly every nation of the world went to Ascot. Forty special trains a day went from London, and the roads were packed with motors. All vehicles had to be made spotless by an extra gang of cleaners, so that the lovely new frocks should not be soiled. The grand stand was packed—never has such a multitude of tongues been heard at Royal races before. The King and Queen, the Prince of Wales and other members of the Royal Family were in the paddock to see the horses and discuss their chances, showing keen expert knowledge. There has never been such a day at Ascot since it was founded by Queen Anne in 1711. It may well be called a festival of lovely women.

A River of Humanity.

It is difficult to realize the organization required to deal with the flow of visitors to Wembley. Everyone finds the attractions so great that they want to stay as long as possible, which means they have to go back to London en masse. Picture 110,000 people being moved at the rate of 30,000 an hour from one station alone — without any overcrowding, rush or noise. There are six platforms at Wambley Park with four flights of stairs leading to them. Trains follow one another at such close intervals that there would seem a danger of them overrunning should one train stop, since all are on a single line at one part of the journey. This, however, is impossible, as even if a signalman should allow a train to enter a section in which another train is standing, or should a driver overrun a signal, there is a device which causes the brakes to be automatically applied, stopping the train immediately.

QUAKERS DEFEATED.

Colonials Walloped the Quaker Crew For Twenty-eight Runs.

At Central Park last evening the Colonials and Quakers played a game of soft ball that had a regular cricket score. The Colonials won by the score of 28 to 17 and it was one of the biggest scores recorded this season. It was a heavy hitting contest on both sides, but the Quakers mussed up a number of plays that cost their team a number of runs. The Colonials hit everything. Miss Naish for the Quakers had to offer. She started off well but the heavy hitting Colonials walloped the ball all over the lot and the runs came across the plate in bunches like bananas.

Miss Adams who did the twirling for the Colonials was also touched for a number of hits and the Quakers got 17 runs off her delivery.

WEDDING BELLS.

JOSLIN—HOWE.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Andrew's church at half past two o'clock to-day, when Rosa Howe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Howe, of 145 King street, Lindsay, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Samuel C. Joslin, son of Mrs. Florence Joslin, of 483 Elm street.

The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of poudre blue georgette, the draperies caught with rose buds, with hat to match, and bouquet of ophelia roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Tessie Joslin, wore cocoa canton crepe, with large hat, and bouquet of carnations. Mr. H. Croft supported the bridegroom.

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding breakfast was served to a large number of friends, at the home of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Joslin leaving later for a honeymoon at Stoney Lake. They will reside in Rochester, N.Y.

During the reception at the house, Miss Tessie Joslin sang very prettily, "Deep in Your Eyes," accompanied on the piano by Miss Ena Joslin.

MARTIN—McMEECHAN.

The second Scottish bride who came out to Peterborough on the liner Metagama, and went through the collision which the big ship weathered off Cape Race on the 19th of June, was married today at one o'clock in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, when Nettie McMeechan, of Polmont, Stirlingshire, Scotland, became the bride of Thomas Martin, of Peterborough, formerly of Linlithgow, Scotland.

The bride, who was given away by William Brown, of 485 Donegal Street, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, wore a lovely gown of white crepe de chine, with long sleeves of georgette. Side draperies were caught with a large ornament of pearl and diamente trimming and the embroidered white tulle veil was arranged in cap fashion, with tiny wreath of orange blossoms and real white Scottish heather. Her bouquet was of sweetheart roses and carnations.

The bridesmaid, Miss Elizabeth Douglas, of Kingston, a cousin of the bridegroom, wore white jersey satin, with white hat, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

The little flower girl, Chrissie Forrest, of Peterborough, wore a blue silk frock, with wide lace collar and tiny coronet of ribbons to match her dress, and carried a basket of white flowers.

Mr. Cecil Gilley, of Peterborough, acted as best man.

The wedding march was played by the organist, Mr. John Crane, and during the signing of the register, Mr. James Marshall, of Kingston, a cousin of the bridegroom, sang "O Promise Me."

After the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served to the immediate friends and relatives at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Brown, 485 Donegal Street, the refreshments including many Scottish delicacies, with the piece de resistance in a three-tiered wedding cake, brought all the way from Scotland for the occasion.

The hostess, Mrs. Brown, wore a handsome gown of blue French voile with black hat. Mrs. H. Douglas, an aunt of the bridegroom, wore black all-tyme crepe, trimmed with jet, and black hat. Mrs. Jessie Marshall, of Kingston, wore navy crepe, and Mrs. M. B. White, of Kingston, wore white satin.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin left on the 3.40 train for a honeymoon to be spent in Toronto, Hamilton, and Niagara Falls, after which they will reside at 227 Antrim Street, Peterborough.

The bride's travelling outfit was a gown of grey flat crepe, trimmed with medallions of steel and blue beads, with grey shoes and stockings and fawn hat and wrap.

The gift of the bridegroom to the bride was a gold wrist watch, to the bridesmaid a silver mesh bag, to the flower girl a string of pearls, and to the best man a pair of silver cuff links.

FOREST BLAZE MOCKS FIGHTERS ON B.C. COAST

Fire Leaps Half Mile Lake and is Still Out of Control.

AIRPLANE HELPS.

Several Hundred Men Fail in Efforts to Stem Threatening Flames.

VANCOUVER, B.C., July 10. — The countryside for several miles on the British Columbia coast in the vicinity of Myrtle Point, near Powell River, is abaze, according to word received here yesterday.

Forest fires in this district are sweeping large areas of timber despite the efforts of the fire fighters.

Fanned by a strong westerly wind the fire which has been burning through slashing and young timber in the vicinity of Cranberry Lake, jumped inland yesterday and leaped the half mile stretch of Haslam Lake

Working in conjunction with the forest rangers the pilot is reconnoitering the locality and is looking for spots where loggers and fire-fighters can build fire guards to check the flames.

Auxiliaries from Vancouver hastened to te scene to assist several hundred fire fighters who have been waging one-sided battes during the past several days. Steam pumps are being placed on floats in Haslam Lake and are being towed up the lake to points where lines of hose can be connected to thro streams of water on the fire burning on the countryside.

No change is reported in the forest fire situation at Rock Bay and Cowichan Road, both on Vancouver Island. These fires are still out of control and have spread to some extent during the last 24 hours.

The fires have covered such a wide expanse of territory that the large crews of loggers and rangers have not yet succeeded in enclosing them in the fire limits.

BEAUTIFUL ISLE TO BE NATIONAL RESERVE

Virgin Wilderness of Isle Royale, Lake Superior, to be National Playground.

WASHINGTON July 10.—A national playground 45 miles wide and embracing 132000 acres of virgin wilderness, prolific flora, rare orchids and wild animal life is planned by the government on Isle Royale in Lake Superior. The island, which is accessible to the entire middle west, recently was visited by Stephen T. Mather, director of the National Park Service, who on his return to Washington reported the site an ideal one for recreation purposes.

The natural displays on Isle Royale, Director Mather reported, make its permanent preservation of utmost importance, nearly a score of attractive harbors, a like number of lakes and many swift- flowing trout streams providing a fisherman's paradise.

Steps already have been taken to secure the island for the government and Mr. Mather says the genuine public spirit and the sincere interest in its preservation shown by the principal owners and others has guaranteed the creation of a great playground for the American people.

Besides its great virgin forests, the island is said to be inhaibted by a herd of 1,800 tame moose, 400 wood land caribou. Thousands of wild fowl and migratory birds visit the island for breeding purposes.

Sensational Silver Discovery Has Been Made in Ontario Where Fifty-year-old Supplies Indicate an Old Claim

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., July 10 (Canadian Press).—A silver discovery just announced by George Harris and R. J. Closs, of Fort William, is said by the discoverers to be one of the most sensational finds of the year in mineral claims.

Until they have finally secured their locations, the discoverers are not making any definite statement as to its exact location, describing it vaguely as about 100 miles from Fort William to the north-west. This would bring it north of Pays Plat, close to which station on the Canadian Pacific Railway silver was discovered many years ago.

The curious part of the discovery is that it seems to be a re-discovery, as old buildings and supplies supposed to be fifty years old were the first indications found of a mining claim, the silver being finally located in the side of a high hill and being six feet in width.

That they have made a discovery of rich silver ore cannot be doubted, as the samples they brought in are heavily mineralised with gentite, as rich as the best that has been taken from the older workings at Silver Islet and the old mines at Silver Mountain.

CONVENTION IS AGAIN STALLED

Nominees For Vice-President Put Down Their Feet Firmly.

BRYAN NOMINATED.

NEW YORK, July 10. — Re-assembling last night, ready to nominate Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, for vice-president, the Democratic National Convention was confronted with the prospect that he would decline to accept it.

During the recess strong pressure had been brought to bear on the Senator to change his determination but it had not been successful.

E. T. Meredith of Iowa, to whom William G. McAdoo unsuccessfully attempted to turn his delegates, was being discussed in the event that Senator Walsh resisted in his refusal.

Chairman Walsh did not come to the night session and left Representative Barkley of Kentucky in the chair. Meanwhile Mr. Meredith said that under no circumstances would he acept the vice-presidential nomination.

After the convention had been addressed by Governor Cox of Ohio it transacted some routine business including the passage of a resolution of thanks to New York for entertainment, and a resolution thanking Mrs. Woodrow Wilson for her care of the late president during his illness.

J. Bruce Kremer, of Montana, getting the floor, then announced that Senator Thomas J. Walsh "finally and decisively decline the vice-presidential nomination."

Finally Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska, was nominated for the vice-presidency.

WAR BETWEEN U. S. AND JAPAN PREDICTED

To Be Fought on Mexican and Panamian Soil, Says Venezuelain Fire-Eater.

BERLIN, July 10.— (By Mail to the United Press).—Gen. Raphaelo re Nogales, Venezuelan, who served on the German-Turkish general staff in the World War, forsees a Japanese-American war fought largely on Mexican and Panamaian soil.

Writing in the "Lokalanziger," he says:

"The policy of Secretary Hughes will make Mexico, Central America, Santa Domingo, Cuba, Haiti and Panama not only the future allies of Japan, but will convert these countries also into hotbeds of radicalism and bolshevism and thus create a constant menace to the United States."

The war of the future between the United States and Japan, Nogales claims, will be waged on Mexican and Panamian soil. The American fleet will be disabled after the locks of the Panama canal are blown up from airplanes—an easy matter, according to the general. Thereafter Japanese shock-troops, aided by Mexicans, will penetrate into the very heart of the United States, which he opines are already now "rotten to the core."

Nogales, however, knows how to avoid this disaster and advises the United States Government to lay off with its "Wall Street policy" and to withdraw the American troops from Central American soil.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., July 10.—(Canadian Press).—Exportation of pulpwood produced in Thunder Bay district to the United States totalling nearly 100,000 cords, is under way and at present in Port Arthur and Fort William harbors; three boats are loading wood for Detroit and Erie.

CROP FORECAST IS FAVOURABLE

United States Corn Production Will be Small, But Wheat Better.

WORLD WHEAT LOW.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—(Canadian Press)—Corn opened the crop season with the lowest condition ever reported on July 1, and indications of production are half a billion bushels less than last year, despite an acreage 1.4 per cent. larger than planted a year ago.

The Department of Agriculture's first forecast of the season, issued yesterday placed total corn production at 2,515,000,000 bushels. An unusually cold May followed by an excessively wet June were responsible for the low condition of corn, but was more favorable for wheat, oats, and barley, which show a decided improvement in prospect over a month ago.

Wheat production forecasts were increased 47,000,000 bushels over June predictions, with a total crop of 740,000,000 bushels now indicated while the forecasts for oats jumped 124,000,000 bushels to 1,356,000,000 bushels.

Smaller crops than last year of white and sweet potatoes, tobacco and apples are indicated but barley, rye, flaxseed, rice and peaches production will be larger than last year.

Wheat stocks on farms on July 1, were smaller than a year ago and also less than the average for that date during the previous five years.

World wheat production reported to date was announced as 1,535,000,000 bushels, compared with 1,674,000 bushels last year for the same countries which produced nearly half the wheat of the world outside of Russia.

END OF SESSION.

KAMLOOPS LINE IS AUTHORIZED BY THE SENATE

C. N. R. Construction Programme in British Columbia Given Approval.

MAY BE COMPROMISE.

Negotiating With C.P.R. to Make Arrangements Affecting This Line.

OTTAWA, July 10.—(By Canadian Press).— The bill to authorize construction of the Kamloops-Kelowna, (B.C.), branch of the Canadian National Railways was adopted in the Senate last night, in amendment was moved by Senator W. B. Ross, suggesting a three months' hoist. This was defeated on division 56 to 12.

Those who voted for the Ross amendment were: Senators Beaubien Black, Blondin, Casgrain, Chapais, Daniel, David, G. G. Foster, MacDonell, McLennan, Ross (Middleton) and Todd.

The bill was then adopted without a division.

Senator Dandurand referred to the charges of extravagance against the Canadian National Railways and strongly protested against such assertions. The railway under discussion he said, was commenced by the previous government, which had voted $5,000,000 for its construction with no explanation or agitation compared to the proceedure. He thought the Senate should pause before they threw away the money expended on this railway. Negotiations were in progress between the Canadian National Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway to arrange a compromise between them on the railway construction and operations in this territory. The Canadian National Railway had instituted these negotiations, but so far had failed to arrive at an agreement with the Canadian Pacific. He though that this bill should be passed so that in event of negotiations failing they could proceed with their own line.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE TALKS PROBLEM OF IMMIGRANTS

Rosary Halls Are Recognized as Hostels Fit For Immigrant Girls.

WORKERS NEEDED.

Catholic Women Take Active Part in Helping New Arrivals in Country.

EDMONTON, Alta., July 10. — (Canadian Press). — Immigration and colonization problems were discussed at the morning session of the Catholic Women's League convention. Rev. Father Daly, of Toronto, outlined the progress made by the Sisters of Service, an order established to work in connection with immigrants. The order will soon include nurses, teachers and social workers when it is planned to give special training.

It is intended that nurses shall take courses in public health work in order that they may co-operate with redress and Provincial health authorities. Plans now made will enable Sisters of Service to handle problems of immigration from Port to hostel, and then to follow newcomers into the field.

Mrs. M. J. Lyons, Ottawa, presented a report of the Immigration Committee in the absence of the convenor, Mrs. J. O. Hagen, Halifax. Newcomers are met at ports by representatives of the League, who look after their welfare. Similar work is carried on in different centres according to need. Mrs. Lyons announced that through her efforts Rosary halls have been recognized by the Government and placed on the register of hostels to which immigrant girls and women may be sent as they are now sent to Government hostels. Need of representatives at the ports who understand the languages of Central Europe and of literature in different languages was stressed.

GOVERNMENT TO INSPECT BANKS

Bill Passed Committee Stage and Has Clear Run to the Senate.

TO COST $50,000.

OTTAWA, July 10. — By Canadian Press. — A bill to provide a system of government inspection of Canadian banks, passed the committee stage in the House of Commons yesterday, and merely awaits a final reading in the lower House before going to the Senate for approval.

The measure comes as a sequel to the failure of the Home Bank and subsequent investigations of the banking system by the parliamentary committee, during which expert evidence from the United States was called.

Under the bill an inspector general of banks will be appointed by the government, the inspector reporting to the Minister of Finance. An appropriation of $50,000 for the Inspector General and his staff, is provided in the supplementary estimates. A salary of $25,000 for the inspector general has been suggested, but no definite figure is mentioned in the bill.

The amount of his salary is left for the government to determine.

KINGSTON, Ont., July 10.— (Canadian Press).—The Standard says this evening, that word has been received from the R.C.H.A. in Petawawa Camp that, as a result of the recently issued regulations in which the pay of unmarried officers, N.C.O.'s and men of the permanent force are substantially reduced, thirty seven N.C.O.'s and men of R.C.H.A. brigade have applied under the regulations for their discharge from the forces on the last day of this month; that several of the Junior Officers who are not married, and whose pay has been reduced very substantially, are also considering resigning their commissions; and that throughout the whole of the force there is great indignation on the part of the men over this reduced pay.

Canadian Engineers Hold the Interest of Nine Nations At Power Conference in Story of Dominion Achievement

LONDON, July 10 (Canadian Press Cable). — The delegates at the world power conference at Wembley evinced keen interest yesterday in a description of the overseeing of high tension and other wires near railways given by John Murphy, consulting electrical engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Canada.

The conference witnessed a special exhibition of ice pictures taken by Mr. Murphy, showing how the interference of ice with hydraulic plants could be overcome.

Fred Brown, of Montreal, presided at a session which discussed internal combustion engines. Representatives of nine countries participated in the discussion.

Prof. Greig, of Saskatchewan, contributed an address concerning the best application of internal combustion engines to the needs of the Prairies.

A joint paper on the transmission and distribution of electrical power in Canada, prepared by Julian C. Smith, vice-president and general manager of the Shawinigan Water and Power Company, and Prof. C. V. Christie, of McGill University, was read at the conference.

Several delegates declared that while a world-wide movement towards complete electrification was proceeding on a scale not imagined hitherto, Great Britain herself had practically nothing to show in this connection.

SENATE AMENDS INSURANCE ACT

But Postpones Enforcement —Concurrence of Commons Given With Reservations.

AFFECTS LICENSES.

OTTAWA, July 10.—(By Canadian Press).—The House yesterday concurred in amendments made by the Senate to a bill amending the Insurance Act. Under the bill as it left the House previously there was a clause providing penalties for foreign companies operating in Canada without a Dominion license. In the Banking and Commerce committee of the Senate representatives of several of the provincial governments objected that this was an attempt by the Dominion Government to regulate insurance contracts and to interfere with provincial jurisdiction. As a result, an amendment was inserted providing that the penalty clause would not come into force until proclaimed by the Governor-in-Council, the purpose being to provide opportunity for further negotiations between the Dominion and the provinces or reference to the courts if necessary.

Hon. J. A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance, said there were good reasons why the coming into force of the section should not be deferred. He would not oppose the Senate amendment but the Government would reserve the right to proclaim the section at any time.

E. GUS PORTER NOMINATED FOR WEST HASTINGS

Conservative Member Who Precipitated By-Election By His Resignation Again Named.

MORAL CHALLENGE.

At Nomination Meeting He Was Supported by Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen.

BELLEVILLE, July 10. Canadian Press. — E. Guss Porter, K. C., was nominated at Trenton yesterday afternoon by the Conservatives of West Hastings as their candidate in the by-election in this riding, made necessary by his resignation.

The meeting pledged its unanimous support in resolution moved by Major R. D. Ponton, and seconded by Warden C. S. Rollins.

The government was called upon to issue a writ at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Porter said that the position he occupied to-day was entirely different from that upon previous occasons on which he had appeared before the electors of the West Riding of Hastings. Then he had been appearing as the champion of Liberal-Conservative principles. Each had been capable of honest differences of opinion and there had been a fair and reasonable ground on these former occasions for differences of opinion. He was not appearing as the tings. "I believe the people of Can- I am coming to you on moral issue."

Higher Standard.

"This issue is as to whether the people of Canada demand a higer standard of public life than that demonstrated by the present government. He said he knew the mind of the people of Canada would speak through the West Riding of Hastings. "I eblieve the people of Canada and the native sons of Canada are of very much the same mind as those in this riding. They will uphold parliamentary institutions if an election is offered. He referred to the circumstances which brought the bye-election about, "and," he declared, "I am simply content to say that I simply did my duty."

Mr. Porter said that he was not campaigning against the Labor man, but against those who had betrayed their trust to Labor. The public demanded sterling honesty in ministers of the Crown, and all ministers had solemn duties to perform.

The Right Hon. Arthur Meighen on rising, amid great applause, said: "I come to stand beside Mr. Porter in his efforts to vindicate his own honor and to uphold the honor of public life in Canada. You in this riding will decide the standard of public life you desire in this country. Mr. Porter is to be admired for the fairness with which he has treated the Hon. Mr. Murdock. The traditions of public life art that no minister of the Crown shall profit by information which he has obtained confidentially and that tradition must be upheld."

REV. W. JOLIFFE'S GOLDEN WEDDING

Happy Celebration of Anniversary of Former Peterborough Minister at Residence of Son.

RETIRED 10 YEARS AGO

A happy event was celebrated yesterday in the golden wedding anniversary of the Rev. William J. Jolliffe and Mrs. Jolliffe, of 8 St. Clair Avenue west, the function taking place at the residence of their son, Mr. Ernest H. Jolliffe, 124 Lyndhurst Avenue. Fifty years ago their wedding was solemnized at the Eglinton Methodist church, where Mr. Joliffe was the young pastor in charge. Mrs. Jolliffe prior to her marriage, was Miss Clara Robinson, a resident of Eglinton. For forty years Mr. Jolliffe has been in the Methodist ministry, with churches at Montreal, Quebec, Peterboro, Oshawa and pastorates in the Bay of Quinte section of the province. He has been retired for ten years. Both the veteran bride and bridegroom have reached the age of seventy-seven and are enjoying good health.

Their golden wedding reception yesterday afternoon and evening at 124 Lyndhurst Avenue was largely attended, the guests including the bridesmaid at the wedding of half a century ago, Miss Mitchell, while the best man, Mr. J. Gartshore, would also have been present had he not gone abroad this year. Mr. and Mrs. Joliffe have two daughters, Miss Edith Joliffe, Toronto, Miss Ruby Jolliffe, New York, and three sons, Dr. Arthur V. Jolliffe, San Diego, California; Mr. Ernest H. Jolliffe, Toronto, and Mr. Norman Jolliffe, New York; also two grandchildren, in San Diego, Cal. Mrs. Jolliffe's three sisters were present, Mrs. Irving Walker, Mrs. William J. Hunter and Mrs. G. Fitch, Toronto. She has an elder brother, Mr. E. Robinson, living in the West. Mr. Jolliffe has three brothers, two living in England, and one in Boston. Many relatives of the happy bride and bridegroom were present and the day brought numerous congratulations and good wishes from their large circle of friends.

BANDITS ROB MAN FATALLY INJURED

Days Crime Sheet For Niagara Falls, N.Y., Contrasts With Canadian Side.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 10 —Since last night there have been, across the river, one man murdered, an Immigration officer perhaps fatally injured, another clubbed into unconsciousness, attempts made to dynamite the home of a minister, and a big seizure of Canadian ale.

Just as he was returning to enter his own home at 12.30 this morning Patrick Burke, owner of the Cosmopolitan Hotel, on Falls Street, was attacked by a gang of four youthful bandits, murdered and robbed of $1,000.

Burke was returning home from work and was accosted from a crawling automobile and told to stick his hands up. He reached for his gun and there was a fusilade of shots, one of which took effect in his heart, the others entering his back and legs.

He fell, but rose, and was staggering toward his verandah, when two of the four men bounded on him, went through his pockets, and sped away in the automobile, which was waiting with the engine running.

So quickly was the whole affair done that bystanders were unable to interfere. Jumping into the car the bandits ordered speed and drove away at a terrific pact.

The number of the car was taken, but it is believed to have been a stolen machine.

CORNWALL BOY DROWNED

CORNWALL, July 10 (Canadian Press). — Bryce Alguire, aged 28, was drowned while swimming in an old quarry near here. He entered the water while overheated, and the sudden change of temperature affected his heart.

Busy women want SMP Enameled Ware because it will bring food to the boil almost twice as fast as all-metal utensils, and completes the cooking sooner. A woman can wash SMP Enameled Ware utensils faster than utensils that have to be scrubbed and scoured.

Three finishes: Pearl Ware, two coats of pearly-grey enamel inside and out. Diamond Ware, three coats, light blue and white outside, white lining. Crystal Ware, three coats, pure white inside and out, with Royal Blue edging.

CROP REPORT

The following is a summary of returns made by the agricultural representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Haying has begun, but the weather has not been favourable for good curing. Clover is doing well, especially on new fields, but alfalfa is relatively better.

Fall wheat is heading out well, and will soon be ready for cutting. Winter rye is also looking well.

The Peel representative says that some farmers in that county are already ploughing for the sowing of the next crop of fall wheat.

Strawberries are yielding heavily, but prices show a wide range, and are generally lower than usual.

Wentworth — Strawberries were dumped on the market on Saturday, and sold as low as 1.50 per crate. There were generally $2.00 to $2.25 per crate.

Halton — Strawberries dropped from 25 cents to 9 cents a box on the local markets. They are a good quality and an excellent yield. Cherries have just commenced to ripen, some growers have commenced picking a few of the early varieties. They are a good crop, and are fairly free from fly.

Huron — The apple orchards have made a fairly good setting of fruit, particularly of the earlier varieties. Many of our orchards have again suffered an attack of the canker-worm. In some cases this is the fourth year that these orchards have been defoliated by this pest.

The Kenora representative states that a great army of caterpillars attacking the trees in the eastern section of this district, stripping the trees in the woods, and moving in large numbers.

Elgin reports tobacco as making good growth, but also states that cutworms are doing considerable injury to the plants. Maggots have also destroyed some of the bean crop in that county.

Corn is now showing a fine appearance where well cultivated on high land. Much of this crop was planted later than usual. Huron, however, complains of injury by cutworm.

Prescott and Russell states that more Dutch clover is being grown in that county than in previous years.

The heel fly is proving to be a very aggravating pest to cattle in a number of counties.

Oxford — The businesslike way in which all the best farmers are taking hold of the new turnip marketing proposition augurs well for the future of real co-operative marketing. Farmers generally have made quite a thorough study of the basic principles of co-operative marketing, and judging by the manner in which the contracts are being readily signed, the turnip growers were just waiting for someone to start an organisation of this kind.

The importance of dairying is being more and more stressed by representatives. One of the best recommendations for a man looking for work on the farm to-day is the fact that he is a good milker.

The Co-operative Dairy Association organised by the Essex representative is said to be giving satisfaction to the membership. They are getting $2.35 a cwt. for whole milk.

Lambton — The largest creamery in the county reports an increase of 33 per cent. in receipts of cream for the month of June, 1924, over June, 1923.

Brant — Although the milk supply is good at the present time the price of milk is steadily climbing up. The Burford Milk Products Company is paying for this month $1.45 delivered. This is about 20 cents higher than last month.

Lambton — Many dairymen are purchasing calves to take the surplus milk. With the good pasture milk production is up to standard, and most of the milk has been marketed this week. Milk is $2.06 per cwt.

Ontario — More farmers than usual are producing cream for creameries this year. Three new creameries have started in the county, and reports indicate that satisfactory business is being done.

Durham — Owing to good prices for wool and lamb, sheep are in demand for breeding purposes.

Frontenac — Egg prices have advanced somewhat. Best quality of eggs bringing 30 cents per dozen. Fair quantities coming in, although this has fallen off considerably in the last month.

Timiskaming — Baled hay is being offered at $13.00 to $15.00 per ton f.o.b. shipping point. Old potatoes are in very good demand at around $2.00 per bag.

Leeds — A large number of young men are returning from the United States and are all looking for jobs, which are not now too plentiful on account of the large number of immigrants which have been placed.

Tools of Ancint Days Used By Old British Craftsmen

WENDOVER, England, July 10. — Tucked away in the woods near the country residence of the British premiers at Chequers Court are men making modern furniture with tools similar to those used hundreds of years ago.

The workships, built in a wigwam style beneath trees, contain a primitive kind of lathe made of branches of trees and bits of wire, the motive power being supplied by a long and supple branch fixed to a tree stump outside the workshop. Each lathe turns out as many as a gross of chair legs daily. Most of the craftsmen are elderly and the oldest not only takes his meals at his lathe, but is said to sleep beside it at night.

ABOUT OLD LONDON

LONDON, July 10.

When the members of the Canadian Bar Association arrive in London to act as joint hosts to the American confreres, they will find the grime of ages removed from many of the old buildings. The Law Courts themselves have not had a wash for 42 years! The walls, as known to all but the oldest inhabitants are a dull brown—the washing will reveal the beauty of the marble and granite beneath the crust. It is no light task, this washing, as the Hall alone is 230 feet long, 47 feet wide and 90 feet high to the crown of the stone vaulted ceiling. The great gathering of lawyers will hold a reception in that wonderful old building known as Westminster Hall, which Sir Frank Baines of His Majesty's Office of Works, claims to be "the most important historical monument possessed by the British people."

Haunted Hampton Court.

There is a ghostly legend attaching to the old place, which by a curious coincidence, appears to have been confirmed. The Palace Clock, which was made for Henry VIII. in 1540, is known as "The Clock of Death." It is stated that when Queen Anne of Denmark, Queen of James I., died, the clock, which was striking four at the moment, stopped, and the same thing has happened on many subsequent occasions when some person long resident in the Palace has died within its precincts. On Friday, also the 13th of June, the clock stopped, and early next morning Miss Jane Cuppage was found dead in her apartments. These apartments, in which she had lived for many years, were a part of those occupied by King Edward VI. when he was Prince of Wales. Miss Cuppage was the daughter of General Sir Burke Cuppage, who served under Wellington at the Battle of Waterloo.

Valuable Skins.

The first fur "trade" exhibition to be held in London, the centre of the fur trade, was opened on June 1, at Holland Park, when skins valued at $3,000,000 were shown to buyers from all over the world. The feature of the show was a long ermine coat with a detachable cape, trimmed with ermine tails. It has big bell sleeves, a tucked collar, and is lined with white veloured crepe. A fur which experts say will be worn after the summer is dore seal. This is a natural seal dyed a golden brown. In the making of one skunk stole 3½ miles of cotton was used, and 20 miles of cotton are needed for making a full length coat.

Canadian V.C.'s Post.

Great interest is taken in the arrival in London from Toronto of Wing-Commander William George Barker, V.C., the famous Canadian aviator, who thrilled the world with his daring feats during the end of the war. He will be a most popular Liaison Officer between the British and Canadian air forces.

Empire Thanskgiving.

Over 7000 people, including many hundred Canadian visitors now in London, attended the Thanksgiving services at St. Paul's Cathedral, on June 18th. Every seat in that vast building was occupied and the congregation celebrating Waterloo Day, was drawn from every corner of the Empire. Suddenly, breaking the silence following on prayers for the bereaved, for the absent and fo all those who had died for the Empire, the wild music of bagpipes was heard and the pipers of the Scots Guards, playing a wailing lament, "The Flowers of the Forest," paced from the south transept to the nave and then across to the north transept; the shrill notes of the pipes gradually becoming fainter and fainter. The last tragic notes died away and were followed by Christini Rosetti's joyful "Anthem to the Memory of the Brave."

London's New Park.

Sir Henry Lennard of West Wickham, has offered the corporation of London 36 acres of land at Spring Park, 14 miles from Charing Cross, to be used by the public as an open space. The corporation already owns West Wickham common, so that the district is well known to Londoners, especially to those living in the south. Much of Spring Park is woodland, the timber consisting mainly of chestnut trees. West Wickham Court, where the Lennard family has lived for 350 years, has associations with Henry VIII. A yew walk in its gardens is known as "Anne Boleyn's walk," tradition stating that there she used to walk with King Hal when staying in the house with her uncle, Sir Henry Heydon, the then owner. In one of the windows are the initials of Henry and Anne intertwined with a true lovers' knot, and a pair of Anne's shoes is among the family treasures.

DAVIS HIGH IN LONDON OPINION

Candidate of Democrats Regarded by British Press as Strongest Party Could Offer.

WISDOM PREVAILED.

LONDON, July 10. — (United Press).—"Out of the pandemonium of the Democratic Convention emerged unexpectedly the spirit of wisdom," said the Daily News to-day. "Every Liberal Minded politician in this country will welcome announcement that John W. Davis is the party's candidate.

"If it should be his lot to succeed Mr. Coolidge he will bring to discharge of that powerful position cour age and sagacity above the ordinary."

The Daily Chronicle says Davis probably is the strongest candidate the Democrats could have nominated and "now that the Republicans' chances are so impaired, first by oil and secondly by La Follette," believes the former Ambassador to the Court of St. James has considerable chance of election.

"American political methods as exemplified by party conventions look often so unpromising when seen from a distance that one cannot help marvelling again at the comparative frequency with which men of high character and attainments contrive eventually to be thrown to the top by them."

DISPUTE ON AGREEMENT.

Question Raised Regarding Crow's Nest Pass Rates.

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., July 10. — (Canadian Press).—Whether railway branch lines, built since the Crow's Nest Pass Agreement are entitled to the same freight rates as branches built before the agreement was the important question raised before the Board of Railway Commissioners sitting here yesterday. D. Morris, representing farmers of the district, declared there should be no discrimination that rates should apply equally to all lines.

Counsel for the Canadian Pacific Railway claimed that the Crow's Nest Agreement did not apply to branch lines built since the agreement.

The commission reserved judgment.

Combat Crime Motive Compulsory Bank Accounts

LOS ANGELES, July 10.—Poverty is no crime, but often it is a motive for crime, says Judge Arthur Keetch, of the local superior court, who has instituted a probationary system under which all prisoners he releases on probation are required to start a bank account with a certain percentage of their wages.

The first results of the system were made known by Chief Probation Officer May, to whom the men and women on probation are required to submit their bank books once a month. The report indicates that out of a total of 20 of the wards all but two had placed more than $100 each in saving accounts during the period of four months.

NEWS FROM MADOC.

Two Sunday School Picnics Accounted For Yesterday.

MADOC, July 10.—Wednesday being the half-holiday, was chosen for two Sunday school picnics, St. Peter's Presbyterian and St. John's Anglican.

The Presbyterian picnic was held at Mr. C. Pitt's new Ozone Park at the south end of Moira Lake. One very attractive feature of this park is the excellent sand beach. The kiddies found it a splendid place for sand houses as well as enjoying the bathing. The picnic was well attended, and old and young report a very enjoyable afternoon.

The Anglican picnic was held at Mr. W. McBain's cottage. The usual races were run, and the men enjoyed a game of football, while the women indulged in baseball, the young people taking as much enjoyment out of having their elders play with them as out of the games themselves. Boating and bathing were entered into with enthusiasm. All the picnicers were very appreciative of the kindness shown them by Mr. and Mrs. McBain.

Rev. Mr. McCormick, Moderator of this district, preached the Burnbrae Church vacant on Sunday last. During his absence, Rev. Mr. Ramsay, of Belleville, took the services.

Mr. and Mrs. McCormick have now gone on their holidays, motoring to Mitchel and other places. During Mr. McCormick's absence of a month, Rev. Mr. Foster, of the Methodist Church, will conduct union services.

Mr. A. McGuire, who has been teaching in Ottawa, has been appointed inspector of Centre Hastings Public Schools. He succeeds Mr. Minns, who goes to Vankleek Hill as principal of the High School.

Miss Jean Roberts, of Vancouver, was the guest of Miss Cross for a few days before sailing for England.

Mrs. W. H. O'Flynn, of Toronto, who for many years was a resident of Madoc, is in town for the month of July.

Alaska Chamber Commerce Held Midnight Excursion

WASHINGTON, July 10.—(Associated Press.)—The three and a half months of daylight in Alaska recently afforded an opportunity for the government railroad in the territory to hold the only "midnight" excursion on record. The occasion was the Seward and Anchorage Chamber of Commerce midnight sun celebration at Fairbanks. Special rates were authorized by the Interior Department, as a result of which 114 tickets were sold, bringing $2,247.

An entertaining feature of the celebration was the annual "nocturnal" baseball game between the Anchorage and Fairbanks baseball teams.

APPEAL DISMISSED IN WILL CASE

Trial Judge's Award to Elizabeth Moffat in Claim Against Executors Sustained.

The award of the Surrogate Court Judge in action brought by Elizabeth Moffatt against Joseph Madill and Herbert Cunningham, executors of the last will and testament of George Lockie, deceased, allowing the plaintiff $3,250 inclusive of a legacy of $2,500 a bequest to the plaintiff under the will, was sustained on appeal in a recent judgment handed down by Mr. Justice Lennox in weekly court.

The plaintiff claimed $2,000 for work and services rendered to the deceased while in his employ from April 10, 1910 to August 1923. The action was brought in the Surrogate Court of the County of Peterboro and the trial judge allowed the plaintiff $900 and costs.

The defendant appealed on the ground of having found new evidence affecting the merits of the plaintiff's claim. The matter was referred to His Honour Judge Huycke for reconsideration, by Mr. Justice Hodgins, and a new judgment based on the addition evidence, allowed the plaintiff $3,250, inclusive of $2,500 representing a legacy under the will of George Lockie, deceased.

Again the defendants appealed, Mr. R. R. Hall, K.C., acting for the appellants and Mr. W. F. Huycke for the respondent.

The appeal was dismissed with costs. The following is the judgment of Mr. Justice Lennox delivered July 3, 1924:

In the Supreme Court of Ontario.
Re-Estate and Will of George Lockie.

The testator was almost 95 years of age when he died and I entertained the opinion upon the argument that if he had left the plaintiff all he possessed she would not be overcompensated for the services she rendered during the last 14 years of his life. I have not changed my mind as to the moral justification at least of the finding of the learned Judge of the Surrogate Court.

The difficulty I felt and indicated at that time was that the bargain, in effect, that if the measure of compensation was left in the hands of the testator and for him to judge of an determine, the plaintiff must abide by his judgment and determination if exercised in good faith and he bequeathed a substantial sum although, in the opinion of the Court, the amount left by the will turned out to be decidedly less than apparently it should have been. In confirmation of this view, as a matter of law, Mr. Hall immediately referred me to decisions to which it becomes unnecessary to refer, for assuming the general accuray of the view I then expressed a perusal of all the evidence satisfies me that this principle is not in conflict in any sense with the judgment in appeal. The facts speak for themselves; it is all a question of fact and there is no confict of evidence.

The testator was about 82 years of age when the plaintiff became his housekeeper. I would judge a well meaning, straight-forward and honest man. For many years he had endeavoured to induce her to take this position, as a condition of her coming, he promised to leave her $1,000 at his death. The plaintiff did not haggle about the amount.

The plaintiff is a thrifty, capable, and honest woman. They were both honest, and as is characteristic of unsophisticated, honest people, neither even thought of doubting the integrity of the other. She trusted in his promise, and as in many other matters he relied upon the plaintiff to abide by his instructions as to the $1,000 cheque, as she did; and he trusted her to destroy it without seeing that it was destroyed, after he made his will. I was referred to many decisions, The record of the fourteen years service and the acts of the testator are, I think, the safest, and the only safe guide in determining the legitimate interpretation of their bargain, the mutual understanding of the terms of service as time went on, and the total amount the plaintiff ought to recover by reason of it. The services of the plaintiff were not limited to household duties and personal attendance upon the testator—a heavy burden for any woman for many years before his death—they extended to almost every species of work to be performed upon the farm.

Well then, what are the outstanding circumstances of this fourteen years, for the acts of the testator during this period are what will influence me in declaring whether—in my opinion—the learned Judge was right or wrong? It is not necessary to specifically refer to dates nor to the payment of certain comparatively small sums of money which may or may not have been intended as out and out gifts.

With eighty-two years already counted when the plaintiff became the housekeeper and general servant of the testator it is not probable that at that time either of them expected that the service would run into many years. "The expectation of life" estimated by mortuary tables cannot promise much by way of residue I would think at eighty-two. What both parties had in mind at that time were normal conditions and $1,000 was prima facie a reasonable sum as the matter apparently stood at that time. The importance of this is not so much the question of the amount—although having regard to the probable duration of the life of the testator, as they would then forecast it, the amount would appear to be eminently reasonable—it is that remuneration was contemplated and a term of the arrangement.

After she had been there about a year he gave her a cheque, not to be used until after his death—both of them ignorant, no doubt, of the legal consequence—and she held the cheque as instructed until he made his will. This is what he intended her to have if he died shorty thereafter, or if his life was not abnormally prolonged.

In 1914 the $1,000 in his opinion was not enough and he made a will leaving the plaintiff $1,500 and instructed her to destroy the cheque, which she did. He was ill, and his reasons, as sworn to by the plaintiff at the trial, are set out at page 9 of the evidence. This as at the beginning of the excessively burdensome period of the plaintiff's service, so burdensome, take it all in all, that the total would not be an adequate compensation, but, I presume the testator felt he was under obligations to Mrs. Soloman as well and his estate did not lengthen out as his life did.

As years ran on the testator realised that, taking into account any compensation he had actually made in the meantime, in favour of the plaintiff the provisions of the will of 1914 were not adequate, and he made a final will on the 23rd April, 1923, and died on the 14th day of August thereafter. By his will he increased the bequest to the plaintiff to $2,500, gave her a cow, and made her his residuary legatee. This was undoubtedly, I would say, because of the additional years of service and its ever increasing burdens and the recognition and pursuance of his agreement to recompense the plaintiff. It was suggested that there will be very little residuary estate, if any, and Mr. Hall argued, if I apprehended his meaning, that the provisions for payments of debts and funeral expenses provided for in the fourth paragraph is not effective inasmuch as although it purports to charge real estate it does not in terms exonerate the personalty. This may be so, but, parenthetically, I would suggest that the executors carefully consider whether or not the real estate is not subject to the condition of payment of debts, etc., before conveying it to the devisee.

Is the plaintiff entitled to anything beyond the provisions of the will? I think so. She is entitled to reasonable compensation covering the whole period of service, and the provisions of the will are to be applied pro tanto. There was a time when if the testator had then died she could have recovered more than $1,000. The arrangement was superseded and eliminated by the subsequent acts and declarations of the testator. It is possible that the plaintiff over-estimates the profits to be made from the farm in three or four years if the testator had consummated what he determined upon, upon further reflection, and arranged with his lawyer to have done, but they would exceed the amount added to the bequests by the judgment.

I think this appeal fails. The motion will be dismissed with costs of all parties out of the estate, and, after a good deal of hesitation, I direct that the costs of the executors be taxed as between solicitor and client.

Germany Fires Employes.

BERLIN, July 10—(United Press)—Twenty-five percent of the government employees of the German state were dismissed during the period from October 1, 1923 to April 1, 1924, according to a memorandum submitted to Reichstag. This reduction of the staff means a saving overhead of 434 million marks or 15.3 percent of actual wages and salaries. Other savings, such as room rent, light, heating, etc., which are difficult to calculate at the moment form also considerable sums so the government assures.

Priests From Mongolia Study Buddhism in Japan

TOKIO, July 10. — Fifteen priests belonging to that branch of Buddhism which flourishes in Mongolia and Tibet, have arrived in Japan for a three-year stay to study Japanese Buddhism.

This is a case of the pupil teaching the teacher for Japanese Buddhism is a derivative of that religion as taught on the continent of Asia.

It is in Japan, however, that Buddhism to-day has its most virile and progressive sects.

The travellers had never seen railways or steamships before undertaking this journey, and they reached Tokio still dazed by the rapidity with which the world outside their Mongolian retreats moves.

Most of their three years will be spent in the great monasteries and temples in the region of Kioto and Nara, studying the tenets of the principal Japanese sects.

TAKING A CHANCE

The agitation to have all vehicles carry lights at night is continuing and at the next session of the Legislature it is hoped to have a measure passed that will compel all vehicle to be illuminated.

The only wonder about the thing is that it should be necessary to wage a campaign for this protection.

If people who drive horse vehicles after dark without lights ever stopped to realize their danger there would probably be few of them who would run the risk.

The vehicle without a light is at the mercy of the motorist; its safety depends upon the vigilance and alertness of the man at the wheel.

If the chauffeur should be careless there is every chance of an accident in which, of course, the horse vehicle would suffer the most.

In England the carrying of lights by all vehicles has been made compulsory and the law is strictly enforced.

Here in Ontario we have not seen fit so far to go that far, although it might be expected that people who do much driving at night would be forced to illuminate their vehicles in self defence.

A few trips at night over any of the main roads radiating from Peterboro, however, will quickly convince the observer that not one in twenty horse vehicles carries a light.

Evidenty most people prefer to take a chance rather than to take the trouble af carrying a lantern.

WHAT YOU EVER CAN KNOW

It's amazing, the vast number of things that have been learned by the world's people through the centuries. The sum total of human knowledge is so gigantic that the brightest brains would have to live thousands upon thousands of years to master it all.

For instance, the carpenter has knowledge that is entirely unknown to the chemist. Every different line of work requires a great amount of knowledge that is unknown to outsiders.

It takes a man an entire lifetime to begin to learn about farming, chemistry, medicine, salesmanship or any of all the other long line of human activities.

We have barely scratched the surface of knowledge. And yet a man could live thousands of lifetimes, in each one following a different line of work, and at the end he'd only have acquired a fraction of the knowledge that has been found out by the human race at large.

Addressing companies sell mailing lists covering over 5000 different forms of business activity.

You know what is meant by "the lost arts." Much knowledge perishes as oncoming generations turn their attention to different pursuits.

It's like the practice of medicine. When a veteran physician dies, a large part of what he has learned by experience dies with him. He hasn't time to make a complete record.

The old idea of education was to pour facts into the brain, the same as filling a jug with a funnel. But we has progressed and specialized so much that education is, by compulsion, being put on a different basis.

To succeed, a man must specialize on some one thing. In that field he needs all the facts he can soak up.

But when it comes to general knowlege, it is futile to attempt to learn everything. It simply cannot be done. The important thing is to be taught how to find knowledge when occasion arises for using it. A dictionary is just as useful to the average person as several years' study of foreign language—unless the language will be used in his life's work.

Some studies are primarily to train the thinking processes of the brain, rather than the actual knowledge acquired. Mathematics especially.

CANADA'S BANKS.

The failure of the Home Bank lessened public confidence in Canada's banking system to such an extent that the announcement of a system of government inspection is heartily welcome. Yet there is little justification for the apparent willingness of some members of Parliament to have Canada adopt an imitation of the banking system of the United States.

The Canadian banking system is not perfect, it will be bettered by a real inspection by government officials.

But the failure of one bank should not be sufficient ground to cause the fine record of Canada's banks to be forgotten.

During the past year over 500 banks have failed in the northwestern states of the neighbouring republic.

There is evidently nothing in such a system that we can afford to copy in Canada and to suggest any such policy is to ignore facts that should be apparent to everybody.

The Progressive members of the House are critics of the Canadian system, many of them complaining that they are too conservative in their credits.

That is rather a virtue than otherwise.

The Home Bank went too far the other way, and the results are too well known to need stressing.

The Ottawa Journal covers the situation neatly when it points out that the function of banks in two fields (provision of safe desposit for the public .....) judicious use of credit for the development of industries.

And the simple truth that development of industry both agricultural and manufacturing has kept pace in Canada with other countries our trade per capita of population is the greatest in the world—and that depositors have had their savings safe-guarded in a manner that bears comparison with the record of any nation shouts back triumphantly to all who, on the basis of a single reverse, would pull down the whole banking fabric of the Dominion.

THE POSITION OF THE FARMER.

Mr. Drury, former premier of Ontario, characterizes as ridiculous the statement that a condition approaching a farmers' strike is taking place in Ontario.

The report comes from W. O. Galloway, director of statistics for the Ontario government who bases his assertion on reports from district representatives some of which note decrease in crop production and declare that in some sections farmers "are deliberately depreciating the value of their farms by neglecting improvements."

In this particular contention the Examiner is inclined to view Mr. Drury as the better authority and to agree with him that the story of a farmer's strike is absurd.

It will be readily understood of course that there have been decreases in production, many farmers feeling that in view of the prices for certain products it would be folly to grow large crops when the cost of production could not be realized.

But to say that the farmers have "deliberately" depreciated the value of their farms by neglecting improvements is to make a statement that is difficult to believe.

Why should a farmer "deliberately" depreciate the value of his property, usually everything he has in the world?

The simple truth seems to be that the income from the farm in the past year or two has not been sufficient to pay for improvements or repairs.

If farmers have neglected to undertake necessary improvements the reason is to be found in the low price of farm products as compared with the cost of production.

No man wants to injure the value of his property and if the money is available most farmers are ready to keep their plant and farm in first class condition.

To accuse them of going on strike and of wilfully letting their premises depreciate is to make a charge that is not only nonsensical but is most unfair to the agricultural community.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS.

There seems to be a contest among some of the railroad engineers, to see which can start his train with the most violent jerk when pulling out of a station. Especially at night, rousing the passengers as soon as they get "nicely asleep."

But cheer up, travelers. They had the same trouble over 60 years ago. Comes to light a faded copy of rules and regulations issued March 1, 1852 by the Western & Atlantic Railway. Rule 6:

"In connecting and in starting with his train, an engineman will be exceedingly careful in the management of the throttle, so that the cars may not be injured or the passengers annoyed by the sudden violence of the start."

Life was not so rushed in those days. Conductors on the Western & Atlantic were ordered not to leave a station without sending to the postoffice for the mail.

Trains lingered at stations from 10 to 60 minutes.

It was a single-track lien. Frequently trains going in opposite directions would meet, the telegraph not yet having been installed. And apparently a free-for-all fight between the train crew, to settle the matter of which should back up, was not uncommon. The regulations were very strict about admonishing enginemen against interfereing while the conductors reached an agreement.

Engines in those days bured cordwood. Coal was to come later. It was along about that time that hard coal was used only for paving Pennsylvania roads. No one suspected that it would burn—until a blacksmith absent-mindedly shovelled some of into his forge.

Travel was none too comfortable. Pullman had a wild dream of ease for passengers. When he put out his first sleeping car, it was so crude that the porter used hatchet and nails in making up the berths. Enthusiastic guests on that eventful trip had bought a gold-headed cane to be presented to Pullman the next morning. After riding all night in his sleeper, they had changed their minds. He never got the cane.

The gent who began calling the "the good old days" was born later. He didn't live through the past—which looks better at a distance. Future generations will look back pityingly at our most luxurious devices and call them crude.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, July 10.—Total cattle sales at the Union Stock Yards on Tuesday were 848 head, and total receipts for the day 1,018. This left less than 400 to be added to yesterday's run, which was 39 cars, 349 cattle, 317 calves, 1,128 hogs, and 267 sheep and lambs.

Yesterday the exporters were shipping out 800 cattle, and about 30 of these were bought yesterday morning; the steers costing $7.50 to $8.50 a cwt., but there was only one at the latter price. Total export shipments this week will be over 1,250, and very few will be accumulated for holding so that the buyers will want a full supply next week.

With a few exceptions, yesterday's cattle were not above the medium class. Shields & Company sold a load of coarse horsey steers to Swifts at $6.00 a cwt. Prices were quite steady in all kinds of butchers, and although the beef demand is said to be poor there is enough business to use up what is on sale. Some buyers claim that quality considered butchers of the better class are 25 cents a cwt. higher than on Monday.

The top paid for handyweight butchers yesterday was $7.25 a cwt.

For shipment to Kingston $7.15 and $6.90 a cwt. was paid for butchers not quite choice. Good medium butchers sold from $6.00 to $6.50 a cwt. Poor mediums were $5.50 and the packers took a few very common butchers as low as $4.00. Butcher's cows sold fairly well. One heifery cow sold at $6.00, and good medium cows were $4.50 and $4.60.

Bulls were steady. One good butcher's bull sold at $5.00 a cwt. and a heavy one at $4.75. There was a fair amount of snap to business, and there will be very little carried over for Thursday.

Calves moved quite freely yesterday morning at steady prices. Several loads have been shipped to Buffalo this week and this has held the market up. Bunches of good medium calves sold at 8 cents a pound, and good calves brought 9 cents. Large packages of grassers brought 4 cents a pound.

Lambs were not active and buyers tried to whittle the tops down to 14 cents. Only a couple brought 14 1-2 cents. Yearlings were 10 cents, and medium quality sheep 5 1-2 cents a pound.

There was no change in the bid price on hogs, but an outside buyer bid 10 cents a cwt. above the $7.75 f.o.b. price. Packers say the market is weak and intend to lower the price to $7.50 a cwt. f.o.b. for Saturday's loading.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 10 (Canadian Press). — Corn jumped over the dollar mark yesterday for July delivery, the first time since 1920. Both September and May corn reached the topmost price set this season. Unfavourable weather, together with current belief that the Government report would show the corn crop condition to be the lowest ever known, was chiefly responsible.

Corn quotations closed strong 1 1-8c to 2 1-8c net higher, July $1.00 3-4 and September 96 7-8 to 97c.

Wheat finished unsettled 1 1-2 to 1 5-8c to 1 7-8c up; September $1.14 3-8 to $1.14 1-2, and December $1.17 1-4 to $1.17 3-8, with oats at 1c to 1 7-8c advance; and provisions showing 15c to 35c gain.

Rushes to buy corn began as soon as the market opened, and the day's last transactions were at virtually the tip-top reached. The fact that temperatures were somewhat more seasonable failed to offset persistent rain, especially as rural offerings were scarce, and shipping demand here good.

Before the day was ended, much profit-taking took place, but the buying continued to be of surprising volume to the last.

Wheat owed its strength chiefly to crop comment from the Canadian North-West, and to assertions that the domestic spring crop was in danger from black rust. Indications of good export business tended also to lift values, despite accurate forecasts that the Government report as to wheat would prove bearish.

Oats moved up as a result of corn strength, and good demand from shippers.

Decidedly enlarged buying of provisions was witnessed. Disparity with corn values appeared to be the principal incentive.

Chinese Who Wear Queues Compelled to Visit Barber

PEKIN, July 10. — Queues are a mark of ignorance and the wearing of them does no credit to latter day China, says General Wang Chenping, civil governor of Chihli Province, in an order abolishing them.

Two months' time will be allowed "pig tail" Chinese to get rid of their appendages voluntarily. After that, queue-cutting parties will be staged by the police in all quarters of the Province by official order.

A brief campaign of education will be carried on during the two months respite by means of posters and hand bills. The police in the villages will assist by telling the people how foolish they are to stick to the ancient custom.

In addition to having his queue forcibly removed any Chinese failing to observe the order will be fined one dollar, the proceeds to be divided among the police who have been most conscientious in enforcing obedience.

BRAZIL HAS NOW ADDED MORE MEN TO HER ARMY

The Situation in Sao Paulo is at Present Well in Hand.

400 CASUALTIES.

BUENOS AIRES, July .—(United Press).—The brazilian Federal Government has sent strong reinforcements to Sao Paulo and now seems to have the situation in that State well in hand, according to advices here to-day.

Federal forces captured the big Luz Military Barracks, after a twenty hour bombardment, late yesterday. Casualties on both sides were heavy and the total dead is estimated at from 250 to 400. Many were wounded. Additional Federal troops have been converging on Sao Paulo from several directions since Sunday, and it is estimated that several thousand now are in the city and its environ. The situation in Rio de Janeiro continues to calm and there seems a little likelihood of an additional outbreak sme scattered rebel bands apparently have escaped into the forests and mountains between Sao Paulo and Santos but it is believed these will be rounded up within a few days by Federal cavalry. Wild reports which have been circulated here regarding the subversive movement are disproved by United Press dispatches direct from Rio de Janeiro.

A story that 13,000 men were marching on the capital from Sao Paulo was termed entirely without foundation. Such a march it is pointed out would be manifestly impossible as Rio and Sao Paulo are separated by more than 300 miles of rugged and mountainous country, largely covered with dense tropical forest. There are no wagon roads, between the cities.

According to the most reliable information here less than 1,000 men were involved in the rebel outbreak which occurred early Saturday.

A number of young soldiers of the State forces, disgruntled by the decision of Governor Carlos de Campos to renew a contract with the French military mission lent themselves to the plans of a group of ambitious politicians.

The soldiers seized the Big Estacio de Luz, terminus of the Central Do Brazil Railway from Rio de Janeiro the telegraph stations and government buildings and besieged the palace residence of the State Government.

Federal forces refused to join the movement and word was telephoned at once to Rio de Janeiro.

The Federal Government embarked strong detachment of troops and marines on the dreadnaught Minas Gereas, for San Tos and early Sunnday the government forces started marching up the famous mountain boulevard which connects Santos with Sao Paulo.

Several Stiff engagements were fought before the rebels finally were driven to cover in the Luz Barracks. A desultory bombardment on the military stronghold then was begun and yesterday at mid-day the barracks was taken by storm. Early today all the remaining rebels in it were killed or wounded.

BABY CARRIAGES VS. AUTOS.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir: Baby carriages are still almost as popular as automobiles, and even the aldermen will admit that, looking outside the narrow bounds of their self-interest, this is a good thing for the country.

In their discussion Tuesday night, city legislators considered, on suggestion of the same gentleman who so strongly favored automobiles parading the streets at band concert hours, the cutting away of the street sidewalks to fifteen or twenty feet at intersections. Women find it difficult enough to manoeuvre baby carriages on the eight foot curves on George street, and if the alderman does not appreciate the difficulty it is time that he learned by a practical test.

Let me anticipate his reply by stating that baby carriages are essential to the good of the country, whereas his joy-ride around corners built for automobile speed, does nto help a little bit.

And it might be well to remind him that in a working community like this, the majority of the people will remain pedestrians, and heated sponsoring of speed facilities is not the best representation possible in a majority ruled country.

LISTENER-IN.

THE ABOLITION OF SEPARATE SCHOOLS.

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Rev. Father Minehan has written the following letter to The Globe, suggesting the abolition of Separate Schools. It will be remembered that Father Minehan wrote strongly in favour of church union. The tendency of the times appears to be a grand re-union of all denominations in the bosom of the old home church. This letter of Father Minehan's should not be allowed to pass without attention.

—Yours, J. H. Burnham.

Father Minehan on Religious Instruction.

To the Editor of The Globe.

In its issue of 3rd July The Globe published a letter, in which I pleaded for greater religious instruction in our schools, and promised to unfold a plan in which, under a new system, such instruction could be imparted much more satisfactorily than under our present dual arrangement. It must be borne in mind that Separate Schools are not a monopoly of Catholics in Ontario.

I am not the originator of the plan I propose. I heard it outlined for the first time by the very capable head of Toronto's Bureau of Municipal Research, which has done so much to develop a civic consciousness of a higher type. He was looking for greater returns for our expenditure on primary and secondary education. He desired to see our school plant doing service to the whole community all the time.

With this object in view, he proposed to make the school the centre of community life. In the centre of an oval or quadrangle would be the community hall used for school and also community gatherings. Around it would be the school playground flanked by a group of school buildings constructed on the lines of the cottage system ,simple, yet artistic, each accommodating five or six classes. He contended that the school plant could be made a centre of educational and social activity for the whole community in this way at a cost little, if any, greater than that of our present system.

After his address I said to him: The system you have oulined has possibilities far wider than any you contemplate. It would be a splendid aid in developing a community spirit, but it lends itself admirably to the filling of the greatest religious void which is the chief defect of our present system of education, and the result of our religious divisions.

In that group system you have sketched, Catholics, Anglicans, Methodists, Presbyterians (the Church Union measure now almost consummated will simplify the problem), and Jews, when sufficiently numerous; they can each have all the opportunities for religious formation (which includes atmosphere, association, teaching, personality—much more than merely instruction), afforded now by Separate Schools, and at the same time enjoy that social co-mingling where friendships are formed, namely, on the common playground.

I am as anxious for solid definite religious formation of character on the part of non-Catholic and non-Christian citizens as I am in the case of my co-religionists. Our danger to-day is from those who have no fixed religious convictions. I am no uncritical admirer of the old Puritan type, but I prefer one grim Covenanter to half a dozen drifters. He at least stood for something for which he was willing to make the supreme sacrifice.

In this scheme, so briefly outlined, there could be co-operation among teachers, a spirit of giving and receiving, which would be a big advance on conditions now prevailing. To those who deem the scheme impractical or revolutionary, I answer that this is the very scheme worked out with excellent results by our Provincial university and its federated colleges. All the scheme needs is a little goodwill. Indeed, I have in mind one place in our midst in which, with exceedingly small trouble, a beginning could be made. In scattered rural districts the plan would not be feasible, but that is no reason why it should not be the ideal along which we would proceed.

L. Minehan.

END OF GOLD SUPPLY IN SIGHT

Prussian Geologist Predicts Exhaustion of World's Gold.

In 30 or 40 years the great gold mines of the world will all shut down for good, predicts Dr. G. Berg, of the Prussian Geological Institute.

His idea is that, by that time, the mines will have been worked to the point where it will no longer pay to operate them.

And new mines of importance are not apt to be discovered, for practically the whole world has already been prospected for the precious yellow metal, Berg argues.

However—

Only a few years ago American geologists were predicting a permanent shortage of oil, with no new big oil pools to be discovered. Enormous oil pools continue to be opened up periodically, nevertheless. Right now there's a world surplus of oil.

On the other hand, assume that Berg is right. Fascinating possibilities present themselves. It is claimed by experts that not more than half of the gold that has been taken from the ground by man is still in man's hands.

Bit by bit, it is lost here and there—such as gold rings dropped in deep water. Huge gold cargos have been sunk at sea.

If no more gold were to be found in the earth, the available supply of gold would steadily decrease.

The vanishing of the world's supply of gold might be more of a blessing than a calamity. For one thing, it would compel a man to put his money system on a scientific basis—as, for instance, making the dollar represent a certain number of units of human energy or labor. Instead, we have the gold system, based on the element of scarcity—for gold, after all, is worthless except for filling teeth and other purposes where its ability to withstand corrosion is valuable.

If lead were as scarce as gold, lead would be worshipped and be used as a basis of money. Gold has greed, dishonesty, murder and other crimes and forms of degradation.

But that's not quite fair to gold. The real culprit is scarcity, which Gold is just the symbol of scarcity. appeals to the peculiar human instinctive craving to own anything that is rare enough to be available only for a few.

CARRY "CANNED HEAT."

Here is a good suggestion for the summer camper and picnicker. Always carry along a tin of "canned heat" to set under the wood so as to start the fire. It is particularly helpful when there is a wind.

Pushed by Wife's Ghost Bride Halts Wedding

PEKING, July 10.—Claiming that she was pushed by the ghost of her prospective husband's deecased wife, a Chinese bride-to-be caused a sensation in the street outside Hatamen gate recently by leaping from the bridal sedan chair in which she was being conveyed in her prospective husbands' home.

As the girl sat weeping in the dust she explained to the go-between representing the grooms' family, and to the crowd which gathered, that as she was entering the chair at her own home she observed a dishevelled woman following her. Suddenly she felt herself propelled out of the chair. She felt convinced, she said, that she was under the spell of the first wife who naturally felt annoyed at seeing her former place about to be usurped.

After much persuasion the bride was induced to proceed to the ceremony, and there was no further mishap.

We Tried Sixty

Only One

was good enough!

In selecting the flavouring for the New Quaker Corn Flakes, we prepared no less than sixty different samples. They were thoroughly tested by a number of experienced cereal men.

Every one of the experts selected No. 53 as the best flavouring of all the sixty. We adopted No. 53. It is the flavouring you get in Quaker Corn Flakes.

No. 53 was the most costly of the whole sixty. It is the best and most expensive flavouring ever put into a Corn Flake.

Two cartons, 25 cents

Wax-Wrapped

Quaker Corn Flakes come to you just as crisp and fresh as they leave the "toasters" in the mill. The wax-wrapped carton preserves the delicious flavour under all conditions.

The corn is the best selected white corn. The salt is a special crystal table salt which does not attract moisture—it is the best salt we can procure. The malt is the finest we can buy, the sugar the highest grade pure cane. Rolled exactingly to the proper thinness, Quaker Corn Flakes are toasted to a delicious crisp.

Only when you taste this New Quaker Flavour can you fully appreciate what a delight Corn Flakes can be. Tell your grocer to include Quaker Corn Flakes in your next order.

PREMIERS MAKE PEACE ADVANCE

Herriot Maintains French Defence of Treaty of Versailles—MacDonald Makes Concession.

ENTENTE STRONGER.

(By Webb Miller, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PARIS, July 10 (Canadian Press).—Edouard Herriot and Ramsay MacDonald, Socialist Premiers of France and Great Britain, succeeded after a day and a night of conversations in bringing about a Franco-British agreement on the experts' plan and the subject of reparations, which was hailed here to-day as a real move toward European peace.

The Briton made the most concession, going far toward surrendering his position that the experts' report goes beyond the Treaty of Versailles. But he saved the proposed Inter-Allied Conference, which will be held on 15th June as planned.

One thing the Premiers agreed upon heartily, and that was to make a concerted effort to have the United States name an official member of the Reparations Commission, and that the supervising director of reparations under the experts' plan should be an American.

The French press hails the agreement as solving difficulties which threatened the Anglo-French unity.

BURNBRAE WON ANOTHER GAME

Played a Good Game at the Rylstone Lawn Social—Burnbrae News.

BURNBRAE, July 10.—Burnbrae baseball team added another victory to their string at Rylstone lawn social on Tuesday evening. The final score was 9 to 4 in favour of the visitors, and as often before one big inning turned the trick. Broad, the speed artist from Springbrook, was master of the situation up to the fifth when lack of support got him in a bad hole and six runs crossed the plate before he got out. Swanzer who succeeded him in the box retired the heavy end of the Burnbrae batting order in a decisive manner. Eagleson on the mound for Burnbrae was in good form and although hit often kept them well scattered and had great control.

Hume caught a good game for Burnbrae and was the heavy scorer getting three runs in four times up. Haig at third starred with some good catches and snappy fielding.

A new player was brought out in the person of Rev. Mr. Daniels, who is the new pastor in charge of the Seymour circuit. The addition to being a splendid minister, Mr. Daniels is one of the best ball players seen around here in some time. He shone both in field and at bat, being robbed of a perfect average only by a good catch in centre field in the last inning.

The score as follows:

	R.	H.	E.
Burnbrae .....2 0 0 1 6 0—9	7	1
Rylstone .... 0 1 0 1 1 1—4	7	4

The teams:

Burnbrae—Eagleson, p; Rannie, 2b Haig, 3b; Hume, c; Craighead rf; Shillinglaw, 1b; Linn, cf; Hobbs, lf; Anderson, ss; Hay and Little subs.

Rylstone —C. Burkett, c and ss; G. Kerr, rf; M. Swanzer cf and p; W. Spencer, 2b; W. Dunk, lf; W. Bateman, 1b; C. Daniels, 3b; Ray Fry, ss and c; H. Broad p and cf.

Umpires— At plate, Geo. Donald. On bases, Thos. Fry.

A Big Success

The Rylstone lawn social on Mr. Spencers' lawn was a great success drawing a large crowd from all the surrounding country. The music was provided by the popular Spencer orchestra. The proceds at the gate were about $150.00.

Help the Crops

The showers of the past few days have helped the crops considerably but the grain is still short and will be a light crop unless more rain comes soon.

The farmers are now busy handling the rather belated hay crop which in most cases is exceeding expectations. One noticeable feature is the rapid increase in the acreage of alfalfa. All are realizing the value of this legume, as a hay or pasture crop as being superior to all others. Mr. Bert Hay of the seventh line has an excellent crop of alfalfa hay which will average well over two tons per acre.

Mr. Harvey Donald, who is a well known carpenter in this district, has been doing a rushing business this spring. He has had two carloads of roofing shipped in most of which is sold and a considerable amount already laid.

He has also built a number of milk houses, put up a new barn roof for Mr. Fred Bennett and this week is putting a new roof on Mr. Andrew Milne's barn. Whether this increase in building operations is a sign of good times for the farmers or the case of necessity is a matter of speculation.

Personals

Visitors at Burnbrae this week were Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Rannie and Miss Grace also Miss May Stewart all of Guelph, former residents of Menie.

Mr. Ernest Eagleson who has been seriously ill, has somewhat improved.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

THE MAGIC GARDEN

"This is my house—this is where I live."

Nancy and Nick, now no bigger than little mice since they had put on the magic shoes, hopped up on the widow-sill of their room beside Johnny Jump Up, the garden fairy.

"Now climb down the rose-vine," commanded the jolly little fellow.

So down they went in the moonlight, the three of them, and soon they came to the garden.

"This is my house—this is where I live," shouted Johnny Jump Up, running toward a large violet plant with big nodding purple violets.

And then suddenly the Twins noticed something very strange. The violet plant was in the shape of a house. Queer they had never noticed it before!

Suddenly a lot of tiny fairies that looked like Johnny Jump Up himself rushed out of the violet plants and began to tumble and jump about and do cartwheels and handsprings like tiny circus actors.

When they stopped tumbling, they crowded around the Twins. "Welcome to the magic garden," they cried. "Did you come to help scare the grub worms?"

"Certainly they didn't," declared Johnny Jump Up. "That's your job, you rascals. Now I'm going on a journey with my friends here, and before I come back I want you to have every rose-bug and cutworm and grub scared out of here. And if you see any strange fairies coming for rose-leaves for dresses, be sure that they only take one apiece. The moon's out so you won't need the lightning bugs to help you."

"All right," cried all the little garden fairies. "Goodby, boy and girl! We hope you have a nice time. Goodby."

"Goodby," called Nancy and Nick, but they couldn't wait to say another word, for with a couple of bounds Johnny Jump Up had reached the other side of the garden where a row of tulips stood in a stiff straight row like soldiers.

They were red and yellow and their gorgeous cups looked like gold with ruby wine spilled over.

"Why, they were only buds this morning!" said Nancy. "We looked at every one."

"Magic!" cried Johnny Jump Up. "Besides—"

Suddenly the eyes of the Twins grew as big as dollars, for a door in the big tulip nearest them slowly opened, and right before their astonished eyes stood a tiny fairy Dutchman.

He wore wooden shoes and loose blue trousers and a short coat and a little cap.

"Did you bring our tickets, Herr Haarlenspickler?" asked Johnny Jump Up, leaping nimbly up to a green leaf beside him.

"Goot efening, mein frents," said the little Dutchman, feeling in one of his enormous pockets. "Yes, I brought three tickets mit me. All you do is to call der titmouse and give him dese tickets and he'll ride you across the ocean to Holland quvicker dan a snail can yawn."

"Oh, are we going to Holland?" cried Nick.

"Dot same," nodded the Dutchman and even then Johnny Jump Up was blowing his cheeks up like apples, to whistle.

The titmouse flew down from a tree and all three hopped on his back.

DOCTORS HELD A CONFERENCE

Dr. T. J. Glover, the Discoverer of Cancer Cure, Was Highly Praised by His Fellow Physicians.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 10.—(Canadian Press).—Dr. T. J. Glover answered his critics last evening before a distinguished gathering of medical men and scientists from all parts of America and Canada, who met at the invitation of the Philadelphia Clinical Association at the Academy of National Science here. World-wide interest had been aroused through the announcement printed in the North American a few weeks ago that Dr. Glover had discovered the cause of cancer and treatment of carcinoma, which has brought a remarkable result. The Academy of Natural Science carries with it a great degree of authenticity and authority, as every paper read here is thoroughly investigated and censured in advance by a reputable committee.

Dr. Glover, in addition to the reading of his paper, fortified himself with a series of slides, which actually showed cancer germs and photographic reproductions of animals which were inoculated with cultures obtained from human carcinoma.

The final thrill of the evening was supplied by Doctors Loudon, McCormack and King, of St. Michael's Hospital of Toronto, of the faculty which had discredited Dr. Glover's early research efforts some three years ago, who read papers publicly vindicating him and praising his work.

FARM NEWS

GOAT BREEDING NEW DEPARTURE ON TWEED FARM

Mrs. Webber Makes Interesting Innovation in the District—Good Results.

FINANCIAL YEAR.

Goat's Milk is Appreciated For Its Medicinal Properties and Sweetness.

TWEED, July 10—Mrs. I. M. Webber has started a little goat farm, and because it is so unusual it is very interesting. One at once wonders why a goat farm should be started. Goats have always been regarded as the personification of evil and have been the butt of many jokes. Here are Mrs. Webber's reasons for having a goat farm. First: Goats will eat and find nourishment in food which cows would scorn. So it is cheaper from the standpoint of feed. Next, they are easily cared for. Children can feed and milk the goats. They do not require as mcuh space as cows. Last—and this is most important—goats are absolutely free from tuberculosis. Their milk is safe and, in addition, it has a medicinal quality which cow's milk lacks. A small baby will sometimes thrive on goat's milk when nothing else will agree with it.

Mrs. Webber has one billygoat, Sambo, four nannygoats and six kids. The milking goats each give two quarts of milk a day, and the milk is rich and pleasing to drink. Already one delicate baby near Tweed has been greatly helped by it.

The goats are on pasture and get the feed of oats a day.

Very Gentle.

They are very gentle and the little kids are very playful. It is well worth while to go to see them. Sambo is back with long grey whiskers. Little Napoleon is brown and, in addition,to a growing whiskers, has funny little curlings.

In Newfoundland, in country districts, everyone keeps goats. They are let out in the morning to wander all day, finding their own food. The rocky districts of Ontario should be ideal for goat farming. Goats will thrive on land which would not support cows.

MIXED FARMING GAINS

Progress Made in West Includes Pioneering in Butter Making Field.

WINNIPEG, July 10—At a gathering of loaning agents here, including bankers, discussion took place with reference to the improvement in mixed farming in the past few years. In this connection it is stated that great progress has been made in the art of butter making. In 1923, in the educational scoring contests, conducted by the federal government, Manitoba scored first place in five out of six months of the season, and also got the highest average score of the season.

This year the record of the prairie provinces promises to be equally satisfactory. In the month of May the first place was taken by the province of Saskatchewan. In this month this year Manitoba was second, Ontario third, New Brunswick fourth, Nova Scotia fifth, and Alberta sixth. No samples have been secured from the other three provinces.

TRENT RIVER, July 10.—Mr W. J. Redden, of the 14th concession, reports Fall wheat excellent and already grown to a great height. Potatoes are coming on fast, due to the showers which fell the past few days.

Strawberries are an abundant crop and great quantities are on the market, the price is two boxes for 25 cents. A gardener from Smithfield was through here Saturday selling at 10 boxes for $1.00.

DIVERSIFIED FARMING IS ATTRACTING FACTORIES

LETHBRIDGE, July 9.—A cheese factory at Coaldale and a sugar factory either at Lethbridge or Rayomnd, are likely new industries next year. The farmers of Coalsdale irrigates area have organized a co-operative cheese factory association and are now waiting for their charter. New herds of dairy cattle are being brought into the district in order to provide the plant with sufficient raw material. The acreage sieve for the sugar beet factory has been highly successful, the required 5,000 acres having been pledged. Sugar beet test plots are showing up beautifully and a good crop is expected. Officials of the Utah-Idaho Sugar Company are expected in August to select a site for the factory.

C.P.R. BUILDS BRANCH.

Will Open Up Northern Navigation Section Near Lethbridge Next Year.

LETHBRIDGE, July 10—Work will commence shortly on a branch line between Kipp station and the Little Bow River, a distance of 25 miles through the heart of the new Lethbridge northern irrigation district. This new C.P.R. extension will mean the opening of at least three towns. Surveyors are also running lines between Cardston and Pincher Creek, through the United Irrigation district. This road will probably be built next year.

Sheep Were Destroyed When Worried By Dogs

LINDSAY, July 10 (Special).—Reid Brothers, who conduct a farm at Reaboro had the misfortune to lose sixty-five Oxford Down sheep a few days ago. The animals had been placed on a thirty-acre farm near the shore of Sturgeon Lake, when they were worried by two dogs, the property of Lindsay men. The sheep were driven into the swamp and lake, and a number worried to death in the open.

WHEAT EFFECTS EXCHANGE RATE

Increased Buying by United States—Canada Returning to Gold Basis.

FLOW NORTHWARD.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Increased American buying of Canadian wheat, coupled with reports that Canada is shortly to place her currency of a gold basis, are believed to have been the chief factors in forcing the discount on the Canadian dollar in the United States below the one per cent. level during the past week.

There is some speculation among exchange operators regarding the possible effects of the resumption of specie payments in Canada. Most of those in a position to discuss the situation appear to believe that such a step on the part of the Department of Finance would put the Canadian dollar back at par in the United States permanently.

Beyond this change, however, it is not believed that any others of any great importance would occur. Owing to the plethora of funds in the United States and the low rate of interest prevailing in the American market, it is not likely that there would be any marked withdrawal of American funds from Canada. Recently even with the discount on the Canadian dollar standing at over one per cent. the flow of funds has been on the whole northward.

FLAX AND FODDERS BIG.

Crop Estimate to be Issued To-morrow Will Show increase in Flax.

OTTAWA, July 10—The first crop estimate issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics this year will not be out until July 10th. The lateness of the season makes it difficult to do definite forecasting. Unofficial estimates put the acreage under wheat this year at 19,224,900, a decrease of about 5 per cent. as compared with that of 1923. In Manitoba the decrease is placed at 20 per cent., in Saskatchewan at 7.7 per cent., but in Alberta an increase of 7.6 per cent. is reported.

An interesting feature is the increase in the acreage under flax, which is placed at 26 per cent. The acreage by provinces is as follows: Manitoba, 71,700 acres, increase 22½ per cent.; Saskatchewan 535,000a cres, increase 26.8 per cent.; Alberta 32,400 acres, increase 21.4 per cent. This increase in acreage for flax is attributed to the circumstance that the American investigating committee that reported this year on farming conditions in the Canadian West, said that flax was the best paying crop. Corn, sweet clover and other fodder crops show increased acreage as the result of greater interest in stock raising.

SUGAR BEET INDUSTRY.

Red River Valley Will Have New Freight Project in Good Location.

WINNIPEG, July 10—H. C. Miller, Denver, Col., proposes to build a sugar beet factory here. He has made a survey of the Red River Valley, and confirms the opinion of other experts, that the area is well adapted to the puspose, and that incalculable quantities of the needed beets can be profitably produced here. The erection of such a plant will have some effect on the necessary change in this province, from wheat growing to general agriculture. The by-products, molasses and beet pulp, are invaluable in the raising of cattle and hogs, and the tops are also fed to cattle. Red River valley land, he states, will produce from 10 to 15 tons of beets to the acre, and it is estimated that 6,000 to 8,000 acres have been planted this year.

SOWS DOWN IN THE BACK

Weakness of the Spine Necessitates a Mineral Ration.

What is more discouraging than to see a good brood sow which has just farrowed a litter of pigs, "go down in the back,"—that is, become so weak in the spine that she can not walk, much less take care of her litter.

The addition of about one-third pound of mineral matter (bonemeal and lime) to the ration has been found the best, and cheapest cure. Not only is it a cure but it is a preventive, if used for about two months previous to farrowing time. Mineral matter is required for the undeveloped pigs and unless an extra amount of bone-forming material is added to the sow's ration, she must draw upon her own system for the amount required, thus weakening her own bones. Consequently, the sow is weak and unable to take care of her litter.

In 1923 the United States imported 4,000,000 gallons of milk, 8,000,000 pounds of butter and 56,000,000 pounds cheese.

BUYING POWER OF FARMERS IS MUCH GREATER

Higher Price of Wheat Means Many Millions of Dollars Profit.

OUTLOOK BETTER.

Crops Are Late. But Are Making Satisfactory Progress.

TORONTO, July 10—Canada's outlook for an increased national income during the current year becomes better and better as the price of wheat continues to improve in the world markets. The materialization of present crop estimates would go a long way towards restoring prosperity, not only to the farmers of the West, but also to the country as a whole, particularly in view of the unfavorable condition of the wheat crop in other countries.

According to recent estimates, the acreage sown to wheat in Manitoba is 15 per cent. less than last year; Saskatchewan has sown about 2.3 per cent. less, while the Alberta acreage is as great or greater than that of 1923. A decrease of less than five per cent. in the three provinces is indicated, and this made up by larger acreage of flax, corn, sweet clover, and other fodder crops. With improved growing conditions, the yield, according to present indications, should be comparable with that of last year. Prices, however, are very much better. No. 1 Northern was quoted at $1.10 this time last year, while current quotations have reached $1.20. While it is impossible as yet to estimate anything in regard to grades, it may fairly be assumed that the range of prices has increased relatively with the increase in the price of No. 1 Northern, viz., 10 cents per bushel. Assuming on the basis of an acreage comparison alone, that this year's yield will be in the neighborhood of 441,000,000 bushels, the actual aggregate gain to the farmers of the West so far is more than $44,000,000.

Handsome Returns.

In the other leading grains also, a marked improvement in prices has taken place. Oats was 46 cents at the first of July, as against 43 at this time last year, and barley was around 70 cents, in comparison with 52 at the beginning of July, 1923. Rye is 78 cents, as against 63 last year. Flax alone shows a slight decrease. Without going into detail with regard to the probable yield of these grains, it is obvious that, assuming a crop anywhere near that of last year, the revenue from this source will show a handsome increase, and the importance of this to the country at large is too great to estimate.

The fact that increased prices do not increase the cost of production and represent net profit to the farmer makes the advance of the greatest importance. A ten cent increase in wheat will probably double the profits of a large number of farmers. This not only refers to the new crop, but the crop of last year, many millions of bushels of which are still to be marketed. The wool clip now being marketed is also bringing satisfactory prices, which will be reflected in increased buying power on the part of the farmer.

Conditions Good.

Crop reports continue to be of a generally satisfactory character, despite the unseasonable weather which has made growth backward in many sections of the country both East and West. Warm, growing weather is the general need, and late reports indicate that such weather has arrived in Western Canada—in fact, there are already fears that in parts of Alberta the crop may suffer from heat. Mail advices from this province indicate that the South is anticipating another bumper harvest, with the growth making good progress and plenty of moisture up to that time. A great deal of land in this province, however, was only disced, and hot weather would quickly affect growth. Telegraph advices from the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture, report the crops generally to be in a healthy condition, but somewhat late. General rains with good growing weather have greatly improved the crops in the Southern districts, but in the North more rain is needed. Corn in the Maple Creek district, where the acreage of this crop is the largest in Western Canada, is well advanced. Cut and wire worms and caterpillars have been doing some damage, but grasshoppers are not in evidence. Manitoba reports very satisfactory conditions generally, and in all three provinces the wheat is reported as being well rooted, generally well stooled, of good color, and in condition to make rapid advance with good growing weather.

In Eastern Canada growth is still late, but it has been catching up with more favorable weather. In Ontario fall wheat is looking well, with the fileds heading out nicely and straw of good length. More potatoes and turnips than usual have been out in some of the western counties, but the latter crop has not caught so well in seeding as mangels. Considerable buckwheat is being sown to take the place of other spring crops which were missed because of the wet spring.

LOCAL CROP REPORTS.

A Douro farmer reports the worst crop in eleven years. He has four hundred acres of land, and he says that much of the crop, especially the oats, will not be worth cutting. Sweet clover is poor, and he is inclined to stop growing sweet clover altogether.

Crops are looking fine in the Bethany district. Mr. Harry Smith has two fields of fall wheat which are a picture to look at—all blades even in length and long heads. Hay, which early in the season was predicted to be short, is now looked for to be a fair good yield. Hay is being mowed in a few cases.

"Chesley Gardens" Home Of The Kitney Family, Once A Tamarac Swamp

Forty years of strenuous, persevering toil supported by an unflagging optimism and by confidence in the future of this community, have gone into the making of "Chesley Gardens," comprising the homes and the property of Charles Kitney and his three sons—Frank, Fred and Ernest—in Ctonabee township, across the river from the Brinton Carpet Company's factory.

Thirty-nine years ago last April, to be exact, Mr. Kitney, newly come from England, bought nine acres of a tamarac swamp from Mr. N. T. de Laplante. Farmers farther down the road, on the higher and drier and seemingly more valuable land, smiled pityingly at this purchase. To them it was a worse than dubious venture.

"That poor Englishman," they sympathized, "has gone into that swamp, where you can float a canoe around all summer."

And so, in the security of their vantage ground, they sapiently shook their heads apparently expecting this Englishman to waste his labour and his time in the bush and bogs of his poor estate.

Had Surveyed It.

But Charles Kitney, then in the full vigour of his late thirties, had previously satisfied himself that the drainage of his property was not the insuperable difficulty his neighbors predicted. He had concluded that the removal of an old beavers' dam would draw off the deeper water. His immediate plan dispensed with the lake of his neighbors' doleful jests, and the first effects of his efforts bore out his estimate. On the drier ground the tamarac gradually yielded up more and more of the virgin soil as the axe cleared it.

More Property Bought.

Thus the senior Kitney started. Next he acquired seven adjoining acres. Later the broadening farm was more than doubled by the purchase of twenty acres, and finally two more were bought across the road, extending three hundred feet in depth down to the river.

And so evolved the general outlines of "Chesley Gardens" in the course of those forty years. The nine acres of despised swamp have been rolled back to thirty-nine acres, to-day one of the most valuable truck farms in this district. It is a suburban property, lying so close to the city that it may be regarded as almost an integral part of it—except by the city's assessor.

Like "Acres of Diamonds."

And, ironic as the acres of diamonds in the business fable moralizing the profitable results of spade work in field and factory, the cool springs that flooded the swamp, the beavers' pond and the unfailing depths for summer canoeing, which those sympathetic farmers had lamented, have proved the most valuable asset of "Chesley Gardens."

These springs have been harnessed for service, subjected to the requirements of the farm and the households, piped from a reservoir on the high ground along the eastern limit of the property direct to the houses, greenhouses and barns. "The stone that was rejected has been placed at the head of the corner."

Charles Kitney and his sons have turned to their own uses and profit one of nature's greatest gifts, diverted it into regular, controllable channels, and that which was regarded as an irremediable depreciation of the property has been converted into an invaluable utility.

Discovered Accidentally.

These springs were discovered by accident. It was a memorable boyhood experience which Frank Kitney vividly recalls. He was riding bareback on a horse through the thicket at the rear of the farm when he was thrown off, alighting on his feet and sinking into the soft, black earth. He observed the holes he had made in his fall slowly fill with water, and he told his father he believed there was a spring nearby. Examination revealed a group of springs, and that place to-day is the site of the farm's main reservoir.

It consists of a bottomless steel tank, seven feet in diameter and roofed with wood. The water boils up from the earth, and is carried off by a three-inch pipe, which is reduced to two inches in its subterannean course across the farm. Gravity gives it sufficient force for all purposes, outdoors and in.

Ended Pumping Toil.

One of the first rewards of this convenience was the elimination of the monotonous job of pumping water up into a tank for sprinkling the plants in the greenhouse and in the outside beds. This task had devolved upon Frank Kitney as the eldest son, but his tumble from the horse and his keen sense of observation of a natural phenomenon fortuitously severed his irksome relations with the pump.

Meanwhile the father was struggling on, trying to reduce the saturation of his soil, to clear away the tamarac and underbrush and prepare the land for cultivaton. In the beginning he was employed at James Rose's brickyard, and most of his work around his home was done in the evenings. He wasn't a first settler, but he was nonetheless a pioneer. He had arrived from England with his wife and two children and the sum of ten dollars. For six years he remained at the brickyard, and finally, in 1888, he sold his first garden produce launching the business that now engages his three sons.

Greenhouse Burned.

In his fourth year on the retreating swamp, Mr. Kitney built a greenhouse, but it was destroyed by fire before yielding its first plants. That loss was a sharp setback, an early but only temporary reverse. Incidentally, it served to cement the friendly relations that had existed between Mr. Kitney and Mr. de Laplante. The latter promptly offered any assistance that might be needed. The two men, now grown old, went down the years to prosperity, preserving the friendship they had formed in the remote and forgotten eighties.

Now seventy-six, Mr. Kitney still works about the farm that bears the name of his native parish in England. The sons carry the load, but the father is as interested as ever in his glorified swamp. About his own home there is an unmistakably English atmosphere in the masses of flowers, foxgloves, Canterbury Bells, Sweet William, petunias, snapdragons, the cedar hedge and grassy paths, the rose bush he brought with him from his last trip to the Old Country. There seems to be an innate love of the soil and especially of flowers in the nature of Kentish men. The garden of England perhaps breeds into then this characteristic, or's it may be the indelible stamp upon them of the Spring fields of crocus hyacinth and primrose.

Strawberry Time.

Of the approximately thirty-nine acres found up in "Chesley Gardens," eighteen are devoted to the growing of vegetables and garden fruits. Just now the strawberry department is running overtime with an excellent crop, producing a thousand or more boxes a day. In the fields adjacent to the bread berry patch, is growth and fruition in the well-ordered rows Rhubarb has been crowded off the stage by the vitaminic leafy vegetables. Early cabbages are moving out to market, and the first planted celery is ready for pulling. Onions, lettuce, carrots and beets, make a rich and inviting showing in their straight full rows with rarely a weed cropping up where hoes and cultivators have passed.

Tomatoes and cabbages, among other vegetables, were started in the 9,000 square feet of greenhouses, where a few days ago only Swiss chard and March-planted tomatoes remain with a few odds and ends of flowers and the last of the indoor rhubarb. The tomato vines, trained to tall stakes, are loaded with fruit that has been ripening these three weeks for Peterboro consumers.

Increase Glass Area.

The greenhouses will be enlarged this autumn by 2,000 square feet making a total of 11,000 square feet of glass. The annex will be an extension, of a modern type Lord and Burnham greenhouse, forty feet wide, seventeen feet from floor to gable, and seven feet high along the side walls.

"Plants, like persons, need plenty of air," said Mr. Frank Kitney, explaining the advantages of the spacious interior. The larger volume of air retains warmth longer, and the higher sides lift the glass of the roof farther above the beds of growing plants, a desirable feature when the exterior air may be registered around zero.

Two boilers heat the greenhouses. The water system depends upon the springs on the uplands on the far side of the farm, and the electric power for lighting and labor saving is obtained from the city.

Rotation of Crops.

The economic rotation of crops is the chief problem at "Chesley Gardens." Operations are confined mostly to the outdoors during summer, but August will bring the first planting inside. Radishes, parsley, lettuce, tomatoes and other vegetables are started then. Meanwhile, benches have been refilled with fresh earth and prepared for the new greenhouse that runs around the seasons from late August until the end of June. The "Chesley Gardens" tomatoes that sold in Peterboro last Christmas were a luxury that dimmed the savor of the cranberry and its background of turkey. They were perfect specimens, and while the price had soared far above the September mark, those Christmas hothouse tomatoes were worth the money. By the way, they were home-grown, and the winter product of the once derided tamarac swamp.

Potential Real Estate.

The field across the road has been broken to garden purposes for the first time this year. Formerly it had been part of the eighteen acres of farm land. Part of it is still sown in buckwheat, but the rest is in tomatoes, potatoes, turnips and corn. Some day, and probably not far distant, this land will be built up with homes similar to those farther down the road and opposite H. B. Rye's boathouse. With a depth of one hundred yards from the road to the river, the house lots should have a deep frontage with a stretch of garden or lawn sloping down to the river. Mr. Kitney said that the property might be divided by a road down the centre cutting the depth of the lots in half but doubling the number of lots. However, his preference is to offer them with the roomier ground space. There are six acres in this field whose real estate values are so obvious that the lots could be sold readily enough now if the property were subdivided. That, however, is a disposition that will stand for awhile. In the meantime the land is contributing its share of the garden produce grown in "Chesley Gardens."

KEEP MONEY WORKING.

The principle of keeping all money working at all times has been the policy of many big men of finance and industry. The late F. W. Woolworth was one of these. Of his $30,000,000 estate little over 1 per cent. was in cash when he died. Later his wife died and soon the inheritance tax will be due. The recent sale of the Woolworth building in New York for $11,000,000 was necessary to provide the necessary funds.

LARGER LAMB CROP.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—A larger lamb crop than last year's is foresee in reports from the native sheep areas the increase in the corn belt more than offsetting a decrease in Kentucky and Tennessee. General rains in the dry areas west of the Mississippi and warmer weather over the corn belt, it is believed, will improve pastures considerably.

Last year the per capita consumption of fluid milk was 53 gallons.

WHEAT RUST IS WORST DISEASE OF CROPS HERE

Department of Agriculture is Taking Steps to Combat and Control It.

MANY EXPERTS.

Convention Arranged to Bring Out All Facts Connected With Rust.

OTTAWA, Ont, July 10 (By Canadian Press).—It has for some time been the desire of the Department of Agriculture and the Research Council of Canada to arrange a conference of all the workers on wheat rust in Canada to discuss the problem from different angles, to review progress and to work out plans for future effort looking toward the control of this, the most serious plant disease affecting Canadian crops.

Decided progress was made along this line when Dr. M. W. Tory, Chairman of the Research Council and Dr. J. H. Grisdale, deputy minister of agriculture, met in the office of the latter at Ottawa and made arrangements for a conference to be held in Winnipeg, Sept. 9 and 10, 1924, under the joint auspices of the Research Council of Canada and the Federal department of Agriculture. It was agreed that the following should be invited to take part in this conference, and to contribute what they could to the solution of the rust problem.

Dr. J. H. Grisdale, deputy minister of agriculture, Ottawa; E. S. Archibald, Director of Experimental Farms, Ottawa; H. T. Gussow, Dominion Botanist, Ottawa; L. H. Newman, Dominion Cerealist, Ottawa; W. P. Fraser, D. L. Bailey and I. L. Conners, plant pathologists at Saskatoon, Winnipeg and Brandon respectively, and W. C. McKillican and W. K. Leslie, superintendents of the experimental farms at Brandon and Morden, Man. These will represent the Federal Department of Agriculture. Dr. H. M. Tory, chairman, research council of Canada; Dr. W. P. Thompson, University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon; Robert Newton, University of Alberta, Edmonton; Dr. A. H. R. Buller, and H. F. Roberts, both of the University of Manitoba at Winnipeg, will also attend the conference.

United States experts have also been invited, including Professors E. C. Stakman, University of Minnesota, H. L. Bolley, University of North Dakota, and L. R. Jones, University of Wisconsin.

A permanent committee to have charge of rust research was also named at the meeting mentioned above, and this committee will carry on with renewed vigor and more extensively than ever before the research work on this problem in western Canada. The committee is composed of Dr. H. M. Tory, Dr. W. P. Thompson, Dr. A. H. R. Buller, and Robert Newton, of the Research Council; and Dr. J. H. Grisdale, E. S. Archibald, H. T. Gussow, W. P. Fraser, and D. L. Bailey, named by the Federal Department of Agriculture.

It is anticipated that at the convention such information will be brought out as will enable the combined forces of the Research Council and the Dominion Department of Agriculture to make real progress looking toward the elimination of this exceedingly serious menace to wheat production in Canada.

POLITICAL GRAFT 20,000 YEARS AGO

Bill Granite Charged the Public Four Bucks a Rock on County Road Work.

(Editorial from the Hard Rock Daily.)

The exposures of the good roads graft is shaking out Neolithic world to its very foundations. The very idea of Bill Granite charging the public treasury four bucks per rock and paying flint choppers three oozumas per day! Such extravagance is unheard of in this day and time!

When these contracts were up for bidding, the highest quarry company listed the smoothest rocks at only one and six bits of agate each and placed wages at a half oozuma per day. How Bill Granite ever closed the contract is a mystery, but from present developments we venture to say that some slick bird is grabbing from the public treasury.

While Bill claims that the stone quarries have formed a monopoly on rocks and chased the price up a tree, and that the United Order of Flint Trimmers have adopted a new scale of wages and are ready to demand more, we haven't had any evidence of this. Secrettry of State Ug Mug has sworn under oath that the rock his wife threw at him the other day cost only two bits, and surely if our wives can buy rocks at such a price retail the state ought to be able to buy them at a great reduction wholesale.

What we need in this state is a general political housecleaning and the time to start is now. A grand jury is to be called to investigate Bill Granite's methods of doing business and if Bill is double crossing the people of this great commonwealth, it is time to shut him up in a cave.

BIG TIMBER CUT IN B. C.

NELSON, July 9.—The 1924 cut of the East Kootenay Forestry District gives promist of running to a grand total of 150,000,000 feet. While the lumber demand is light, there is a brisk business in poles of longer lengths and in railway ties, and a cut of from 1,000,000 sawn ties and the usual quantity of the hewn variety is looked for, with a probable value of the year's cut totalling around $750,000.

The American potato bug has gone through France and now threaten Germany.

TO AID N.S. FARM IMPROVEMENT

Province Prepares Fertilizer to Increase Productiveness of Land.

HALT EXODUS.

SYDNEY, July 10—In an effort to stimulate agriculture in Cape Breton and halt the alarming exodus from the farms, the provincial government has established at Point Edward, near Sydney, a limestone crushing plant with a capacity of 20,000 tons of lime dust a year. The province has purchased at a nominal figure, 500,000 tons of broken limestone now stacked at the Besco quarries nearby, and this will be ground to powder and retailed to the farmers at less than $2 a ton. The soil of Nova Scotia is very "sour" and the applicatiou of limestone is to neutralize the acidity of the land. It is estimated that by this means its productiveness can be increased by from 25 to 40 per cent., thus making all the difference between profitable and unprofitable farming.

KANSAS KARAKUL IS NEW PRODUCT

Famous Persian Fur is Obtained From a Domestic Breed.

TOPEKA, Kas., July 10.—Persian lambs are being reared successfully in this country for their valuable fur.

Karakul, winter covering for the elite in fashion, may now be obtained from the 2000-acre Kansas ranch of L. M. Crawford, instead of the faraway market of Bokhara, in Central Asia.

In 1914, when the world war curtailed foreign trade, Crawford got the idea of starting his unique sheep ranch. He invested $50,000 in the venture, so that he, too, might obtain the tightly curled, lustrous black fleece of the Persian lamb.

Crosses Stock.

He imported 35 Karakul sheep from Bokhara, 20 rams and 15 ewes. These he crossed with native Lincoln and Cotswold sheep, and the lambs of this cross bear the valuable fur.

Nearly 1000 lambs bearing these pelts, which are valued at from $10 to $50 apiece, were born on the Kansafurff fur farm this year. Bundles of pelts in lots of fifty, worth more than $1000 a bundle, have been shipped to the New York markets.

Only the lambs that died, however, are being sold for fur. The rest will be kept until grown and sold for breeding animals.

Pure-bred Karakul rams now command $2500 to $5000 each, while the half-bloods sell for about $500.

Hardier Sheep.

Crawford's pioneering may put added impetus into breeding of a hardier sheep in this country. He points out that if American farmers could introduce some Karakul blood into their sheep, it would repay them manifold in hardiness and finer mutton qualities of the cross products.

Crossing Karakuls with native sheep, he says, results in an increase in weight, sometimes as much as 50 per cent. Another result is the elimination of the woolly or musk-like flavor objectionable to many persons who, for this reason alone, refuse to eat mutton.

The imported sheep thrive well in this country, says Crawford, because they are a hardier breed than the natives.

Egypt has planted about 10 per cent more cotton this year than lasto a total of 1,800,000 acres.

GROWTH RAPID OVER PRAIRIE IN LAST WEEK

Extreme Heat Has Been Trying to Crop But Good Root Developed.

LATER THIS YEAR.

Some Districts Have Grain Headed Out at Height of One Foot.

WINNIPEG, July 10 (Canadian Press) Growth of all crops throughout the prairie provinces has been rapid during the past week and all except late sown wheat is in shot blade, while some of earliest is showing signs of coming into head, according to the weekly crop report issued by the Agricultural Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The extreme heat, the report states, has been trying to the crops, but excellent root had developed during the prolonged cool spring which is enabling grain to stand up well. Large sections of Alberta and Saskatchewan experienced good rains during the week, but rain is urgently needed in Manitoba. In the latter province a good rain will greatly stimulate the prospects of a bumper crop. At the present time summer fallows particularly are looking fine, but fall and spring plowed lands generally speaking require further moisture. All crops in Manitoba are later than last year and will have to show unusual development to be ready for harvest at as early a date.

In Saskatchewan great improvement is shown in the condition of the crops as a result of better growing weather. Some of the early sown wheat is coming into head and is from twenty-four to thirty inches in height. While rain has fallen in scattered parts of the province, more is needed. Forest tent caterpillars are doing heavy damage to trees in the southeastern portion of Saskatchewan, the report says.

With the exception of the northeastern section of Alberta where moisture is required, the crop outlook in that province continues favorable. All wheat is in shot blade and considerable of the early sown is coming into head. Oats and barley are also well advanced. Cutting of alfalfa has commenced in several districts and good crops are being reported.

Weather conditions are dry and hot in the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway district and crops at most points are suffering from lack of moisture. Wheat in the Westlock district is seeding out but is only nine or ten inches high. Rain is needed at all points.

Rain is also needed in many districts in British Columbia. Fruit trees, however, are healthy and may possibly make up in size for shrinkage in numbers. Cherry picking is well advanced although the crop is somewhat light. Strawberries have passed the peak, while raspberries are now moving in full volume.

OUTLOOK BRIGHTER

Cobourg Crop Prospects Are Promising—Spring Sowing Good.

COBOURG, July 10—Crop prospects are reported now to be promising in this district. The spring sown grain is coming on well, and the root crop has now taken a good start. Some of the clover is not looking as well as was expected, but the hay crop generally will be fair. Hot weather is needed to bring on the corn and fodder crops. The market gardeners are bringing in the fruits of their labors now in great abundance, and their gardens are producing well.

Cobourg, July 5 (Special).Strawberries are a big crop in this district, and are selling retail in the stores at 10c a box, with prospects of going lower still. In some cases they are being offered at three boxes for 25c.

The story thus far:

When John Collinge died, he left behind him his adopted daughter, Wanda Griffin, a headstrong, passionate and overbearing girl, and his son Paul... with whom he had quarreled, and who had gone abroad. After the death, Paul comes home for the reading of the will, and to Wanda's surprise she finds she is disinherited, and that he is the heir. Paul dislikes Wanda intensely because of her behavior, and tells her that she must leave the house immediately; she refuses and, in order to stay there, pretends to be ill. At last matters reach a crisis, and Paul orders Wanda out of the house. She goes up to London with Mrs. Garnet, her one friend, with whom she is to live. The day after Wanda arrives Clare's brother, Harry, the black sheep of the family, arrives unexpectedly. After a week Harry asks Wanda to marry him, but she refuses.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT.

XXIII—I MISSED YOU.

They walked some little distance in silence, till Courtney said again: "So you won't even consider my offer."

She raised startled eyes.

"You are not as serious as all that?"

"Indeed I am, for once in my life. If you—if I thought you cared anything for me, or ever could, I believe I could pull myself together and make something out of life yet. I know it must seem like presumption to ask you, but from the moment I saw you that morning on the steps——" he broke off. "Of course, there isn't a chance for me?"

She tried to answer as kindly as possible that she did not care for him, that she had never thought of him as anything but a friend.

"I should lead you a dreadful life—my temper is awful."

"I've not seen any sign of it."

She hesitated. "Well, you don't aggravate me as—as Paul used to," she said at last.

"Isn't that a good sign?" he urged eagerly. "Doesn't it mean that we should get on well together always?"

"I don't know—oh, please say no more," she broke out in distress as he would have gone on pleading. "Let's just be good friends—"

"Very well; but you can't forbid me to hope, and I shall go on hoping till some other chap has got you."

She laughed. "That will be a long time, then."

They were back at the flat now, and Wanda ran up the tseps with a feeling of relief. She liked Harry Courtney, he amused her and kept her from being bored, but beyond that her thoughts had never travelled; she did wonder, however, what sort of woman his wife had been.

"I should hate to marry a divorced man, anyway," she told herself as she opened the door of Clare's drawing-room and saw Paul Collinge sitting there in one of the armchairs.

Wanda stopped dead on the threshold, the color mounting to her face. At sight of him her old feeling of anger and irritation came surging back.

Why had he come? He looked much too large for the small room, and as he moved to come forward and greet her knocked over a foolish little table with silver trinkets.

Clare gave a little scream.

"This flat was never meant for giants. Oh, no, please, don't bother; I'll pick them up."

Paul went down on his knees.

"Allow me to repair the damag I have done," he said, with mock humility. "What's the use of all these gimcracks, anyway?"

"How frightfully rude!" said Wanda. The old feeling that she must quarrel with him had risen in her heart.

She refused tea and took the chair which Paul had left.

Clare introduced the two men.

"You must be friends," she said rather nervously, fully realizing that such a thing was not possible. Paul was not at all of the type of man with whom Harry would ever agree.

"How long have you been here?" Wanda asked bluntly.

Paul looked at her with cool eyes.

"I came by the train I said I would," he answered. "I reached this flat about three."

Wanda turned to Clare. "You knew he was coming, then?"

Clare looked uncomfortable.

"I did, dear, yes; but it quite slipped my mind, or of course I should have told you."

Wanda looked resentful, but she managed to laugh.

"You see," she told Paul unkindly, "you're not important enough to be remembered."

"Apparently," he said, undisturbed.

Tomorrow—Jealous.

REFUSED TO ATTEND COURT

Provincial Officer Arrests Coe Hill Resident.

Provincial Constable N. F. Maker journey to Coe Hill yesterday and arrested a young man, who some time ago was released on suspended sentence at the conclusion of his trial on a charge of seducing his sister-in-law, a young unmarried girl.

He was liberated conditional upon his appearance before His Honor Judge Huycke to comply with His Honours' order providing for the maintenance of the child.

The mother of the child, through her solicitor Mr. J. F. Strickland, made application under "The Children of Unmarried Parents' Act" for a Court Order after the birth of the child.

Upon being summoned to attend before Judge Huycke, the defendant refused to appear, thus a warrant was issued for his arrest, which was executed by Constable Maker, yesterday.

EATING HOUSE LICENSES REQUIRED FOR SATURDAY

Inspector James Reid Issues a Warning to Those Conducting Booths.

Every person who intends to conduct a booth on Saturday had better make sure they have complied with the city by-law respecting eating-house licenses.

Anyone who sells soft drinks, chocolate bars or ice cream will be required to make an application to the City Clerk for an eating house license and have their premises inspected by the Sanitary Inspector. Then, if the permit is granted, they will be legally entitled to sell on payment of $5.

Some are under the erroneous impression that an eating house license is not required to sell hot dogs and the like over a counter, and in the regime of Chief Daniel Thompson on the occasion of the last Orange walk held in Peterboro, many were served with summonses who held that idea.

Inspector James Reid, acting Chief of Police, hopes that it will not be necessary to hail anyone into court on Saturday who fail to purchase a license through ignorance of the city ordinance. He also wishes it to be known that anyone desiring to sell cigarettes will require to purchase a license at a cost of $20.

MEDICAL DOCTOR'S REPORT REVEALS ALARMING DATA

Many Children Suffering From Serious Physical Disabilities.

Diphthedia Inoculation.

Believes Backward Children Should Receive Mental Examination.

Dr. A. W. MacPherson's annual report will disclose a most unusual state of affairs to those who are ignorant of the comparative results of school medical reports.

It will be a surprise to many to learn that a substantial percentage of the children in Peterboro public schools are suffering from major defects, such as goitre, malnutrition, defective vision and other physical disabilities.

The annual report of Dr. F. C. Green, school dental inspector, also reveals extraordinary data.

In 1923, on the first survey made by him 96.6 per cent of the children required dental treatment.

The report of Miss M. J. Jory, the school nurse, explains that it was necessary to exclude 343 children from school for infection, uncleanness and pediculi during the past year.

These three reports reveal an alarming condition in the health of the younger generation, and are valuable from an educational point of view. They would probably prove an incentive to parents to learn more of the health of their childre:

School Medical Officer's Report.

To the Chairman and Members of the Peterboro Board of Education, Madam and Gentlemen: I beg to submit a short review of the work of the Medical Officer for the past year:

Physical Examinations.

Number of children examined....2180
No. having one or more major defects for which a defect slip was sent to parents 892

Classification of Defects.

Enlarked tonsils and adenoids .. 386
Defective teeth 597
Defective vision 131
Enlarged thyroid or goitre 43
Malnutrition 32

In regard to enlarged tonsils, I would like to say that I classify the enlargement as slight, medium and large, and these 386 all fall in the last class, and a great many cases have been so graded year after year.

Defective slips are not sent out for teeth except in cases where permanent teeth are affected. Thir report shows that over 25 per cent. of the children examined have permanent teeth affected and requiring attention.

Mentally Deficient.

There is another point that I would like to draw particular attention to, and that is, the number of children (boys and girls) that are from two to five years behind the grade they should be in, in accordance to their age.

In the great majority of cases it is not due to any physical impairment. It seems to me that these pupils should be checked up to see why they are below their grade, and one of the reports should be in regard to their mental condition.

Inoculation against Diphtheria

During the months of January, February and March, my time was taken up with the Schick test and inoculations against diphtheria. Five hundred children were tested out and inoculated.

I feel that Peterboro is very fortunate in having made this progress and I hope that during the coming year as much more will be done.

During the year there has been but little interference in school attendance on account of epidemics of any type.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A. W. MacPHERSON.
Medical Officer.

School Nurse's Report for Year ending June 30, 1924.

No. pupils given regular class room examination 2000
No. reviewed 609
No. pupils excluded from school
For uncleanliness (clothing or body 103
For pidiculi 87
For rash or infection 153
No. calls made during year 310

These calls were made in connection with the follow-up work in the schools to consult with parents regarding the physical condition of their children. The parents are as a general rule very willing to co-operate as far as they possibly can.

PUT OUT FLAGS ON THE TWELFTH

Orangemen Request a Little Color For Their Annual Celebrtion Saturday.

Saturday of this week the Orange men of the City are holding the Annual 12th of July celebration assisted by many hundreds of visitors from Central Ontario. The citizens of Peterborough in the past have been a little backward in displaying bunting from their homes and places of business.

The Committee would consider it a great favor if their Fellow Citizens would lend a little color to the Day's activities and assure them that any help along the above lines would be greatly appreciated.

KILTIES RENDERED SPLENDID CONCERT

Huge Crowd Enjoyed the Piping, Dancing and Singing.

A very large and appreciative audience heard the Caledonian Pipe Band (Kilties) last evening, in one of their concerts at Victoria Park.

From the beginning to the end there were no dull moments, and the full band under Pipe-Major J. Smith, played a number of new selections that received great applause.

Mr. Robert Hendry, in one of his characteristic Scots characters delighted his hearers with "Summer Time and Saturday Night." By special request Robt. Hendry and John Smith sang "Wee Hoose Amang the Heather."

The band inaugurated a vey excellent idea when they decided that one of their clever and versatile pipers, Sam Thomson, should make his public debut in full Highland costume, dance the "Highland Fling," and danced again as an encore.

Peterboro's well known favorite, Jack Smith, was heard to advantage in "Cameron Men" and "Mary of Argyle."

During the evening, Piper Alex. Milne played a march, "Athole Highlanders' March to Loch Katrine," Stratspey "Maggie Cameron" and a reel, "Miss McLeod," and as an encore played "Portrel Bay." He also played all the tunes to the dancers.

A pretty little small tot, Miss Isabel Thomson, made a very creditable attraction in her "Sword Dance," and had to respond to an encore by dancng the "Irish Reel."

The Kilties desire to thank the public in general for such an excellent attendance also Miss Muriel Bridge, accompanist, and to Heintzman & Co., who kindly loaned the piano.

LONDON, July 10 (Canadian Press Cable). — Prime Minister MacDonald declared to-day in the House of Commons that he had made his trip to Paris in order to remove an unfortunate publication, which had threatened to destroy the work which had been done to make possible the holding in London on 16th July of an Inter-Allied Conference on the Dawes report.

HUM HOY FOUND OLD HOME TOWN, CANTON, BIGGER

City of Nearly Four Millions Has Large English-Speaking Colony in Business.

VISITED HIS FATHER.

Hum W. Hoy, co-partner with Hum Sam in the proprietorship of the Paris Cafe, has returned from China, where he spent the last two years, most of the time at the home of his father.

He made the journey by way of Vancouver and Hong Kong, was twenty days on the water on each trip, and greatly enjoyed the voyage to his native land.

"I saw a lot of changes in my home town, Canton," said Hum Hoy. "It was a big city when I left it the first time, and it has now nearly four million people, with paved streets, street cars, big buildings, eight and ten storeys high, just like the cities of America and England. It was about a three-hour ride on the train from Hong Kong to Canton, and there I met my father. My mother is dead. Canton, Hong Kong, and Shanghai are big busy cities. Lots of business there. They are seaports and the imports make them busy places. There are lots of your people there—Englishmen, Canadians, and Americans. They are traders, and they have companies where things are made. But they take Chinese names, just like we call our restaurant the Paris."

Hum Hoy said that the Chinese are greatly interested in learning English. The language is taught in the High Schools by English speaking teachers, most of them foreigners from Great Britain or the United States.

The schools, he says, are large and the people of these three cities are eager to learn. Canadians visiting those cities would find themselves very much at home because of the presence of so many English-speaking whites and also by reason of the fact that many Chinese can speak English.

Hum Hoy mentioned some of the articles that are imported into China in great quantities from Germany, America, and Great Britain, and said that automobiles are all imported, largely from the United States.

Gates Saves Dog From Execution

Homeless Fox Terrier Gets New Lease of Life and Comfortable Lodgings.

Let it not be thought that James Gates, official dog catcher, and sometimes executioner, is driven by any desire to exterminate homeless mongrels or to cause unnecessary trouble for those which are abroad with or without tags. An illuminating little incident should confound those who in their love of dogs may regard the inspector as a rather odious person. For instance, the gentlemen who are organizing the dog show for this year's Exhibition are not likely to be inclined to invite Mr. Gates to assist in their scheme.

However, the official catcher's attitude toward dogs should not be viewed solely from the fact that he has started a few of the surplus and friendless canines on their way to the happy hunting ground before they had run the full course of a dog's life.

Yesterday Gates was observed leading a little fox terrier on a chain from Ashburnham. It was a pretty little animal, frolicsome and friendly. A brown spot over one eye was one of the few markings on its otherwise white body. Instead of taking the dog down to the incinerator the D. C. led it up to Sanitary Inspector Stapleton's office.

"Do you know any one who would take care of this terrier?" Mr. Gates enquired, as the dog leaped up in play around him. "I got him over on Driscoll Terrace. He had been wandering around there all week and no one claimed him. If I take him down to the incinerator for the police to shoot him I would collect a dollar, and he ought to be worth that to any person who wants a nice dog."

Mr. Stapleton directed Gates to a home out towards Jackson Park. The dollar he expected to get was earned by the effort he made to save the dog from a bullet. "If I kept all those I like I'd have a yard full," he said, and started off to the west end, saying, "Come on, pup, we've got a decent home for you."

AGRICULTURAL DEPRESSION IS AT ITS HEIGHT

A Round-Table Conference Has Been Suggested by the Agricultural Committee.

SHIPPING HIGH.

TORONTO, July 10. —(Canadian Press).—To devise means of overcoming present agricultural depression, round-table conference between all interests has been suggested by Ontario agricultural inquiry committee, which has recently conducted investigations throughout this province.

To be held during the approaching Canadian National Exhibition, conference will serve it is hoped, to discover best methods of overcoming those unfavorable conditions which in opinion of the committee are doing much to prevent the proper expansion of agriculture in Ontario. Invitations will be sent out by Government to all representative interests and it is expected that the conference will not only bring together the leading men in all fields of endeavor but will be productive of some definite and practicable scheme. Following the sittings held in many centres of Ontario, committee has arrived at finding that cost of transportation is perhaps greatest obstacle to agriculture recovery, and it is expected that some means of assistance through utilization of railways may be devised.

HOTEL SCRIBE SALE ADVISED

By Special Committee of Commons Whose Report Was Submitted To-day.

ESTIMATE APPROVED.

OTTAWA, July 10.—(Canadian Press.)— The special committee of the House which has been investigating the Canadian National Railway estimates, submitted its final report this afternoon.

The report recommends that Hotel Scribe, the property purchased by the Canadian National in Paris might be sold, "if it can be done advantageously and adequate quarters for the Canadian National retained." That acquistion or sale of property for railway purposes involving large sums of money ought not to be possible except by authority of an order in council; that the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific be invited to consider means of avoiding unnecessary duplication and competition; that the Government should give early consideration to a reduction in the capitalization of the Canadian National, the committee being of the view that the capital sum upon which interest charges are now computed in making up the annual income statements is excessive; that the estimate of $66,000,000 for the Canadian National now before the House be granted.

On Hotel Scribe, the report points out that the evidence given before the committee the price paid was not in excess of the value of the property and that rental values in that section of Paris are increasing.

To Study Taxation.

The Government Bill to create an Advisory Board to investigate and study various modes of taxation gave rise to some sharp discussion in the House.

The Bill also transfers the administration of business profits tax and income tax from the Finance to the Customs Department.

Progress was reported from the Committee of the Whole.

R. A. Hoey (Progressive, Springfield) was opposed to the new board. If this board, said Mr. Hoey, could study tariff schedules and determine the best method to make a tariff reduction without disturbing business, it might be of some value.

Sir Henry Drayton remarked that a time when jobs ought to be reduced, the Government were creating new ones. It was proposed to establish two definite sets of experts, one to tell the Minister of Customs what to do, and the other to tell the Minister of Finance.

Robert Forke, Progressive leader, said that after the board had been at work for a year a better opinion could be formed as to whether it was an economy or otherwise.

Hon. H. H. Stevens (Conservative, Centre Vancouver) described the board as "another Royal Commission."

MR. F. TUGGEY GIVES $5.00.

A very quick response to the appeal made by The Examiner last evening, asking a couple of citizens to donate the sum of $5.00 each to buy some 20 loads of sand for the beach for the children at the swimming and wading pool in Jackson Park, was received from at least one public-spirited citizen this morning, when Mr. Fred Tuggey, who tries, to the best of his ability, to help out everything of this nature, sent in $5.00 for the cause.

CHURCH UNION BEFORE SENATE

Bill Was Changed So That Congregations Could Enter Union or Not.

OTTAWA, July 10. — (Canadian Press).—Church union came before the Senate last night, on the second reading of the bill Senator Robertson said that the bill had been changed, so that absolute freedom was left to congregations to enter the union or not and rights of congregations to their property or their share of general property of Presbyterian Church were safeguarded, terms of present union bill were more liberal than those in any measure of similar character. He believed the country would be better served with united church rather than by divided effort of these three Protestant bodies, Senator Roach, Halifax, objected to "United Church of Canada" and thought it ought to be United Churches of Canada.' He thought that there should not be slightest compulsion in forming this union, Hon. Dr. Reid said that his own Presbyterian Church was against Union, and he believed majority of Presbyterians were also, he urged Senate not to give effect to this bill hastily.

The Rebel leaders are said to desire the annexation of Brazil, although the movement has no support or sympathy in the latter country.

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressive, burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excess development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and neutralize the acid, and make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness, or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments, and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An anticaid, such as Bisurated Magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestents. Magnesia comes in several forms, so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia, which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

The Pagan's Vengeance

—By John Russell

ILLUSTRATED BY HUBERT MATHIEU

How Deep Is the Pagan Nature of a Half Caste and How Strong Is the White Part of Him —This Question Has a Dramatic Answer in the Tense Story of the Half Samoan Henry Shoesmith.

"With a snarl he drove at Henry's throat."

IT may be that some men can hold hatred in their hearts like a secret spring in a rock; that they actually do carry out feud and grievance and retributive vengeance after many years. But the men must be men of sour and bitter strain—very different from Henry of Vitongo. He grew up under the shadow of an unsatisfied wrong without once swearing a vendetta or taking a blood oath.

Henry was half Samoan — the gentlest, most tolerant and peaceable stock in all the jumbled chemistry of this world. And Henry himself was the laziest, most helplessly easy-going and unconsidering youngster that ever drowsed and dreamed and played away the hours on the fringe of a jeweled beach. He had no hatred, only sunshine and laughter in his heart. Henry of Vitongo.

That was not all his name, of course. He had inherited the estate and the lawful designation of his father.

In the garden of the ramshackle, jig-saw homestead—imported piecemeal from Australia—stood a weather-beaten marble tomb—imported bodily from Hawaii. Between the jungle that ran over in tangled green and the lagoon that frothed in cream and blue, there it had stood for eighteen years; and from its ornately carven epitaph the half-caste boy had first learned his letters:

HENRY GORDON SHOESMITH
b. Scotland 1847—Vitongo, Sept. 6 1898.
"Every man's work shall be made manifest." I Cor. III.

And underneath lay the original trader of Vitongo—the tough old, far-wandering Scot who had founded home and family and fortune in this restful island nook; who had been brought to his last rest treacherously and terribly—slain by an unknown hand.

"It is Forgotten"

"UNKNOWN," be it said at once in the official sense only; for no person had ever been tried for the deed. "Unproven" would be more nearly exact; for in private talk, the murderer had been charged, tried and condemned long since.

"Tu'u is mo paga," said Henry; which means, it is nothing, it is forgotten—it should not count. He climbed ashore and sat shaking the wet from his straight black hair and gleaming in the sun like a bronzed merman. "Eighteen year, tha's awful long time," said Henry of Vitongo.

His cousin Gordon scowed down at him.

"A long time don't change the fact. If you was a man, Henry Shoesmith—the 'alf of a man—!"

"Ah, tha's it," smiled Henry quietly, without malice. "Tha's why—eh? I am only 'alf a man beside you." A neat way of recalling that Gordon's mother had married a white; wherefore Gordon was a quarter-caste, college-taught in New Zealand, and wore celluloid collars and satin ties and altogether comported himself with the dominant race.

"Tu'u is mo paga," repeated Henry.

The other bit his lip. It was his vehement annoyance that this graceless young scamp should have fallen into the best part of the Shoesmith possessions. It was almost equally annoying that the scamp should care so little to augment those holdings, to deploy them with social gestures—or even to protect them, as appeared. "List'n to me," he said, severely. "Everybody knows who killed your father. Everybody knows it was the same h-wicked, h-wicked man who is trying to thieve away the rest of your land now!"

"Remember That Knife?"

HENRY pillowed himself on the warm sand and continued to smile indolently out across the smiling bay.

"He will do it, too—unless you fight. He has bought up all the notes of your foolish borrowing in Apia and raised the amount by tricks and false claims. Oh-h, a cunning d-hevil! 'Ave you forgotten?" Gordon's voice fell to a sinister note. "Your father had loaned him much money. Somebody—somebody—cut your father's throat as he slept, and thieved all those papers of those loans! Eh? And now this same man comes again to r-r-rob you. Only thi stime he does not need to use a knife...Henry Shoesmith!" Gordon called upon him. "Henry Shoesmith; do you remember that knife?"

Something like a cloud passed over Henry's face; something like a shudder took him, as when a damp wind turns the bread fruit leaf. Did he not remember that knife? It was the substance of every evil vision he had had from childhood. He always saw it as it hung over his father's bed—a Malay kris, really, though Henry never knew it as such; one of the relics the shrewd old trader had gathered in his travels before he settled down as an island patriarch; a thing with a wavy blade and a handle set in colored stones that glittered—glittered dreadfully. He always saw it glittering through a red mist since the morning when, as a mere toddler, he had been first to discover the tragedy.

"List'n. I know where that knife is kep'! I know three men in Apia who have seen it. The stones are very valu-able, and Joranson needs money again, as he did before. He has tried to sell it—Joranson the Dane!"

Still Henry made no response.

"You could find that knife if you searched on board his trading cutter . . . if you dared!" said Gordon, with a spurt of anger. "Hoh! But you do not dare. Even when Tito is waiting there for you. A beautiful girl is Tito—the daughter of Joranson. She fears 'em, and every night he beats her with a bamboo stick. She is only waiting for some strong man to take her away from him. But she will not wait long for you when she knows you are a coward!"

Henry Displays Shrewdness

HENRY sat up at last. "I am not a coward" he said, stung into full-throated native speech. "I am sprung from the seed of Alipia Maitetai—'Alipia Who Died in the Sea.' He was a great chief of Samoa, and Samoans are not cowards!"

"Samoans are not cowards, but thou knowest what white folks say of them? They are quit-ters," returned Gordon bitterly. "They will not fight. They quit! They can not carry through anything, even in their own defense . . . And so it is with thee, who art no Samoan. What art thou? Only a fishman and a fool. Only swimming and joking and idling while thy blood-enemy goes unslain and unpunished!"

"It is not for a Samoan to have a blood-enemy. It is not the custom of the country to slay anybody."

"It is the custom to ask justice! Only as nearest of kin you must ask the court yourself . . . Come now, Henry, let me take your case," pleaded Gordon. "We can so easy prove that Joranson did it, and we can leave the killing to the English judge. He will 'ave Joranson 'anged by the neck. And then you can marry Tito—and Joranson's cutter and all that is Joranson's will be yours!" he added eagerly.

Henry lay back on the beach again with one arm thrown over to shade his brow. But while he regarded the importunate visitor, in the pooled depths of his eyes ran a tiny flickering light which might have recalled—which did recall—the temper of that able Scotch trader, his father.

"Gor-don Shoesmith," he said, slowly, "go away. You are smart-man and lawyer-man. You are thinking if anything 'appens to me you will be next to own Vitongo—eh? And any'ow if you stir up bloody row you make me fight to keep Vitongo for you—eh? List'n, I maybe fool but I am not —— fool! Go away, Gordon Shoesmith."

A Born Pagan

HENRY OF VITONGO was that curious modern product—seldom noticed — the man midway east and west, whose heritage swings between two pasts as wide apart as the poles. It was a remarkable share in the heritage, and the world's indirect tribute to a noble native race, that as a half-caste of Samoa he need never be ashamed of it.

Pride of race is so rare with mixed bloods; still rarer when granted by white to dark. Only among descendants of certain American Indian tribes, of the Maoris and kindred Polynesian branches through the islands, will you find such pride held and acknowledged. And this was Henry's.

Not but he knew well enough the ways of a saddle-tinted society—like Gordon and Gordon's womenfolk, who anxiously aped the manners of a money-making middle class.

To these striving relatives of Henry's many things seemed essential; invitations at government house, land and profits and the tricks of commerce. To Henry nothing in life seemed important except the living.

It always had been so with him. Since his orphaned boyhood he had been a scandal to his kind. In his school days at the Marist Mission he had offered a sad problem to those earnest saints who shed a pale cast of culture on the riotous tropics. When Brother Leo used to catch him playing truant with garlanded madcaps at the jumping-rock . . . he would shake an angry finger at the elfin face and explode a six-barreled German word which signified, in approximate meaning, a "throw-back."

"That is what you are, Henry Shoesmith. You belong a gentleman—no?—with a fine home and a trading store. And you act as a little pagan. Ach, such conduct displeasing to the good God; you should blush for yourself!"

Brother Leo had hit the truth. Henry of Vitongo was a born pagan.

Beautiful Tito

TO ride the breaker, to chase the rainbow fish, to beguile the hours, nourished at nature's breast and sleeping there without doubt or care—no books had taught him this; no books could teach him better. Accepting the white man's religion and the white man's deadly contact, but still he was at heart unchanged since a golden, olden age; neither laboring, owning nor coveting; harming none, envying none and hating nobody—these Henry loved, too, and lovingly understood.

All of which was harmless enough, to be sure—all of which involved nothing worse than the talk and the scandal aforesaid—to the fateful moment when he learned that he loved, and hopelessly loved, pretty Tito Joranson . . .

"A beautiful girl is Tito, the daughter of Joranson the Dane. Every night he beats her with a bamboo stick. She only waits for a strong man."

We whatever any one might say or think of it, Henry certainly had done his best to qualify.

Had he not enlarged Vitongo store at reckless cost? Had he not plunged with a bold financial gesture on three trading ventures to Savaii? Had he not mortgaged and borrowed right and left in order to gamble disastrously to copra and cocoa—all at Joranson's own cunning suggestion and all for the single purpose of proving himself a strong man and a gentleman by every half-caste standard and a worthy candidate for a son-in-law?

His effort had failed. It had worse than failed, for Joranson was coming this very night to demand a settlement. Henry dreaded it. How terribly he dreaded it, only one could have guessed who had ingrained in his make-up the obscure inhibitions of Polynesia—primitive without savagery—wise without wisdom; the people do not fight: "they can not carry through anything, even in their own behalf." Here and now he was going to have to meet the crisis of life—to square life and love somehow with the reputed murderer of his father!

Dressing in Style

SUCH was the case of Henry Shoesmith on this particular morning of his twenty-third year.

It was not a good case, but it finally drove him out of his dreams into making some sort of a show for himself. . . .

He hurried to the big house. He donned a pair of dove-grey pants. He laid out a shirt with pearl buttons. Better still; from a battered cowhide trunk he unearthed old yellow shoes, a jacket of black alpaca and a venerable silk waistcoat sprigged with forget-me-nots. Once he had nearly strangled himself with a collar button and had set a warped straw hat to top the glory, he felt like an armored knight; very gentlemanly, indeed. Then he marched over to the store where he relieved his Nieu-boy clerk and sold three yards of calico for total profit of ten pence ha'-penny and felt himself a business man.

The moral uplift sustained him all day long. Until swift tropic night began to pour in against the land. Until a lantern on Joranson's cutter cocked its baleful and expectant eye at him across Vitongo Bay. Until he crept down cautiously to avoid his dear cousin Gordon—who doubtless would be watching and spying somewhere among the palm trees—and paddled out in his little outrigger proa on the dappling phosphorescence of the lagoon to achieve his destiny.

Tito was waiting for him. Somehow he had been sure that Tito would be waiting and he was glad, though inwardly quaking, in a way this encounter was worse than the prospect of his ordeal with Joranson, for a half-caste courtship is hedged with infinite ceremony, and he never actually had addressed a dozen words to his lady-love. He could see her gown as a lighter patch there on the forward deck. So he put on his shoes—instruments of torture which he had saved to the last moment—and climbed aboard the cutter's rail.

Polite Courting

"A-GOOD even' to you, Miss Joranson."

"A-good even', Mis-ter Shoesmith."

He swept off his hat with a flourish. She made him a curtsey in the grand manner of the saddle-tinted aristocracy. But both of them rather spoiled the effect by turning an anxious glance towards the after cabin, where their common ogre sat alone at his dinner. Their voices were hushed.

"I did not fin' you at the pitture theatre las' Thursday night," began Henry politely.

"No. That was the same n-ight the dance of the Ladies' Tuina Club," returned Tito primly.

As a matter of fact Henry had not gone to the picture theatre; neither had Tito gone to the dance. These were company conventions, to which they desperately clung.

"Business 'as been good to-day," observed Henry, fanning himself. "Copra is up again. I think there will be much money in the village this season."

"Yes. And much gay time' in Apia," agreed Tito. "Two weddings will be soon—and a christen' party."

As a matter of fact business and parties were equally far from them; but they were saying the proper things.

Out on the broad horizon grew a faint halo, luminous with coming moonlight. It made a background for Tito's fillet-bound head. Higher yet hung two quivering points of radiance. Henry thought they must be fireflies caught in the dusky web of her hair. Then he saw they were stars, and presently, as a wonderful and very dear and very intimate revelation, they showed him her face.

A flawless face; of a beauty that would have matched a Reni Madonna—the soft, rich, almost Latin beauty of her type. Henry knew its loveliness. But now as he looked down at the tremulous mouth, the glorious great eyes uplifted and dwelling in his by the starlight—now in a dizzy sweep of tenderness he knew something else; her wistful appeal, her trouble that answered his own trouble—the same timid and passionate longing clouded with the same complex of doubts and misgivings and imposed restraints possessed each of them.

Delightfully Embarrassed

SHE wore a tight frock of some pink stuff. On her arms, smooth and firm as copper cast as flesh, and over her superb shoulders, she had tied a woolly shawl. By one ear dangled a bunch of ribbon, and she went mincing in ballroom slippers—velvet with jet trimmings—the kind that knock about all the shelves of the Pacific in job-lot consignments for the colonial trade. Her whole splendid body, made for sun and freedom and the embrace of crashing seas, had been pinched and frilled and tricked out in a pathetic attempt at fashion.

With sudden enlightenment Henry recognized the pathos—not, as another might have done, the absurdity, of it; suddenly this girl, who had seemed an unattainable mystery seemed a mystery no more. She was so delightfully embarrassed; so exquisitely uncomfortable—it thrilled him. . . . Surely her feet must hurt even worse than his own!

For Tito herself was just another product. She, too, had been taken as a child from her native mother and run through a mission. She, too, had submitted to the ideals of some gloomy suburb half a world away—like West Ham, perhaps, or Dulwich, or wherever the good sisters of the Papautu Girls' School hail from; and she had not made much more of it than Henry Shoesmith. He was aware of that at once, by voice and eye and the throb of a woman's breast—things not taught in missions. . . . Surely, some time or other somebody must have called her a little pagan, too!

"Tito——!" he cried, and would have reached to her. But his collar button nipped him in time. After all, it is hard to discard a gentlemanly training; he had come braced and belted in such gentlemanly style. . . .

"Miss Joran-son," he corrected. "You look aroun' this place—eh?" He swept a stiff arm over the bay. "From shore to shore is Vitongo. You know?"

An Interrupted Proposal

"YES," she said, innocently. "Yes, Mis-ter Shoesmith. I know, Vitongo."

"You like it?"

"Yes," she said. "Oh, yes, Mis-ter Shoesmith. It is very pretty. And very ex'pensive."

"It give me gr-reat pleasure," he stammered. "If you will accept per invoice. . . . I mean—if you will do me the 'onor. . ." With choking eagerness he tried to capture an eligible half-caste formula. "Dear Miss Joran-son; list'n. All this is mine. This plantation with a fine 'ome and a trading store. I own Vitongo myself—"

"Like the devil you do!"

The words fell upon them with the force of a club. They started apart. And there at the hatchway of the little cabin stood their ogre; the white man—the inevitable white man who always has appeared in just that manner to the gentler peoples of the earth, who always does stand at the hatchway—grim and masterful.

"I heard you, Henry. I been waiting for you. Come inside here and cool off." His voice grated on the humorous note more compelling than any threat. Tito he passed over without a glance. At the first turn of his big hand, she vanished aft like a wraith. "Henry," he repeated, with formidable pleasantry, "don't be backward, my boy. Did I not tell you to come in here? . . . You're late."

Joranson was one of those figures that have made the South Sea the last far-flung, picturesque frontier.

Joranson the Dane, they called him. The name had lost its original meaning; the man himself had long since moulded to the prevailing trader type, Colonial in speech and Yankee in oath. He seldom needed a weapon nowadays; he preferred a court order. He no longer beat the native over the head and sold him into slavery; he gave him credit and sold him into debt. And occasionally, when luck was kind, he caught some shiftless heir of one of his former foes and squeezed the life out of him with a very special satisfaction.

"No More Tar Brush"

AS in the case of Henry Shoesmith.

"You was saying you owned something; and I was saying you did, nix." . . . Powerful—built on a huge, loose scaffolding of bone and muscle—he was still in steel-hard condition. Only his grey hair and his grey face betrayed him. He had a face gridironed like a devil's, and slitted eyes with a cold spark in them.

"You'll find it by these papers, Henry," he remarked, as he tossed out a sheaf of documents on the tiny cabin table. "You don't own nothing. Them notes of yours went to protest, d'y see? All you got to do is sign y'r assets to me. . . All assets," he added amiably.

Henry gasped.

"You mean—Vitongo?"

"The whole outfit."

"Vitongo—"

"What t'devil else did you expect?"

Henry could hardly have told; but even with Gordon's warning he never had expected this. He never had thought of Vitongo itself as a piece of property—something you buy and sell. Vitongo was the land—his birthplace, the soil to which he belonged. It stunned him.

He wanted to resist. Uncounted centuries debarred him. He was the man of color, and against him stood the white man, armed with the white man's power and backed by the white man's code. He was the predestined victim. He had no choice but to obey, in a sort of helpless trance.

But the worst was at the last, when the business was done, when the name had been signed.

"That'll be all, Henry. Just one thing while you go." Joranson bent a look on the boy like chill lightning. "Just one point. You got a devil of a nerve hanging around that kid of mine. Oh, I seen y'; and you drop it, d'y' hear—or I'll skin you alive. She'll fetch a white husband any time, that girl—and by— I'll have no more tar brush in my family. Now you clear!"

Tito is Loyal

HENRY cleared. With that glance piercing his shoulder blades, with that final insult in his ears, he scuttled up the after companion and stumbled on deck.

And there Tito met him again.

Out to seaward the moon had swung high, the swelling moon of Samoan nights, like a vast, golden breadfruit in the sky. It gave light—light to show off silks and and satins and tricked out finery and mincing steps, perhaps—plenty of light for grand manners. But Henry did not think of them; and neither, somehow, did Tito. She met him at once, her hands fluttering towards his, her lips breathing broken little phrases of pity. He reached to her, and this time—collar button or no collar button—this time he did not draw away.

"Tito, Tito—" he whispered, with the appeal of shame and suffering.

"I know," she soothed. "I know—I know. I was listening. But do not weep." Unconsciously they had spoken in their liquid native tongue, made for love and the low murmur of love, soft as the call of wild pigeons in the mating season. "Nay, weep not. I can not bear that!"

Again he saw her face, so near to his, and again came to him the glory and the wonder of woman, loved and loving—the amazing revelation of it.

"You heard? Then it is also known to you that I have nothing any more, Tito. No house. No plantation. I am a beggar. I do not remember if I have even any claim on the clan of my dead mother. Perhaps her village would give me a home in charity . . . But that is all."

"I know," she repeated. "It makes no change. We have ourselves—thou and I." Very different was her speech now; very different its simple message which struck back to the ultimate sources. "No harm is done to us while we both live. Only tell me where you will go for shelter and what you mean to do. Be quick—before he stirs!"

Planning Elopement

HENRY looked down the ladder. The ogre was busied below at something. He looked to sea. The cutter had been anchored just inside the passage of the reef, in deep water it was quiet outside—only an easy rolling of ground-swell. Last he looked towards the land; its shore a thin strip of silver a quarter mile off; its shoulders rising in a great silvered sweep from height to height, by crag and jungle and forest to the star-tipped basaltic peaks above. . . . "Would you seek me out, then? Would you follow?" he questioned eagerly.

"Perhaps." She smiled a little, shyly. "But I would be sure you are safe."

With one arm he caught her close to him. They did not kiss; that caress, unknown to the East, is still a curious invention of the West. But he felt the heat of her heart against his, tripping twice as fast as his own—a marvelous fact. "Turn your eyes to Vitongo, yonder," he said. "Do you see the shape of that big candlenut tree on the hill? . . . . No. Not beside my house. Away to the right. Do you see the cloud of its many blossoms—pale and clustering?"

"Yes," she answered, near his cheek.

"Up past that tree runs a ravine. It is wild and rocky and overgrown. Few have ever climbed it. But I know the path, and up beyond the palms—beyond the taro and the banana groves—is a flat place in the mountain-side. There as a child I once built me a little fale for a play-house; a hut-hidden among the vines. There one is always safe."

"Yes."

"Nobody comes so far. Nobody can ever find us. We can live on the sweet mountain fruits and water in the brook, taking nothing that belongs to any one—staying all to ourselves—thou and I." Very different was this couriship; very different the offer he made. "Tito—let us go there!"

"Now . . . ."

A Tolerant Moon

HE nodded.

"But my father would kill us! He would see us going." She gestured forward where Henry's proa was tied, past the forward cabin hatch. "He will stop us!"

"I do not mean that way."

"How then?"

He pointed across the bay. She drew a quick breath as she understood. "There may be sharks!"

"What do we care for sharks—we two?" he demanded.

An instant they clung—while the splendor of the thought gained and glowed in them—while they waited, palpitant, on the urge of it. Came a warning sound from the cabin. Henry gripped the neckband of his expensive shirt. Tito's arm slid with a start of ripping stuffs. . . .

"Make haste!"

Alas for the true ladies of Papautu School; also, alas for the prim young gentlemen of the Marist Mission! Alas for high heels and waistcoats sprigged with forget-me-nots; for ribbons and shawls and frills and fal-lals and the dove-grey suitings of fashion—and once more alas for the polite teachings of West Ham, the uplift of the rule of three and the "Book of Sacred Gems" and many other things so very, very essential to morals and imported propriety . . . . All forgotten. All abandoned within three seconds!

Only the moon was witness, with unveiled face. But the moon was a Samoan moon; the mellowest, most tolerant and kindly scamp of a moon—quite used to beaming on youth and lovers since a golden, olden age. It started with all its might on Vitongo Bay and never blushed at all.

But perhaps, with a certain whimsy, perhaps it might have smiled to see those two youngsters kicking free so earnestly and eagerly—emerging from their finery at last, a pair of superb, silver-bronze chrysalides, clad in their own native garb—Henry with his kilted lava-lava and Tito with her dainty ahu! . . . . Thereafter, it had a parting glimpse of them for just a wink as they stood hand in hand at the cutter's stern—ere they went overboard into the warm yielding sea.

"The Sharks!"

THE clean, double scoop of their dive raised a startled challenge behind them. Followed hasty footsteps upon the ladder and presently one comprehensive roar of rage exploded over Vitongo. From the rail Joranson made out their two dark heads, surging for shore. His dinghy still lay on deck, but he did not wait to launch it. Darting down through the cabin, he came forward at a jump and cut the lashing of Henry's outrigger canoe. The fugitives were hardly a hundred feet to the good when he began to dig out. Few persons had ever succeeded in getting much of a lead on Joranson.

When the pursuer dashed into their wake, Henry dropped back to cover the retreat. But he need not have bothered. Joranson wanted something he could hit soon and hit hard; Joranson took after him first of all. The prow bore down on Henry in hissing spurts of foam and the opening of that affray was a vicious swipe with a paddle.

Henry ducked—came up out of reach. Joranson whirled like a water-beetle and struck again and again. Henry slipped from under. This was sport for a fisherman. He could have played it all night. Each time he drew the chase farther aside from Tito. It kept him cheered to think that Tito was drawing away with every stroke . . . . But there was very little cheer next instant to encounter Tito herself gliding back almost into his arms. To find their whole plan defeated. To hear her despairing cry: "The sharks, Henry! . . . The sharks are come! Look out for the sharks!"

Between them and the belted dark there passed a phantom—the merest phosphorescent presence through the water. No mistaking that lean, long ghost. No mistaking the cruel wedge of a fin that gleamed at the same time inshore from them. Joranson spied it almost as soon as they did, and his jubilant bellow confirmed it.

Henry's Scotch Comes Out

HERE was the sort of amusement that suited Joranson—the sort of punishment he might have planned himself. He dropped his paddle and got to his feet, and as Henry instinctively lifted Tito towards the prow for support and escape from the greater terror, he slashed at them.

Bleeding, stupefied, Henry blinked up at him. Joranson held a singular object. He had a weapon in his fist, a thing with a wavy blade and a hilt set in colored stones that glittered—glittered dreadfully above them. Henry saw it. Henry knew it. It was the substance of every evil dream he had had since childhood—it was the Malay kris with which Henry Gordon Shoesmith had been slain . . . ! And at the same time beyond the looming figure of the murderer—over yonder on Vitongo shore, between the jungle and the lagoon—at the same time he saw a marble shaft like a pallid, accusing finger in the moonlight; the tomb of Henry Gordon Shoesmith, on which was graven, as he knew so well, the letters of that prophetic epitaph—

"Every man's work shall be made manifest."

"Keep off, I tell you! By—, you try your tar-brush tricks on me—try 'em on the devil!" With horrible mirth, Joranson slashed once more.

And then it happened; as it was bound to happen. Something snapped in Henry's breast. Some pent reserve seemed to burst and to flood through every vein—some secret spring of his being. He stiffened in the water, tense and tingling, and in a voice which might have recalled—which did recall the temper of that tough old Scotch trader, his father:

"Darn you, Joranson, you big white murdering devil," he said evenly, without a trace of accent. "I'm going to get you!"

Laying hold on the proa's thwart, he threw his whole strength backward and simply spilled the little craft over, outrigger and all. Joranson felt himself going. With a snarl he drove at Henry's throat, point foremost. Henry warded. They met, locked and went under in a spangled smother. The rest was convulsion.

The two went reeling through a dim immensity; three fathoms deep where the shadowy corals spy back to the surface in a furious spatter of sea-fire. As they rose, Henry called to Tito to take to the wrecked canoe. He had a glimpse of her clinging there—safe. After that he gave himself to the job on hand—exultantly.

Joranson's Fate

WITH his right arm he hung about the enemy's neck. With the other he fended. He did not strike a blow. He did not need to. All he required was the knife, the pledge of destiny and of victory with which—once he had won it, once he had wrested it from Joranson's failing grip—he could meet and scatter a dozen sharks . . .

Gordon was there to greet them. Naturally, Gordon was there, vehemently excited from his long, spying vigil on Vitongo strand. "W'at was it? W'at 'appened?" he cried. His sharp little eyes roved from Henry to Tito in stricken astonishment as they stepped ashore, dripping, from the righted proa. "I 'eard something. Where is Joranson? Did you 'ave an accident?"

"Yes," said Henry, quietly. "An accident. The sharks, you understand . . ."

"You mean they got 'im! Joranson . . .?" Gordon's tone rose to a squeal of dismay. "But in that case—but if that is so—!" He saw all his schemes ruined—all his hopes of Vitongo overwhelmed in Henry's incredible good fortune. "Ah, no—no," he added, suspiciously. "You let 'im drown. You will 'ave to explain."

Henry smiled. Having done his best to be a half-caste that memorable night . . . having actually been a white man for a brief, tremendous moment—he was now, and at last, and for time to come, a Samoan. With a contemptuous gesture, he flicked the Malay kris into the sand at Gordon's feet. The quarter-caste snatched it up and clutched it to him . . . "It is very valu-able!" he panted.

"Keep it," said Henry, thereby sealing the silence of this smart, blackmailing cousin of his for ever.

"But still what are you going to do?" whined Gordon. "We must lay information of some kin'."

"Perhaps," said Henry of Vitongo. "To-morrow is time enough. For to-night—tu'u is mo paga." With the girl he turned away; already they were heading back into the night where the soft cymballing of palm-fronds made bridal music and pigeons murmured sleepy love notes under the accomplice moon. "Tu'u is mo paga," said Henry, which means it is forgotten—it should not count.

Biblical Talk

A VISITOR to a school, after questioning an unhappy little boy about various matters, asked him if he knew the Ten Commandments.

The boy said he did not.

"You don't know the Ten Commandments?" the visitor repeated, in astonishment.

"No, sir," the boy insisted.

"What is your name, my lad?"

"Moses, sir."

The visitor gave it up.—Tit-Bits.

BELLEVILLE WIN SEVEN IN A ROW BEAT PETES 7-2

Solomon Oufit Play Far From Smart Ball in Yesterday's Fixture.

OULETTE HOLDS THEM.

Harrison and Swanston Only Petes to Solve His Delivery.

Belleville won their seventh victory in a row yesterday on their own grounds when they took the Petes into camp by 7 runs to 2, setting up a nice lead in the second half race. After playing smart ball against Oshawa and Kingston the Solomon crew relapsed into a fit of the heebie jeebies yesterday showing little punch on the attack and being guilty of some dopey defensive work of the kind that while it does not show in the box score helps the opposition to score runs. Both Serth, who started the game on the rubber for the Petes, and Heckman who finished it suffered from these lapses on the part of their team mates.

Oulette, pitching his seventh game in sixteen days for the Trunks, was in great form and only Hap Harrison and Max Swanston succeeded in solving his delivery, the pair getting all five of Peterboro's hits with Harrison leading the parade with a triple and two singles.

After the first inning when Harrison and Swanston singled with two out, only to be stranded the Petes only got one man to first base until the ninth, when Harrison and Swanston staged another assault, following an error by Williams and drove in the two Peterboro counters. Oulette had a no-hit game so far as the rest of the Petes were concerned and almost got away with a shut-out.

Serth pitched the first two innings for the Petes, Belleville scoring three runs and Heckman toiled on the mound for the rest of the game. Both had counters scored against them that were gifts by reason of slow fielding or slow thinking on the part of the Petes, while Belleville gave nothing away until Williams erred in the ninth.

The fielding features were William's pick up and fast throw of Johnston's roller down the third base line, several fast plays by Holyman and two speedily executed double killings by the Peterboro infield, one started by Johnston with Holyman as the pivot and the other by Collins with Johnston handling the second base end of the play.

Two in the First.

The Petes wasted two of their five hits in the first innings. Holyman lifted one to Weir and Legon rolled to Oulette but Harrison singled over second and stole the middle bag. Swanston bounced a single off Meagher's knee, Harrison going to third after which Collins rolled to Oulette.

Belleville score twice. Weir doubled past third and Ross singled off Johnston's shins. Ross stole second. W. Mills was thrown out by Collins on a slow roller, Weir scoring. Harry Mills walked and stole second. Hagerman rolled to Holyman for the second out, Ross scoring and Williams flied to Legon.

In the second Johnston and Hall popped to Oulette and Turner struck out.

For Belleville Meagher popped to Johnston. Casey walked. Oulette hit in front of the plate and Casey was safe at second when Johnston dropped Swanston's throw. Weir singled to centre, scoring Casey. Weir ran Oulette off second on the play and Trunks pitcher was caught going to third. Ross flied to Turner.

Serth opened the Petes third by fouling to W. Mills, Holyman rolled to Meagher and Legon to Oulette.

Heckman went on the mound for the Petes. W. Mills walked and Harry Mills singled to left. Hagerman hit into a lightning double play, Johnston to Holyman to Harrison and Collins tossed out Williams.

Harrisn got his second hit to start the fourth for the Petes, a line single to left. He was forced at second by Swanston who was in turn forced on Collins tap to Weir. Johnston was called out on strikes.

In Belleville's half Meagher bounded to Heckman. Casey dropped a single over first and Oulette singled to centre sending Casey to third. Weir rolled to Collins who tossed Casey out at the plate, Ross singled through short, scoring Oulette and when Heckman intercepted the throw in to the plate and caught Ross between first and second. Weir scored during the run up and to make matters worse Ross eventually got back to first. W. Mills cut a single past third but H. Mills flied to Turner.

For Belleville Hagerman fanned, Williams was thrown out by Holyman and Meagher bounded to Heckman.

In the sixth Holyman and Legon rolled to Oulette and Weir threw Harrison out at first.

Belleville were equally harmless. Heckman threw out Casey and fanned Oulette while Holyman made a put play on Weir's roller.

Swanston hit to Williams and was out at first in the seventh. Collins to Ross and Williams made a fielding play on Johnston's roller to the third base line.

For Belleville Ross singled to left. W. Mills flied to Turner. H. Mills walked and both scored on Hagerman's single to centre. Williams hit into a double play, Collins to Johnston to Harrison.

In the Petes eighth Hall rolled to Oulette, Turner fanned and Heckman rolled to Harry Mills.

Meagher was thrown out by Holyman. Casey singled to right and Oulette followed suit but Weir flied to Legon and Ross fanned.

The Petes got their only runs in the ninth. Holyman got a life on William's fumble and was forced at second on Legon's tap to Oulette. Harrison got his third hit, a long triple over Hagerman's head, scoring Legon and waltzed in himself when Swanston singled to left centre. Collins flied to Ross, Swanston going to second on the fielder's low thrw to first. Solomon batted for Jhnstn and was hit. More ran for him but Hall bounded to Oulette and it was all over.

LEONARD HAS KAYOED TWO CHAMPS

BUT DON'T BET THAT WALKER, KING OF WELTERS, WILL BE HIS THIRD VICTIM

BY JOE WILLIAMS

NEW YORK, July 10.—Benny Leonard, the well-dressed actor of the ring, has knocked two world's champions loose from their ears. The first was Freddie Welsh, lightweight, who bit the resin in nine rounds, the second was Johnny Kilbane, featherweight, who did a backward, standing dive in three.

This summer Leonard is to tackle another world's champion, Mickey Walker of the welters, and it is his ambition to add another gilded bauble to his collection.

Under the existing federal statutes it is perfectly legal and permissable to entertain an ambition. In this particular instance, however, Mr. Leonard's ambition is likely to waste its fragrance on the murky atmosphere.

Not only are the odds emphatically against Leonard knocking out Champion Walker, but it is by no means certain that Leonard even will whip him. Indeed, we think Leonard was smart in insisting on a no-decision contest.

Walker is no waffle and sirup fighter. There's plenty of class to him. He is a stiff puncher, fast, eternally aggressive and gamer than a parachute jumper.

Walker looked the part of a champion the night he beat Lew Tendler, pride of Philadelphia. His work was that of a finished performer. Despite the fact that he was boxing against an awkward southpaw the New Jersey youth seldom missed a hard swing.

Tendler was frequently in distress and admitted after the fight in the dressing room that Walker had punched him harder than Leonard.

Jack Britton, the old master, said the same thing a few moments after dropping his title to Walker. Britton, incidentally, had Leonard whipped on points in their fight when the lightweight champion committed a flagrant foul in the fifteenth round, hitting Britton flush on the jaw as he rested on all fours in the middle of the ring, following a half-shove and a half-punch.

Nobody was ever able to explain that foul satisfactorily. Leonard did not seem flustered or excited in the least. The blow was delivered with a mechanical precision and care that was astonishing.

The next day the wise set claimed Leonard had fouled deliberately in order to protect big bets placed on him to win. All bets are off in case of a foul, unless otherwise stipulated. There was no way of proving this and the boxing commission dismissed the affair without action.

Walker's fight against Britton was much more impressive, and if comparative performances mean anything, Leonard is due for a lacing. Walker not only outfought Britton but out-smarted him, and it took a well lubricated bean to out-smart the old champion.

Britton was lucky to last the limit. True, he had gone back somewhat, but he was still many degrees removed from the fisticuffian debris pile, as he demonstrated several months later when he stepped out and won some notable victories against top-notchers.

KINGSTON HAD ANOTHER LOSS

Oshawa Walked in and Trounced the Ponies to the Tune of 4-1.

KINGSTON, July 10 (Special to The Examiner). — Kingston has mighty slim hopes of a showing in the second half after last evening when Oshawa's crippled team trounced the Ponies, 4 to 1, battering in their runs in the opening game before Gallagher had time to take a long breath.

There was a fifteen-minute delay in the first inning when Cherry and Compeau took the count together, after a collision in a chase for a fly ball.

Kingston scored one in their half of the first and got three on, but Dainty struck out the third man and put an end to the hopes of the local fans.

From the first on it was a beautiful battle, with Oshawa's outfield vieing with the Kingston infield for the honours.

The Oshawa garden-minders played like professionals, and the Kingston infield fenders like major league stars.

Compeau, with ten perfectly handled chances, took the individual crown, and Somerville ran him a close second with seven. In the middle plot Cherry picked off six high flies from the Oshawa bats, one of them a dive and a roll which was a hair raiser.

A feature was the catching of little Jack Broad, the junior player replacing Tyson behind the bat. He completed Dainty eleven strikeouts and worked his batters well. Broad was so small he was almost completely hidden behind Umpire Allen, but he was head all the time, and came through his baptism of fire with flying colours.

One single in the third and another in the eighth was the total of Oshawa's tally after the first inning, while Kingston scored singles in the second, sixth, and ninth.

The score by innings:
Oshawa ..... 400000000—4 7 3

LAKEVIEWS ARE ANOTHER NOTCH NEARER PRIZE

Crescents Fell Before Whitehouse in Well Fought Game Yesterday.

SCORE WAS 10 to 1.

Two More Wins Will Put the Lakeviews Sitting Pretty on the Championship.

The Lakeviews climbed another notch closer to the Junior City League championship last night when they walloped Fonse Brioux's Frenchmen from the south end for a 10 to 1 beating. The Frenchmen fought hard all the way, but Frank Whitehouse on the mound for the Lakeviews was a mystery to them. They showed all kinds of pep and vim in the field but at bat they were helpless.

Whitehouse in the first three innings was not going very good, but as the game grew older and his arm warmed up he pushed them in at a mile a minute. In the last two innings he had more speed than in any other performance he has taken part in this year. Lambert Collins behind the plate called for them, and Whitehouse put them where he wanted to, while the Crescents swung in vain at the glittering pill as it tore past them. The Lakeviews are now two games on the south end crew and with two more wins they will have the championship tucked away, to carry with them in the Ontario championship finals. The Crescents still have a big chance to win out but they are held back by the nice pitching of Whitehouse.

McDonough on the mound for the Crescents turned in a very good game. He was a little wild at times but managed to keep the Lakeview hits well scattered. He issued three passes and hit three men, while he was felt for 11 hits, 10 of these going for singles, while McIntyre was the only man who had a real cut at the ball. The two Jones brothers for the Crescents were the only ones that smelt Whitehouse's delivery. Fred came through with two hits in two trips to the plate while his brother Joe in right field netted a single in the sixth that had a great deal to do with their only tally.

Neither team scored in the first, but in the second the Lakeviews came through with one counter, to which they added six more in the third, three in the fourth, making their total of 10, while the Crescents had to be satisfied with their one lone tally which they manufactured in the sixth. Neither team scored in the last innings.

Fred Jones led his team at bat, while Roy Taylor at first base turned in the nicest fielding game for the Crescents. Whitehouse was the glittering star for the Lakeviews, while Collins turned in a nice game behind the plate.

MUST WIN HERE SATURDAY FROM QUINTE OUTFIT

Petes Plan Defeat of Belleville in Fixture on the Twelfth.

OLD RIVALS CLASH.

Must Beat Trunks if They Are to Have a Chance For the Pennant.

The Petes chance for revenge for yesterdays' defeat at Belleville will come on Saturday when the Trunks will appear at Riverside Park. The Belleville crew have won seven games in succession and another win here Saturday would give them a great lead in the race for the second half honours. The Petes cannot afford to drop Saturday's game, for another loss would seriously prejudice their chances of figuring in the play off with Kingston. Belleville of course, expect to win, but the home talent, admitting that they played bad baseball yesterday, say that Saturday is another day and that the Trunks are due to have their long winning streak terminated. It will be a bitter tussle and in view of the Twelfth of July celebration here, a big crowd is expected as many visiting Orangemen will take advantage of the chance to see the old rivals in action. The game will be called at 3.30 half an hour later than usual to give everybody a chance to see the Orange walk first.

PETERBORO LOST A CRICKET MATCH

Team From Upper Canada College Played Here Yesterday.

A cricket match between Peterboro and Upper Canada College was played on the Oval yesterday. The visitors arrived on the early morning train from Ottawa. The game started at 10.30. Peterboro won the toss and sent the visitors to bat. They ran up a score of 63. Logie was top scorer with a well played innings of 31. F. Dyer took eight wickets for 21 runs.

Peterboro followed, and ran up a total of 43 runs. C. Thorpe was top scorer with a well-played innings of ten runs. He was unfortunately run out when he looked well set. Mr. Stuart was second, scoring a not out innings of seven runs. Seagram took eight wickets for eleven runs.

U. C. C. went to bat a second time, and made a total of 152 runs. Seagram played a very fine innings for 34. His score included two 6's and three 4's, and his innings was the finest exhibition of batting during the whole match.

Peterboro were all out in the second innings for the small total of 31 runs. Roberts played a very patient innings for twelve runs. How took seven wickets for eleven runs in this innings.

Lunch was served at the Golf Club and afternoon tea at the Oval. Quite a number of cricket friends visited the Oval during the day, also a number of old players were noticed on the grounds — Messrs. J. H. Burnham, Miles Hamilton, James Montgomery and Magistrate Langley and others.

Altogther the cricket lovers spent a very enjoyable day. Scores:

C.P.C. DEFEATED MASSEY JUNIORS

Grey Birds Won by the Score of 3 to 1 After One of the Fastest Games This Year.

The C.P.C. Greybirds met the Masseys in a League game on King Edward Park on Wednesday evening and a good game ended in favour of the Greybirds by 3 goals to 1. Grant a former De Laval player, turned out for the Greybirds and gave a good accounts of himself.

The Greybirds won the toss and Cross made a nice run and centre Edgar cleared and sent to Fowler and some nice passing was witnessed. Elliott eventually shot just wide of the post, the backs on both sides were kept very busy. Clarke and Bradley were having all their work cut out to help the lively Massey forwards at bay. Grant put Kilenbeck in possession and he made a dashing run and finished with a shot that Edgar had no chance with, from the centre kick Vinet tested Jenkins and was very unlucky not to equalize. The game was very fast and even the forwards of the Masseys were playing a nice game but they found great stumbling blocks in Clarke and Bradley. Half time arrived with the score one to nine in favour of the Greybirds.

Second Half

Upon resuming the Masseys went away with a rush. Vinet missed an open goal by shooting over the bar. Foster and Somers took the ball well up the field. Foster sent in a beautiful centre, Ashmore unfortunately heade dthe ball through his own goal This put new life in the Masseys and for a time they had the best of the exchanges. Laughlin just missed by inches with Jenkins out of goal. Foster made another raid on the Masseys' goal and after nicely tricking the half back, he sent in a terrific left foot drive and scored the third goal for the Greybirds. Cooper was very prominent for the Masseys placing the ball to his forwards with great skill. Fowler on the left got hold of one and sent in a great centre, which Bradley headed over the bar. Elliott took the kick and placed the ball among a crowd of players. Dave Grant coming to the rescue and sent well up the field. Pulley met the return and Laughlin sent in a high shot that baffled Jenkins and opened the scoring for the Masseys. The game was now very fast, the ball travelling up and down at great speed. The half back of the Greybirds were in the limelight and by some nice ground passes to their forwards Pulley and Smith were kept on the alert. There was no further scoring and a good clean pleasant game ended in favour of the Greybirds by 3 goals to 1.

The teams:

Greybirds—Jenkins, H. Bradley, Clarke, H. Hotston, Feeley, Dave Grant, Cross, Buchan, Kilenbeck, Somers, T. Foster.

The Masseys—Edgar, Smith, Putley, Naish, Cooper, Ashmore, Cordrouy, Elliott, Vinet, Fowler, Laughlin.

MISS TALMADGE IN NEW KIND OF DRAMA

"The Dangerous Maid," which is being shown at the Capitol Theatre today, Friday and Saturday, is entirely different from any photoplay Constance Talmadge has ever made, in that it gives her her first big opportunity for straight dramatic work.

The comedy element is to the front in the picture, but critics who have long presaged big things for Constance in the dramatic line, will now have the opportunity to see her in roles of the type with which her sister, Norma, usually as been associated. In "The Dangerous Maid" Constance does some real dramatic work.

She was surrounded by an entirely new directorial and technical staff. Victor Heerman directed her and had as his cameraman Glenn MacWilliams. Conway Tearle, leading man in Norma Talmadge's "Ashes of Vengeance," is the lead in this picture.

"The Dangerous Maid," a First National picture, is an adaptation of the Elizabeth Ellis novel, "Barbara Winslow, Rebel," and is a story of England's turbulent political and social period in the 17th century. The adaptation of the book was done by C. Gardenr Sullivan and Willard Mack.

In the cast, besides Constance Talmadge, are Conway Tearle, her leading man; Morgan Wallace, Tully Marshall, Marjorie Daw, Charles Gerrard, Lou Morrison, Otto Matiesen, Wilson Hummel, Kenneth Gibson, Anna May, Kate Price, Thomas Ricketts, Phillip Dunham, Jack Dillon and Ray Hallor. To Glenn MacWilliams goes the credit for the superb photography.

Constance Talmadge has the role of a madcap little rebel who dons a cavalier's sword and costume and engages in a thrilling series of adventures with the officers of the king.

AT THE ROYAL.

GREAT GALAXY ASSEMBLED FOR "THE BRASS BOTTLE"

Maurice Tourneur has drawn from the casts of "Robin Hood" and "The Covered Wagon," for players in the "Brass Bottle" the First National picture showing at the Royal Theatre to-night.

Sam De Grasse, who did the cruel King John in "Robin Hood" has the part of King Suleyman, and Roy Coulson, whose portrayal of the jester, particularly in the death scene evoked the highest praise of the critics, the part of "Jarjarees, the evil eye", an errie creature of the spirit world.

The two outstanding characters in "The Covered Wagon," Ernest Torrence and Tully Marshall, appear in Tourneur's newest production. Others in "The Brass Bottle" cast include Harry Meyers, who made "The Connecticut Yankee" a man of flesh and blood; Otis Harlan of musical comedy fame; Ford Sterling, who brought comedy into the films.

Barbara La Marr, whose recent spectacular rise to fame has startled Hollywood, is perhaps the best-known of the girls in the picture. Charlotte Merriam, long in Christie comedies and a reticent addition, to dramatic ranks, has the feminine lead. Ciarissa Selwyn, who had the same part in "The Brass Bottle" when it ran for four years on the London stage, plays Mrs. Futvoye.

AT THE REGENT.

"THE VAGABOND TRAIL" IS ONE OF THE BEST PICTURES CHARLES JONES HAS MADE

Action and Romance Are Well Mixed in Photoplay Made From George Owen Baxter's Novel, 'Donnegan' —Marian Nixon Leading Lady.

The first few scenes of "The Vagabond Trail" which opens at the Regent Theatre to-day, have to do with a hobo's adventures while hitting the trail in search of his brother who had disappeared from home many years ago. After that, it becomes a tale of that hobo's transformation into a first rater through his love for a girl. It is taken from George Owen Baxter's novel, "Donnegan."

Donnegan, by his own statement, "a wanderer and an avoider of work," drops from a freight car and seeks shelter in the nearest house. That is the beginning. The house is the home of Lou Macon and her father.

That Donnegan should love the girl enough to give her up is the main theme of the story. In order to bring back to her the man he thinks she loved, he braves the wrath of Lord Nick, the most dangerous man at The Corners—a wild gold town nearby. And Lord Nick turns out to be the brother he sought.

That the girl should really love him all along and that the ending should be happy is natural. The many trials by which the end is reached are the ingredients that make the picture one of the best Charles Jones has ever made.

This Jones, by the way, is admirably fitted to play the role of Donnegan. A strong, silent man was the red-headed hobo—who "talked little but shot straight." Jones is that type. Of course he hasn't had much opportunity to 'shoot straight' and in earnest since he joined the Fox forces and became a movie hero, but the cattle wrangler pals of his earlier days state that he "sure can do it" on occasion. And he still is strong and silent—so silent, in fact, that he has been called shy.

Marion Nixon also is well cast in the part of Lou Macon. She has the wistfulness—the air of mystery, that won the heart of Donnegan the minute he saw her.

The director is William Wellman who also directed that other popular Charles Jones film, "Not a Drum Was Heard." His handling of the western atmosphere in that was so excellent that there was no hesitation in choosing him to handle this other picture of a similar character.

Other members of the cast are Frank Nelson, George Reed, L. C. Shumway, George Romaine, Virginia Warwick, Frank Nelson and Harry Lonsdale.

Uruguayan Soccer Team May Visit Canada For Games.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 10.—(Canadian Press).— Efforts are being made to bring to Canada the Uruguayan soccer team, which captured the Olympic championship, for a series of exhibition games which would take the South Americans as far west as Winnipeg.

Whether the tour will materialize or not depends upon the result of negotiations being carried on at present by the United States Football League.

John Easton, president of the Dominion Football Association, stated yesterday that while no arrangements had been completed, the Olympic champions, if they do visit Canada, will not play until after the Corinthian tour.

WORKOUT FOR LEAFS

Maple Leafs will have a workout at Exhibition Park tomorrow evening. Every player will be expected to be on hand.

SPEEDING EVENTS ROTARY CARNIVAL

Art. Johnston Will Drive the Noted Armadale at Exhibition Mile.

Arrangements for the speeding events at the Big Rotary Carnival, July 17th, have been so far perfected that announcement can be made. Those who appreciate a turn of speed in a capable looking horse will be gratified to see these events.

Two trotting and pacing races in Classes "A" and "B." Best three heats in five. All are in training in the city.

In saddle horses, two classes will compete. Class "A," open to members of the Peterboro Riding Club. Class "B," open to lady riders only.

The open harness driving event promises to be well contested. This event was a very popular and well contested one at the Exhibition here last autumn. No contest is more graceful and pleasing to look at.

Arthur Johnston, Jr., has promised to drive "Armadale" an exhibition mile. This horse is looked on as the coming prize-winner for the district. Another speedy horse, "Day Spring," will participate. These two horses are esteemed as among the best of the free-for-all class in the country.

Don't forget the object of the Carnival, to raise some money for the Crippled Children Fund handled by the Rotary Club.

Norway Pole Vaulter Has a Sprained Ankle—Heart Not Weak.

HAS WORLD RECORD.

OLYMPIC STADIUM, Colombes, France, July 10.—(Canadian Press). —A tall, lean blond athlete with a leg bandaged, sat on the turf near the pole vault trials yesterday, watching the United States vaulters, Spearow, Graham, Brooker and Barnes, qualify for the finals with jumps of twelve feet. A wane smile played about his features as he walked away from the pits.

"You would have no trouble in negotiating twelve feet to qualify, would you, Charlie?" one of the bystanders remarked. "I suppose that is what makes you so downhearted."

Charlie Hoff, Norway's world record holder in the pole vault, with 13 feet 9 3-4 inches, stopped and turned a gloomy face upon his questioner.

"No," he replied, "I am sore because I just heard someone behind me say that I quit because I feared the American jumpers. Look at this leg."

He exhibited a badly swollen ankle.

"It's the leg that's weak," he said, "not the heart."

IN MEMORIAM.

In memory of Mrs. Thomas Weaver, who died July 10, 1922:
One precious to our hearts has gone,
The one we loved is still
The place made vacant in our home
Can never more be filled.
Our father in his wisdom called
The boon his love had given
And though on earth her body lies
Her soul is safe in heaven.

Through all pain at times she suffered,
A smile of heavenly birth,
And when the angels called her home
She smiled farewell to earth.
Heaven retaineth now our treasure,
Earth the lonely casket keeps,
And the sunbeams long to linger
Where our dear mother sleeps.

Safe in the arms of Jesus
Thy work on earth done.
The battle is fought, the victory won.
And thou art crowned at last
Safe in the arms of Jesus,
Thy pain and suffering o'er
And while eternal ages run
Rest in thy Saviour's joy.

Dearest mother thou hast left us
And your loss we deeply feel
But 'tis God who has bereft us
He can all our sorrows heal.
Yes again we hope to meet thee
When the day of life is fled,
And in heaven with joy to greet thee
Where no farewell tears are shed.

OBITUARY.

CHARLES NELSON.

Charles Nelson, 21 years of age, died at Garden Hill this morning. The funeral will be held on Sunday at 1:30 p.m., from Garden Hill to Oshawa.

MRS. ELIZABETH DESAUTELS.
(Contributed).

The funeral of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Desautels took place this morning at nine o'clock from the family residence to the Church of the Sacred Heart.

Solemn High Mass was sung by Rev. J. J. O'Brien, pastor, assisted by Rev. Father Clancy as Deacon and Rev. Father Butler as Sub-Deacon. At the conclusion of the Libera, a feeling tribute of praise was paid to the deceased lady by Rev. Father O'Brien, who characterized her as a valiant woman, a good Christian mother and a model parishioner.

Death, viewed from a natural standpoint, said the reverend speaker, is sad and the severing of all natural ties is difficult to bear, but to the soul who has faithfully fulfilled the duties of this life, death is a triumph. It is the beginning of a life of eternal happiness in reward for a life spent in God's service on earth.

The high esteem in which the deceased was held was evidenced by the large crowd of mourners, relatives and friends who accompanied the remains to its last resting place in St. Peter's Cemetery.

The pall-bearers were her four sons: Edward, Richard, Joseph, and Gerald, and two nephews, John Fitzgerald, of Toronto, and John McGrath of this city.

Numerous spiritual and temporal offerings, even from distant points, conveyed the sentiments of sympathy to the surviving members of the sorrowing family.

Sincere sympathy is extended to the bereaved family by a large circle of friends, who have known and appreciated the departed lady during her life-long residence in Peterboro.

MRS. BRIDGET MALONEY.

The death occurred at 7.30 this morning at St. Joseph's Hospital, of Mrs. Bridget Maloney, aged 66 years.

Mrs. Maloney has been a resident of the city for the past twelve years. She is survived by two daughters, Sister M. Fidelma, of St. Joseph's Academy, Lindsay, and Miss Teresa at home.

One sister also survives, Miss Mary Leahy, of Douro, and five brothers, Patrick of Brockville, William of Victoria, B.C., and David, Michael and Thomas, of Douro.

Mrs. Maloney's husband predeceased her some years ago.

The funeral will be held on Saturday morning at nine o'clock, from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Harry O'Rourke, 627 Oxford Street, to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

KNIGHTHOOD IS NOT FLOWERING AS IT SHOULD

Think Zealous Seekers After Titled Errantry in Other Dominions.

CANADA IS FREE

Dissatisfaction Expressed When Honors for Wembley Organization Are Witheld.

LONDON, July 11.—(Canadian Press Cable.)—So far as Canada is concerned knighthood is not in flower, thanks to the action taken by the Canadian House of Commons a year or two ago. In most other British Dominions, however, the zeal and the desire for titled errantry is still rampant and permissible, and thereby hangs a tale of a certain amount of grievance entertained against the Right Honorables, the British Premier, Ramsay MacDonald, and the Secretary for the Colonies, J. H. Thomas.

This dissatisfaction develops at the present time from the attitude of the British government towards granting recognition for work done in the Dominions in connection with the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley. The Premier was approached with the suggestion that he might recommend knighthood for the President of the Executive in each Dominion in recognition of that Dominion's contribution to the Exhibition and the way it was organized. Mr. MacDonald has replied that he prefers to make no recommendations till the Exhibition finishes in the autumn.

Recalling that the opening of the Exhibition was marked by the bestowal of a peerage on the British chairman of the standing committee and the granting of knighthoods to the chief architect and chief engineer, while nothing was granted to the organizers of the affair from overseas, the premier's explanation is regarded in some quarters as unconvincing.

C.P.R. CHECKER'S SKULL BROKEN

Harold Burrows Dangerously Injured by Stone Thrown From Hunter Street Bridge.

WAS CHECKING CARS.

Struck on the head by a stone thrown from the Hunter Street Bridge, Harold Burrows, 350 Charlotte Street, employed as a car checker with the C. P. R., was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital yesterday, suffering from a fractured skull. This morning he had regained consciousness, but it was reported that he was not out of danger although his condition showed improvement. He was attended by Dr. F. P. McNulty.

Mr. Burrows was checking cars in the Quaker Oats Company's yards when he was struck on the top of the head. It was stated that some children have on other occasions thrown missles from the bridge, and in this case the stone was of a rather large size.

Mr. Burrows is a young married man of thirty-one years.

HASLAM LAKE FIRE

Stiff Wind is Aiding the Fire on Its Tour of Country.

VANCOUVER, B.C., July 11. — The fire yesterday spread several miles up the eastern side of Heslam Lake, when it jumped to the west shore, a distance of half a mile.

Sparks are being carried in a strong wind from the roaring inferno to distant points where fires are starting. A pilot from an airplane is locating these new outbreaks and is communicating the information to forest rangers on the ground.

This fire originated near Cranberry Lake, whence it spread two miles to the south end of Haslam Lake. For several days it burned over a wide stretch of country around Duck Lake and along the lake shore. About half way up the lake, sparks were carried across to the west side and a fire, started Wednesday morning, is to-day completely out of control.

MONEY FOR WAR BUT NOT PEACE SAYS WOMAN

Miss MacPhail is Grateful for $200 Voted for Peace Union.

CANADA'S GIFT

Contrasts It With the Twelve Million Dollars Available for War.

OTTAWA, July 11.—(Canadian Press).—"Two hundred dollars for peace and twelve million dollars for war," remarked Miss Agnes MacPhail (Ind. Prog., Southeast Grey) when an item of the smaller amount for the Inter-Parliamentary Union for Peace was before the House of Commons yesterday afternoon. Although it was small, Miss MacPhail said it was welcome. She asked, however, whether it was intended to secure peace between Parliaments or the peace of the world.

"I'm afraid it would take more than $200 to keep the peace of the world," said Hon. J. A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance.

Thomas Vien (Liberal, Lotbiniere), Secretary of the Canadian section of the Inter-Parliamentary Union, explained that the vote was a contribution to the general secretariat ofthe union. He stated that a conference would be held this year at Berne and Geneva and that Canada had a right to send nine delegates. Six delegates had already intimated that they would attend. These delegates, he said, paid their own expenses. The vote carried.

WESTERN CROPS BELOW AVERAGE

Rain Came Too Late to Save Wheat in Some Prairie Areas.

SOME PLACES GOOD

REGINA, Sask., July 11.—(Canadian Press).—Crops in the central, west central and part of the east central districts of the province are below average, according to a report issued by the Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevator Co. yesterday. The report indicates that rain has fallen in many points in the areas indicated within the past few days but owing to hot weather previously the rains came too late to bring the crop up to average. At some points wheat from six to twelve inches high is heading out.

In the Regina-Weyburn, south central and south western districts crops are averaging above the average. Many points in these districts report good prospects and a few forecast a bumper crop. Scattered points have reported slight damage from hail, frost and cut-worms. Damage from drought is reported in central, west central and east central districts. Rain, the report concludes would be welcome at nearly all points in the province.

Manitoba Better.

WINNIPEG, July 11.—(Canadian Press).—The timely rainfall early this week has materially improved crop prospects in Manitoba, according to the report of the provincial agricultural department issued yesterday.

The crops are reported to be of a fairly good color in all districts although the present general outlook is for a crop of rather light straw, particularly in the eastern and southern parts of the province. Throughout the entire province damage from frost, hail, or pests have been negligible.

Owing to the latenesss of the season it is expected that the hay crop will be somewhat lighter than usual.

CATHOLIC LADIES DISCUSS PLANS

Insist on Rights in Education, Urges Ottawa Convener at Convention.

APPOINT CATHOLICS

EDMONTON Alta., July 11.—(Canadian Press). — Travellers' Aid work received an impetus at yesterday morning's session of the National Catholic Womens' League convention when Mrs. W. H. Lovering, president, supplemented the reports from branches where this work has been organized, by a talk on its importance. Mrs. Lovering urged that the league take an active part and co-operate with the National Travellers' Aid Association. She recommended that the safeguarding start from the point of departure of the girl and to this end advised that every sub-division have social welfare departments with efficient social workers in charge. Reports were received from Montreal, St. John and Toronto where some progress in travellers' aid work had been made.

Mrs. F. J. Murphy, Ottawa, convenor of education, in her report recommended that the league work in co-operation with the pastor in obtaining, according to local conditions, efficient catholic home training, particularly for the poor and neglected children; also where necessary the league should interest itself in procuring teachers for classes, and in having catechism taught after school hours in places where it is forbidden to be taught during shool hours; that representation on school boards by well-qualified Catholic women in numbers proportionate to the Catholic population be secured. She recommended also that the league interest itself in seeing that school and district nurses are efficient, discreet, and where numbers justify it, Catholics be appointed, other things being equal, and that Catholic parents and Catholic children are accorded equal privileges in regard to free attendance and medical inspection; that every local sub-division form a committee to procure for poor children necessary and decent clothing and books for attending schools; and that each branch establish scholarship for domestic science that the National League plan for national scholarship to be competed for during the coming year by Catholic women graduates of Canadian colleges.

Delegates were entertained at a luncheon at the University of Alberta and yesterday afternoon were received by Lieut.-Gov. and Mrs. Brett at Government House.

The Army Is Unpopular As Young Men's Choice

LONDON, July 11.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The army as a career is seemingly not so popular as it once was.

After making his half-yearly inspection of the military college at Sandhurst, General Earl Cavan, chief of the imperial general staff, said the strength of the college was being reduced by one company entirely owing to the insufficient number of candidates for commissions.

GALLOWS GLOOM ENFOLDED MUIR FOR HIS CRIME

Last Minute Attempts to Stay Execution Failed Yesterday Evening.

LAW ADAMANT

Judge Followed Criminal Code and Not His Natural Inclination.

MONTREAL, July 11—(Canadian Press).— The last minute attempt to save Walter Muir, 21 year old New York student, from the gallows failed yesterday afternoon when Mr. Justice Desaulniers rendered judgment dismissing the petition presented on behalf of the condemned man, for a stay of execution.

The petition was based on the ground that the petitioner had not been examined in his own behalf at the trial and that such examination would have brought out facts mitigating the crime. Mr. Justice Desaulniers, in dismissing the petition, said that the matter before him was one of those in which the conscience of a judge was most troubled. He continued that if he listened to his own natural inclination he would grant the petition and order a stay of execution, but, he said, according to Article 1022 of the Criminal Code, an appeal for a new trial such as the one presented was not within the purview of the court.

The Minister of Justice, said His Lordship before whom the petition for a commutation of sentence was presented, had examined the full record of the case and had made a report on it to the Government. If he had deemed it opportune and just, he could and would have suggested the holding of a new trial for Muir. He did not do so and therefore. His Lordship said, this court had not the power to go beyond the Minister of Justice.

ROBB RECALLED SOME STRAYING COMMISSIONERS

Wired to Pulpwood Investigators to Return From New York.

LEATHER MEDAL

Finance Minister Would Like the Commission to Get Off the Payroll.

OTTAWA, July 11. — (Canadian Press).—"I should like to see the commission report and get off the payroll," said Hon. J. A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance, in the House of Commons yesterday during discussion on a vote of $20,000 for the Royal Commission enquiring into suggested embargo on the export of pulpwood.

Replying to a statement by Hon. H. H. Stevens (Conservative, Centre Vancouver) that the commission had visited New York and Washington Mr. Robb said that only some members of the commission had gone and when the matter was brought to his attention he wired them and they returned to Canada. The chairman of the commission was getting $35 per day and the other members $25 per day with living allowance. The cost of the commission up to March 31, had been $48,000. The Acting Minister of Finance had the assurance that the report of the commission was almost completed.

William Irvine (Labor, East Calgary) suggested that the Minister reduce the pay of the members of the commission to a living wage — "a bricklayer's wage," he added. Sir Henry Drayton asked the minister to strike out the vote altogether. Mr. Stevens congratulated Mr. Robb on his action in recalling the commissioners from New York. "The minister should have a leather medal," he said. There was after all a silken thread running through the administration. Such instances as this were as an oasis in the desert.

House of Commons Will Not Sit on Glorious Twelfth Decide Members Despite Motion By Hon. Geo. Graham

OTTAWA, July 11 (Canadian Press). — The House will not sit on the "Twelfth."

The motion for Saturday and morning sittings of the House of Commons commencing 12th July, met with strenuous opposition yesterday afternoon when moved by Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways, who was leading the Government.

Finally the Government agreed to grant Saturday as a holiday, beginning the morning sittings on the following Monday.

When Mr. Graham moved for Saturday sittings, W. A. Boys (Conservative, South Simcoe) said that he thought the importance of the day had been unintentionally overlooked. Many of the members had made engagements out of town and were anxious to keep them. It was unusual to resort to Saturday sittings until the House was in sight of prorogation. At present there was no guarantee when prorogation would take place.

Mr. Graham replied that on this question the Government was in the hands of the House. The members of the Cabinet were giving up their day's pleasure of sitting in council in order to attend the meeting of Parliament. No slight was intended on the day. The House sat on Dominion Day in order to try and get through the business.

TRAIN DERAILED NEAR BLIZZARD

Coach on Mail From Peterborough to Belleville Jumped the Track.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 11. — One of the coaches on the mail train than leaves Peterborough for Belleville at 12.15 a.m. jumped the track near Blizzard yesterday. No one was injured as far as could be learned here, there being no communication with Blizzard by phone or wire, but the road-bed was badly torn up and traffic was blocked. An engine and box-car were sent from Hastings and the passengers were carried in this to their various destinations. This train was two hours late reaching Campbellford and there was no mail received here. A wrecking train was sent to the scene of the accident to clear the track.

From the local C. N. R. office it was learned that the accident occurred near Birdsall's Station. The tender left the track, tearing up the track for a short distance. No person was injured, and as quickly as arrangements could be made the passengers were transferred to an emergency train and taken to their destinations. The railway was cleared at six o'clock by a wrecking crew from Lindsay. No cause of the accident could be ascertained.

GRAVEL PIT WAS SCENE ACCIDENT

Worker Leaped From Tumbling Earth to Fall Under Truck.

William Curtis, 584 Downie Street, an employee of the Warren Paving Company, was seriously injured yesterday afternoon while working in William Brown's gravel pit opposite the filtration plant.

It was reported that a movement of gravel seemed to threaten a serious slide, and in running away from it Mr. Curtis was struck down by a truck which was also breaking away from the overhanging danger.

He was removed to the Nicholls Hospital in Comstock's ambulance, and was reported this morning to be resting as well as could be expected.

Fire Brigade Rushed To Extinguish Blaze But Only Found Fight

FORT WILLIAM, July 11.—(Canadian Press).—The fire department superseded the police department as a queller of disturbances yesterday. A dispute in the east end of the city had led to a couple of men coming to blows and a woman rushed to the phone and called central: "A big fight here."

Central understood her to say "a big fire," and turned in an alarm, and when the whole fire department chemical, hook and ladder, Chief's car and hose trucks arrived, the combatants thought the militia had been called out and took to their heels.

LOCAL POLICE ARE SPIED ON

Declares Chief Crabb in Attacking Present System.

TOO MANY FORCES

OTTAWA, June 11. — (Canadian Press). — Duplication of police forces, municipal, Provincial and Federal, would be done away with in a scheme taken into consideration by the Chief Constables' Association of Canada at the 20th annual convention which opened here yesterday. Under the scheme all forces would be merged by the establishment of police districts involving the doing away with separate forces for all municipalities under 25,000 population and the practical elimination of Provincial and Federal forces. Police Chief Crabb of Welland, Ontario, is the author and proposer of the scheme, which he unfolded in great detail after hotly attacking the present overlapping of police forces. The scheme was referred to the executive for report.

The convention here is being staged this year as more or less of a preliminary to the big international convention of police chiefs which meets in Montreal next week.

Chief Crabb's paper, read during the afternoon, provoked much comment. General Victor Williams, head of the Provincial Police of Ontario, warned the delegates against expressing themselves on the scheme before the subject had had mature consideration. He said that it was very elaborate, involved a great many people and the laws of the country.

At the outset Chief Crabb attacked the present system. The country was, he said, suffering from not too many policemen but too many police forces. There was a terrible lack of cohesion, and co-ordination and local jealousy between forces was common. He pointed out that in any city or town, in Ontario for instance, there were four separate forces, municipal police under the police commission, county police under the sheriff, provincial police under the Attorney-General and Federal police under the Dominion Government. Mistrust, he said, reigned where four forces had to work in the same place.

In his own experience, said Chief Crabb, the Provincial police had been used to spy on his own department. Under an efficient system of police forces, this sort of doubling and spying could not exist.

A short discussion followed, in which it was pointed out that if local pride in the local police was taken away, then the heart would

Government Buys 805 New Passenger Autos

OTTAWA, July 11.—(Canadian Press).— New passenger automobiles purchased for use in Government departments in the last five years total 805, it was stated in a return brought down in the House of Commons yesterday.

In answer to a question concerning the cost of upkeep, it is stated that the system of cost accounting in two departments does not show separately the upkeep of passenger automobiles. Detailed figures available under this head total $1,142,931.

CONDITION SERIOUS

Gunman Leaped Into the Manager's Office and Fired From Cover.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 11.—(Canadian Press.)—Detectives Robert Frayne and George Batho of the Winnipeg city force, were shot and wounded in a gun battle here yesterday afternoon with a man said to be Percy Mogie who is under arrest, also wounded.

The man known as Mogie, entered the Canadian Bank of Commerce branch at the corner of Main and Alexander streets and asked the teller to change some foreign currency into Canadian money. The teller recognized the foreign money as some alleged to have been stolen a fortnight ago from a local financial house and detained Mogie while the police were called. On the arrival of the officers Mogie bolted into the manager's office and opened fire. Frayne and Batho dropped, the former with a bullet in his abdomen, and Batho with one in his shoulder. Mogie then ran from the bank and down a lane. There he encountered another officer who opened fire. The fleeing man fell wounded and was taken into custody.

The condition of Detective Frayne is said to be serious.

MAN KILLED AT BARN RAISING

Struck in Side by Broken Chain—Another Fell From Wagon.

THIRD MAN DROWNS

BROCKVILLE, July 11. — Struck in the side by a portion of a chain which broke while he was assisting in a barn raising, Joseph Ripley, aged 65, of Lyndhurst, received injuries which resulted in his death yesterday.

He was driving a team of horses to which the chain was attached and when it broke he received fatal injuries. He was unmarried and leaves one sister, Mrs. Sarah Hunkins, of Lyndhurst.

FELL FROM WAGON.

As the result of a fall from his wagon to the street pavement at the plant of the Laing Produce and Storage Company, yesterday, Daniel Metalfe, of Tincap, Elizabethtown township, lies in a critical condition at the General Hospital. While unloading cans from his wagon, upon the rear of which he was standing, Metcalfe asked his wife to move the horses forward. When she did so, he fell from the wagon to the street, sustaining a fracture at the base of the skull, a fractured collar bone and other injuries.

DROWNED IN LOG DRIVE.

PEMBROKE, July 11. — Samuel C. Smith, 26, of Hull, Que., a river driver in the employ of the Gillies Brothers, Limited, was accidentally drowned while engaged in opening a log jam on the north branch of the Petawawa River, just below Five Mile Rapids. The accident occurred while he was working with a peevey to open the jam. When the logs moved he was carried a short distance down stream on a log when he lost his balance and went into the water. With the use of his peavey, he caught the log again, but it rolled and he went down. His companions were powerless to assist him. The body was recovered.

PASSENGER ON "STONEY LAKE" LOST IN RIVER

L. M. Ross on Masonic Picnic When He Fell Overboard at T.A.S.

BODY RECOVERED.

Leaned Against Loose Canvas and Dropped Under Bow of Steamer.

Last night about nine o'clock L. M. Ross, aged twenty-five years, fell off the steamer Stoney Lake, which was returning from a Masonic picnic, and was drowned. The accident happened on the Otonabee river about five miles below Peterboro. Ross was taking part in a sing-song with some others when to improve his position he climbed up on the rail at the bow of the boat and leaned against a canvas curtain, apparently believing that it was fastened at the bottom to the rail. The canvas was loose at the bottom and Ross fell back into the water.

The boat's searchlights were turned on the scene but Ross did not come to the surface. A boat was lowered but Ross had disappeared and his hat was the only trace found of the young man. The river is being dragged in an effort to recover the body.

Ross was a single man and his home address is 3911 Bewick Avenue, Detroit, where his parents reside. He was a travellet for the Bird Roofing Company and has made his home in Peterboro for the last two years.

The body was recovered at 10.30 o'clock this morning.

BRITAIN HELPS THE SUDANESE

Conservatives Applaud Announcement of Premier McDonald in House.

KEEP OBLIGATIONS

LONDON, July 11. — (Canadian Press Cable). — Premier Ramsay MacDonald is in high favor with the conservatives who punctuated the premier's speech in the house last night on the future of the Sudan with applause.

Britain, said the premier, intends to fulfill her obligations to the Sudanese and not hand over their country to any other government. The reference was to the negotiations in connection with which the Egyptian premier, Zughlul Pasha is coming to London at the end of this month.

Mr. MacDonald proceeded that as result of British administration the Sudanese were beginning to develop the economic resources of the country, feel the impetus of education and to understand the pride of a people who felt that somewhere ahead was the hope and pledge of self-government.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Ottawa, 10th July, 1924.

Editor of The Examiner,
Peterborough, Ontario.

Dear sir,—In yesterday's Examiner which reached me to-day, I read the observations made by J. H. Burnham, Esq., regarding the probability of opposition in the event of a by-election in West Peterborough, should I be fortunate enough to be called upon to become a member of the Dominion Government.

Mr. Burnham is in error in his understanding that City Clerk Armstrong was acting as an agent for me ,and made an inquiry of Mr. Roland Denne.

The information and understanding I have is that there were inquiries made by certain Liberals, of prominent Conservatives, as to the feeling of the Conservative Party in Peterborough, in the event of my being selected to fill a position in the Cabinet.

I further understand that an inquiry was made of Mr. Armstrong, as well as of other men in Peterborough.

In fairness to Mr. Armstrong, I must say that Mr. Burnham is in error in his suggestion.

Yours faithfully,

G. N. Gordon.

CAMPBELLFORD TRIM COLBORNE AND TAKE LEAD

Colborne Not Only Dropped Game, But League Leadership.

SCORE WAS 21 TO 6.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 11. — Campbellford baseball players fairly surpassed themselves yesterday when they defeated Colborne, only a short time ago unhorsed from their proud position as leaders of the Northumberland league, by a score of 21 to 4. It was heavy hitting, good fielding and the superb pitching of Scott that did it. After the third inning there was no longer any doubt of the result.

Yesterday's victory ties Campbellford, Brighton and Orland for second place.

Seventeen strike-outs, with two passes to first, and one batsman hit with a pitched ball, was Scott's record for the game.

D. Ives started for Colborne and lasted until the start of the sixth inning when he changed places with the reliable Myles, but even he could not stop the slaughter and before the end of the frame there were five runs and six hits added to the score.

Colborne, like true sports, fought it ought to the last but even their best hitters were puzzled by Scott's delivery. The visitors made four runs in their first time at bat on two hits but Scott retired the side on strikes. After that the Colbornes were scoreless, except in the fourth and ninth. In the fourth after McBride had struck out D. Ives got a pass to first, stole second and third, and crossed the plate when Hawkins singled to right. "Hungry" Hawkins, they call him, but aside from the question of his sustenance, he is an all-round ball player, admittedly the fastest runner of any player in tht league, a man who in his day was a successful professional sprinter. Six stolen bases were his record yesterday and only once was he detected in his larceny, that was in the fourth, when Weston caught him at third on a long throw from centre to Nesbitt.

It was Eagleson who started the batting orgy in Campbellfords first time up when he landed on Ives first offering for a hit, left, reaching second when Armour singled to right. Holmes was out on a fly to Myles but Weston sent Eagleson and Armour home with a double to right, Weston getting to third on the throw in. He scored when Hume sacrificed to short. Blakely went out from third to first and then retired the side.

In the third Eagleson singled again and after Armour had sacrificed scored on Holmes' home run to right centre. Weston was out on a long fly to left field. Hume and Blakely singled and scored on a double to Poyser, the latter getting to third on the throw to the plate. He scored when Barfett fumbled Nesbitt's grounder. Then Scott was retired, and the score stood 8-4.

In the fifth Weston singled, got to first, when Hume doubled and home on Blakely's sacrifice.

Campbellford added five more to the score in the sixth on hits by Scott and Holmes; a double by Weston, a single by Hume, a three bagger by Blakely that would have been a homer if the right field fence had not blocked the ball. Blakely scored when Poyser singled.

Nesbitt played in hard luck every time that he went to bat. The outfield of the visitors seemed to have formed a conspiracy against him for the long flies he slammed out into their territory were all taken care of. If Nesbitt failed to make a safe hit he at least advanced some of the other base runners with his sacrifices.

Singles by Poyser, Eagleson and Holmes brought in another run in the seventh.

In their half of the eighth, the Campbellfords played as if the game depended on getting more runs. Five more runs were scored in this innings the hits being made by uHme, Poyser, Eagleson, Armour and Holmes. The latter drove the ball to right for three bases, sending in Eagleson and Armour, and when he reached third Manager Davidson, who was on the coaching line, urged him to make for home. It was a close shave but the runner was nabbed at the plate.

In the fourth ,Holmes, unassisted, made a neat double play, when he caught Myles' fly and touched out Wilson at second. The score:

SMALL BOY DROWNED

Louis Naumoff, Aged Four Years, Was Drowned in a Water Barrel.

TORONTO, July 11.—(Canadian Press).—Louis Naumoff, aged four years, was found drowned at 9.30 last night in a water barrel in the yard at the rear of his father's store on Tecumseh Street. The little boy, according to a statement of his father, Pando Naumoff, had gone into the yard after supper. His mother was taking care of the other children and did not at first miss Louise. It is thought that he climbed up on the side of the water barrel and, losing his balance, fell in head first.

TWO DETECTIVES SHOT BY BANDIT

Noted Robber and Bandit Was Captured After Sensational Gun Fight.

WINNIPEG, July 11.—(Canadian Press).—Two city detectives, Sergeant Frederick Batho and Robert Frayne were shot and wounded and Percy Moggy, 19 years old who did the shooting received bullet in knee in sensational gun fight which started in branch of Canadian Bank of Commerce on north Main street and ended in a blind alley one block north of the Bank yesterday afternoon. Young man alleged to be wanted by police on several robbery charges, was accosted in bank when he attempted to exchange stolen foreign currency.

Take your hands out of your pocket, demanded Sergeant Batho when he was questioning the man. Moggy immediately drew a revolver and commenced firing, second shot hitting Batha, who fell with bullet in his shoulder.

Continuing to fire, Moggy escaped from the bank closely followed by Frayne as they entered the alley the fourth shot hit Frayne, but he continued pursuit and after the struggle handcuffed his man. During struggle Frayne fired his revolver hitting Moggy on the knee.

BATTLEFORD ARRIVALS.

Mother Robin With Family Arrives on Freight Train.

BRANTFORD, July 11 (Canadian Press).—Among the recent arrivals at Battleford, Saskatchewan, were a mother robin of Brantford, Ontario, and four hungry nestlings, hatched during a cross-continent trip in a freight train.

The news of the safe arrival of the family was received at Brantford on Wednesday by postcard from Battleford.

Several days ago, when a local firm was loading the freight car with ploughs, the robins nest was discovered at the top of the car near the brake shaft.

Local loading crew inscribed a note to the consignees calling attention to the presence on the top of the car of mistress robin, and asking for due care and news.

FORT WILLIAM GRAIN

Boats Carried 703,000 Bushels From Port Yesterday.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., July 11.—(Canadian Press).—Three Canadian and one United States boat cleared yesterday from Fort William and Port Arthur, carrying 703,000 bushels of grain, principally wheat. The little United States boat, North Wind, took a cargo of flax to Cleveland. Two boats were taking on grain yesterday evening and three are due here light for grain.

LIQUOR PLEBISCITE.

Ontario Will Wait Until Next Week For Announcement.

TORONTO, July 11.—(Canadian Press).—Ontario will wait until next week for the announceemnt of the date of the liquor plebiscite. While the indication pointed to the statement being issued during the present week, rumors to this effect were definitely dispelled by Premier Ferguson yesterday. It is understood that neither the date nor the conditions of the plebiscite will be made public until next Tuesday, at the earliest.

Such a belief is strengthened by the fact that last night Premier Ferguson left Toronto for a visit to Ottawa, and to his home riding. On Saturday afternoon he will address an Orange demonstration at Prescott, and does not expect to return to his office here until Monday.

The original Sabbath day of the third commandment corresponds to our seventh day of the week.

MUIR WENT TO GALLOWS TO-DAY

End of Long Drawn Out Effort to Secure Repreive For Condemned Man.

VALLEYFIELD, Que., July 11.—(Canadian Press).—Walter Muir, of New York, was hanged here this morning for the murder of Henri Laviolette in this town on September 22, 1923.

The hanging of Muir followed long drawn out efforts by influential persons and societies in New York and Canada to obtain a reprieve for the twenty-one-year-old New York student, who killed Laviolette during a petty argument about a dog in a tavern. Efforts to save him were continued up until almost the last hour of the condemned man.

Muir was sentenced to hang on April 4 last, but his friends were successful in obtaining a stay of execution, and an appeal for a new trial was taken to court.

Mr. Justice Greenshields refused the appeal, but said that he felt that a verdict of manslaughter would have met the ends of justice.

Walter Muir, who was hanged this morning at Valleyfield, found his staunchest defence in his mother, a blonde-hair woman in her early forties. When the final appeal to the courts and Ottawa authorities had failed, Mrs. Muir sent a pathetic telegram to the Secretary of State at Washington, begging intervention. She followed her son in an automobile when he was in the baggage car of a New York Central train handcuffed to a Provincial detective, en route from Montreal to Valleyfield yesterday, and spent the evening with her boy. She stood in the park opposite the jail while the execution took place this morning.

"To my heart-broken Mother.

"My poor mother—how you must be suffering since my death, but you must be brave and remember I died a good Christian and in the state of grace. Always think of me as I will be watching and praying over you until you join me in Heaven. It was the will of God that I should leave this earth at this time. I am dying a happy boy. I love you, mother, with all my heart, and will pray to God always for you. Good-bye, mother dear, may God bless you.—Your loving son,

"Walter."

The execution was carried out in the local prison yard at 7.45 a.m. standard time, and within sight of the scene of the crime for which he paid the supreme penalty.

Muir walked twenty-five steps to the scaffold with a steady step, and when he glanced down he smiled at those present.

JAMES KEATING ON SHORT VISIT

Returns to Campbellford After an Absence of Sixty Years, But Soon Departs.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 11. — When James Keating left here, his native place, in 1864, at the age of 19, he dropped from sight of his relatives and acquaintances as completely as if he had been drowned in the middle of the Atlantic. Nothing was ever heard from him, and finally he was given up for dead.

But for the past 60 years Mr. Keating has been very much alive, and is still hale and hearty at the age of 79. He returned here on the noon train Wednesday, and at the Windsor Hotel asked if there were any people by the name of Keating residing in town. Landlord Blute was unable to aid him in his guest, but told him that Terrance McLean, Front Street, one of the oldest residents, would be able to furnish him with the desired information.

When the visitor called on Mr. McLean there were mutual surprises. The two men had not seen each other for over 60 years, and Mr. Keating learned for the first time that the other had been, during his absence, married to his sister, who died some years ago.

Mr. Keating's father was the late Edward Keating, and his only living relative in Campbellford is William Keating, who is employed in the Weston Shoe Factory. The man so long regarded as dead has all these years been living in Camden, N.Y., where he operated a box factory for years, and amassed a fortune. He has been living retired for a long time, and has no family, his wife having died about a year ago. A brother John, formerly of this town, now resides in Port Arthur.

"The lengthening chain," which Goldsmith says binds every wanderer to his native land, finally dragged Mr. Keating back to the sceens of his childhood. But his stay was short. Father, mother, brothers and sisters were gone, and there was nothing in the Campbellford of to-day remotely resembling the hamlet in which he played as a barefoot boy. He spent one night in the home of his brother-in-law, and early Thursday morning took the train for home. In spite of his age, he stood the journey here without feeling the strain.

THE PIPE BAND.

The concert of the Caledonia Pipe Band in Victoria Park on Wednesday night was so completely successful as to justify the Parks Committee in including the Pipe Band in its list of attractions for the summer series of concerts.

There are, of course, individuals here and there who declare that anybody who can find any music in a bagpipe selection possesses an unusually keen imagination.

But it is not safe to repeat any such slanderous statement within the hearing of any one of Scottish ancestry.

There is in the music of the pipes something that tugs at the heart-strings of every Scot—and something, too, that causes him to throw his head back and his chest out.

The national music affects him much as does a poem by Bobbie Burns—but even more markedly.

And so Wednesday night's concert was like a breath of wind from the heather-covered moors to hundreds of Peterborough people of Scottish ancestry—whose thoughts went back to the auld land o'er the sea as the stirring strains of the pipes were heard and the dancers moved nimbly in the dances of the home land.

The Pipe Band is a real acquisition to Peterborough, and has the best wishes of the citizens generally for a successful career.

TOMORROW'S CELEBRATION.

With the celebration of the Twelfth of July here tomorrow it is expcted that Peterboro will be flooded with Orangemen and their friends, and the handling of the pedestrian and vehiclar traffic as a result will present a problem to the city Police Department.

Regulations have been laid down for the guidance of the traffic during the big parade in the afternoon, and these should be rigidly observed as a contribution toward the successful completion of the celebration.

Motorists can do much to facilitate matters if they will keep off George street during the time of the procession.

Many drivers are thoughtless on such occasions as this, and the unnecessary intrusion of a flock of cars adds needless trouble to the work of the Police Department and causes much annoyance to hundreds of spectators who find their view almost constantly blocked by automobiles.

If the owners of cars who have no business that necessitates their presence down town in the early afternoon would keep out of the business blocks, the worst feature of the traffic problem would be eliminated and the public interest would be effectively served.

There is no reason why the Orange procession cannot be conducted smoothly and successful, with an opportunity for everybody to see the lodges in comfort, if the public generally and motorists in particular will have some consideration for each other's rights.

THE ROTARY CARNIVAL.

In connection with the Rotary Carnival on Thursday next the suggestion has been made that the factories should co-operate by declaring a half-holiday, and thus as the stores are closed on Thursday afternoon the whole community would have an opportunity to patronize this big community event, the object of which is to raise funds to carry on the work undertaken by the Rotary Club on behalf of the city's crippled children.

The carnival, with such a worthy cause as this to be benefitted, promises to be a huge success, and the declaring of a general Thursday half-holiday would ensure an attendance worthy of the occasion.

In any event the public should patronize the carnival as generally as possible throughout the afternoon and evening.

So far as the entertainment features are concerned, the programme leaves nothing to be desired, but, after all, in view of the object of the event, the main requisite is to have a large attendance.

A new hope in life for a number of Peterborough children is being opened out by the Rotarians.

It is confidently expected that as a result of the work that has been undertaken that local youngsters who otherwise might have grown up permanently crippled will be restored to normal condition, or at least greatly improved.

That is a worth-while effort, and the community generally should be prepared to do its part by making the Rotary Carnival a memorable success.

SIGNS WITHOUT END.

All of the countless signs and sign boards encountered along the motor highways detract from the beauty of the scenery, but not all of them are without advantage to even the tourist sightseer, says the Kingston Whig.

There is a valuable message as well as homely wit in the following specimens from sign boards seen along the roads:

"This is a good road. It will cost you money to burn it up."

"Drive slow and see our city. Drive fast and see our jail."

"Slow down. Look before you weep."

"Don't covet your neighbor's side of the road."

"Stop—Look—and Live."

"Don't speed. It is 'Good Morning, Judge,' here as hereafter."

Unfortunately, these signs are for those motorists who habitually drive too fast to read them or to be annoyed by the more unsightly advertising poster boards. To the careful driver these enumerated signs are as the "word to the wise" and a protection against accidents and speed cops.

Highway advertising signs have become a problem. They mar the natural beauty of the roadside, obstruct the vision of drivers and detract attention from the road. Index boards or direction signs are invaluable, but generally absent when most needed. Speed signs and "drive cautiously" warnings are not hard to find. But the unsightly and vision-obstructing advertising poster boards are ubiquitous.

The Provincial Highway Department and the automobile clubs are to be commended for steps they have taken recently toward the provision of more and better direction, mileage and warning signs and the curtailing and regulation of roadside advertising sign boards. Limiting the size and distance from the highways of these latter signs was a step forward. The prohibition of such signs along the entire Provincial highway was a splendid move.

IF THE FARMER ONLY KNEW.

It is a curious thing—a significant thing—almost a disquieting thing—that two leading citizens of quite diverse interests should, during the same week-end, address audiences on the necessity of making life on the farm more attractive to the young. Mr. Lawrence A. Wilson made a most practical move in this direction by providing a concert and recreation hall for the community amongst which he spends his summers at Coteau du Lac; while Hon. L. Athanase David gave to the farmers assembled at St. Remi the very sound advice that they should cease preaching to their sons the poisonous doctrines that "draw them to the electric lights of the city."

Mr. Wilson stressed a very convincing line of argument. He pointed out that, while the city job might seem at first blush to promise a larger cash return, it was much more precarious than the familiar position on a farm. Young men who were drawn to the "white lights" frequently found themselves among the unemployed; and even "white lights" become garish and disillusioning when the pocket is as empty as as the stomach.

M. David's remedy is to arouse in the minds of the rural youth a new pride in the fact that they can lift up their heads as educated farmers. Mr. Wilson's prescription is to make life in the country districts more attractive by providing amusements, educational opportunities, hospitals and the like. Both are good. They could pull together like a well-matched team. It is undeniable that the attitude of mind among the adult farm population is not a little to blame for the false lights that lure away the young. They talk too much of the glamor of the city, and not enough of the magnificent elation of spirit that arises from the economic independence of the "unbossed" farmer.

* * * *

People—and especially young people—are tremendously influenced by what the community in which they live regard as "success." Very often it is not what the young man himself wants. He may genuinely prefer a quite different order of life. But if everybody about him looks upon the line of life he fancies as evidence of "weakness" or "failure," and unites in regarding another line of life as proof of "strength" and "success," he is very likely to be morally coerced into smothering his own possibly mild preferences and going in for the prizes which are universally valued.

The same psychological principle affects the attitude of our growing youth toward farming. If everybody seems to think that "all the bright young men" leave the farm for the city, naturally they want to rank among the bright young men. As for themselves, they may secretly prefer the privilege of working for themselves on their own land, on their own time-schedule, taking orders from no one else, and putting into their own pockets every extra dollar they make. But if their "sisters and their cousins and their aunts"—to say nothing of their brothers and their uncles and their "dads"—spend the long evenings on the farm telling how this or that clever youth went to the city and made his "pile," it is inevitable and entirely human that they should covet the sweet praise of their little world and try to prove that they, too, are "clever," even though, in their heart of hearts, they long for the well-turned furrow in the early morning and the miraculous increase that each summer day brings to the fruits of their labor.—Montreal Star.

THE FARMER'S STATUS.

The Special Committee appointed by the Ontario Legislature to investigate conditions in the agricultural industry in the Province have found that the status of the farmer is far from satisfactory, that the situation is indeed that the farm is not producing an average return—except in special lines—and that the manufacturer, the merchant and varied sources of employment feel the slackening touch of depression in the basic industry.

The committee has found that the chief complaint of the Ontario farmer is not that he does not receive high enough prices for his products, but rather that he has to pay so high for the commodities which he must pay.

One quotation from the report is striking. It is as follows:

"The farmer's difficulty is encountered when he enters the market to buy, as buy he must, all the commodities necessary to his occupation, to his life and to the support and education of his family. The price the farmer receives does not allow him to buy to the measure of normal necessity, with the result that the farm is producing less than it did, and that the farmer is not marketing in special areas the whole of his production. He is trying to make ends meet by buying less of the implements of production and of manufactured commodities. He is not in a position to pay the wages demanded for farm help, and consequently man power and purchasing power of the rural community are declining. This does not mean that the Ontario farmer is less intelligent, energetic or public spirited. He is in every respect a first-class farmer, and his sons and daughters have strong faith in the independence and dignity of agriculture."

The Special Committee suggestion, which will undoubtedly be accepted, is that a round-table conference be held during the approaching Canadian National Exhibition, and that representatives of various interests be called to this conference with a view of endeavouring to find a remedy for existing conditions.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

H. C. Hudson, General Superintendent of the Ontario Offices of the Employment Services of Canada, writes the Examiner as follows:

"You recently reprinted from the Ford News an editorial entitled 'Business is Good and Getting Better,' to which my attention has just been directed. We are pleased to note the way in which our Employment Office statistics have been utilized in this connection, but I wish to call your attention to the fact that the figures quoted covered the work of only one office, not the twenty-five offices which make up the Ontario unit of the Employment Service of Canada.

"The correct figures for all Ontario offices for the five weeks ending May 31st, 1924, are as follows: Applications for work, 20,548; vacancies, 16,887; placements, 14,787."

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 11 (Canadian Prss). — Critical crop conditions in the Canadian North-West, the result of hot winds and drought, gave an upward swing to the wheat market yesterday after an early decline.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled 1-2c to 7-8c net higher, September $1.15 to $1.15 1-8 and December $1.18 to $1.18 1-8, with corn ranging from 1 1-4c down to 1 3-8c up; oats at 5-8c to 3-4c off to 1-4c advance; and provisions unchanged to 32 cents higher.

At first the Government crop report was the chief factor in the wheat trade, and selling was general, the report being generally construed as bearish. Aggressive buying developed on the declines in price, however, and with the Winnipeg market showing decided strength a quick advance here ensued.

Great dearth of moisture was reported in Northern and Central Saskatchewan and Alberta, and it was said that recent rains elsewhere in the Canadian wheat belt had fallen where least needed. In this connection, too, messages from Calgary said damage from hot winds was so severe that crop insurance had been cancelled as no longer of use.

Warm sunshine yesterday and indications of considerable improvement in the corn crop outlook this week formed something of an offset for the extremely bullish character of the Government report on corn. All deliveries of corn, nevertheless, touched new high record prices for the season, despite profit-taking on the part of holders. Cash demand remained brisk.

Oats averaged lower throughout the day. Government figures pointing to a much larger production than was looked for.

Material advances were established in the provision market. The stimulus was high-priced corn.

70-YEAR-OLD ARTIST.

LONDON, July 11.—The exhibit that has attracted most attention at the Dorein Leigh galleries recently was made up of the water color drawings of Mrs. Mary Busk, 70-year-old artist. Her drawings were of scenes in Sicily, the Alps and England. Mrs. Busk is a self-taught artist and has been painting since the age of 14.

The Years Have Furnished Proof

MUTUAL LIFE Insurance, fifty-four years ago, was an experiment, but it has proved beyond question one of Canada's outstanding institutions likely to live as long as the nation itself.

The pioneers in Mutual Life Insurance in Canada have lived to see the Company they founded in faith develop in actuality. The Mutual Life stands, to-day, among the soundest insurance institutions in the world, with insurance in force of more than $250,000,000.

There can be no better proof required as to the strength of this Company than that it has developed its assets, income, surplus and insurance in force steadily and consistently for fifty-four years.

Mutual Life Agents are at your service to give you disinterested, friendly counsel and advice upon insurance matters. You may rely upon their recommendation as to the type of policy best suited to your needs. Consult them. For literature on Mutual Insurance, write to this office direct.

Toronto Will Get Relief From Present Railway Situation.

OTTAWA, July 11. — The modified viaduct scheme, wrich was submitted yesterday to the delegation Col. A. E. Dubuc, Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, provides for the construction of a bridge at Spadina avenue, and subways at York, Bay, Yonge, Jarvis, Sherbourne, Parliament, Cherry, East Don, Eastern avenue, and Queen street.

It provides for track elevaton to full viaduct level, and full facilities under the tracks at the present station.

The cash outlay of the Dominion Government is estimated at about seven millions.

The plan was submitted to the meeting after consultations extending over somt week with engineers of the two railways, and of the city and Harbor Commission.

Although no formal agreement between the parties concerned has yet been drawn, the railways, the Harbor Commission, and a majority of the Board of Control of Toronto, expressed their approval. Mayor Hiltz of Toronto, said that he would call a special council mteting in Toronto Friday when he would racommend the adoption of the scheme.

DUNNING TALKS OF EMIGRATION

Tells British That Foreigners Are Clamoring at the Gates of Canada.

ENGLISHMAN FUSSY

LONDON, July 11.—(Canadian Press Cable).— Charles Dunning, premier of Saskatchewan, yesterday re-visited the scenes of his boyhood and was given a cordial welcome by the mayor of Leicester who also held a reception in his honor. Mr. Dunning is a native of Croft near Leicester and worked in Leicester as a boy before going to Canada.

Relpying to speeches of welcome, premier Dunning spoke of the pioneer days in the Canadian western provinces and also referred to immigration into the country. There was no room, he said, for immigrants to pick their jobs. He understood there had been regrettable allusions to emigration of the young manhood from Britain but England should not forget that emigratin from Britain had built up a most useful league of nations under the British flag. At present the continent of Europe was clamoring at the gates of Canada, asking only to be let in, but the attitude, he was sorry to say, of many going out from England was, "what will the government do for us if we go?"

LINDSAY TAKEN BY THE POLICE

Brother of the Man Who Escaped From Campbellford.

LINDSAY, July 11.—Provincial Officer Storey has returned from Haliburton County, where he had sufficient experience to last him for a while.

In company with Provincial Officer Boyd, and Constable Batchelor, of Haliburton, he proceeded to a bush in Minden township where an Indian, Ed. Lindsay, well known to the authorities, was in hiding. Lindsay is wanted on a charge of operating a still and is also wanted on a warrant issued at Bobcaygeon.

When the officers bore down on the shack they found Lindsay with his brother Amos. When he was notified of the object of their visit, Lindsay informed them that he would never be taken alive. He produced a gun and evidently intended to use it. Officer Storey immediately grappled with the man when Lindsay called on his dog which immediately made a vicious attack on the officer. In order to save Officer Storey, Officer Boyd pulled his gun and shot at the dog. The bullet grazed off the animal and inflicted a flesh wound on Lindsay. The dog still kept attacking Officer Storey, who was still grappling with Lindsay when Officer Boyd fired another shot at the animal. The bullet not only took effect, but also struck Amos Lindsay in the foot and Constable Batchelor in the leg. The two men were finally arrested and brought to Minden, where their wounds were dressed.

Ed. Lindsay is a relative of the Indan who figured in the theft and also the escape from the lock-up at Haliburton as well as the escape at Campbellford some weeks ago. He was also arrested by Provincial Officer Storey some time ago having been found under a bed in a house in the East Ward.

HOCHELAGA BANK SEEKS A CHANGE

Commons Turns Down Request for Change of Name to National.

VOTE WAS CLOSE.

OTTAWA July 11. — (Canadian Press).—The request of La Banque d'Hochelaga to change its name to "Banque Canadienne Nationale" was refused by the Banking Committee of the House of Commons. The Bill which had already passed the Senate, explicitly provided that the English name of the bank be "National Canadian Bank." The vote in the Commons' Committee took place on the preamble of the Bill, which was rejected by the close vote of 13 to 12.

Beaudry Leman, general manager of La Banque d'Hochelaga, explained that the desire of the promoters of the Bill was to localize the bank The name "Hochelaga" was not understood generally. The proprietors of that bank were not willing to use the old name of La Banque Nationale, which had been taken over. Mr. Leman said it was proposed to print cheques with both the English and French name.

We have many English, Scotch and Irish customers," he said, "why should we not serve them as they wish."

"Put it in gaelic then," suggested Hon. H. H. Stevens, Conservative, Centre Vancouver. He then asked why the name of the bank should not be "La Banque Nationale de Quebec."

Mr. Leman said the customers of the Banque d'Hochelaga would think it meant the city of Quebec and would not like it.

N. K. Laflamme, Liberal, Drummond-Athabasca, thought the proposed title of the bank both accurate and descriptive. He supported the Bill. So also did E .R. E. Chevrier, Liberal, Ottawa.

A. E. McMaster, Liberal, Brome, opposed the name "Nationale Canadian" as misleading.

"What about the Royal Bank,' queried a member of the Committee

"We have no royalty in Canada," replied Mr. McMaster. "The word Royal is getting so common that it means little."

Chairman Vien interposed that the King was present in Canada.

"No," said Mr. McMaster, "we have vice Royalty but not Royalty."

C. G. Power, Liberal, Quebec South, opposed the Bill. He feared the new name would cause confusion with the Canadian. Canadian National Railways.

Then came the vote and the preamble was rejecterd by 13 to 12.

OTTAWA, July 10.—(Canadian Press.)—United States' tourist traffic into Canada trebled within the last three years, according to to J. B. Harkin, Dominion Parks Commissioner at the weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club here yesterday. The speaker urged that good roads pay for themselves. He said that in the past five years 191,000,000 dollars had been spent on roads in Canada, but that 118,000,000 dollars of foreign tourist traffic had been brought in, which represented

HALF MILLION TORONTO FIRE

Conboy Building on the Don Roadway Devastated by Spectacular Blaze—Dominion Stores Suffer.

MANY CARS BURNED.

TORONTO, July 11.—(Canadian Press).—The Conboy Building, Don Roadway, near Queen Street, was gutted in a spectacular fire yesterday, with a loss to the building and contents of $500,000, most of which is covered by insurance.

The carriage company figures the loss to the building at $100,000 and damage to stock, machinery and equipment at $200,000, while the Dominion Stores, Limited, who occupied the basement and second floor of the building as a warehouse, sustained a loss of $200,000. Walter Belfry, automobile painter, occupied a section of the back part of the building. It is estimated that some thirty automobiles, including three new ones, were in his shop.

The fire started in the centre of the second floor premises of the Dominion Stores, Ltd. Few of the employees were working at the time. Other workers of other firms had left the building for the day.

The entire stock of the Dominion stores was a total loss. They carry insurance of $150,000, while the Conboy Company was reported to have insurance of $100,000.

No definite information as to the exact number of automobiles burned could be ascertained last night.

Regret Reduction.

Chief Chris. H. Newton, president, in his annual report, expressed a regret that governments, municipal, Provincial and Federal, were all seeking, in their desire for economy, to reduce police forces at a time when crime is rampant in the country.

In Chief Newton's opinion there were too many laws and too much overlapping of laws. Too much notice was given to reformers who wished to experiment on the general public without regard to the liberty of the individual.

He urged the formation of parole boards in each province for the proper handling of prisoners on parole. A secret code between police forces was also a recommendation contained in his report.

Hon. E. J. McMurray, Solicitor-General, delivering an address at the convention, delved at length into the subject of parnies, in answer to a reference to the inadequacy of the Parole Act in the annual reports of the secretary and president.

Mr. McMurray gave as his opinion that if the prisoner was not of the criminal type and did not show signs of becoming a criminal then he should be paroled, and if he was a persistent offender he should not be paroled.

One of the evils of the parole system, he said, was the fact that most prisoners had no jobs when they were released. The Solicitor-General said that he would favor the passing of an act whereby no prisoner would be paroled until he had work to go to.

A Tire Carcass of Doubled Mileage

THE development of balloon tires offered one outstanding problem.

Balloon Tire fabric must be able to stand constant flexing, and yet be strong enough to resist all road-shocks.

Ordinary cord tire fabric will not build the best balloon tires.

But Goodyear, in Goodyear laboratories and Goodyear cotton mills, has developed a new, special, exclusive cord tire fabric.

In actual tests, tires of Goodyear SUPER-TWIST cord fabric showed 100% more carcass life than tires built of the same number of plies of standard cord fabric.

And only in Goodyear Tires can you get Goodyear SUPERTWIST cord fabric.

The superiority of Goodyear SUPER-TWIST is due to its greater elasticity and power to flex, with consequently wider distribution of shock and greater freedom from stone bruises and like injuries.

This incomparable material is now used in regular Goodyear production and is built into Goodyear Balloon Tires—to fit new wheels and the wheels now on your car.

See the Goodyear Selected Dealer regarding Balloon Tires to replace your present equipment without change in wheels or rims. If you like the appearance of the new small wheels, see the Goodyear Selected Dealer, your car dealer or the nearest Goodyear Branch regarding new wheels and the Goodyear Balloon Tires to fit them.

A convenience for the summer residents at the park this year is a newly-installed "tourist" telephone line, which relieves the congestion on the rural lines, rather bitterly complained of by the rural subscribers in the district last season. It is said however that even with the fresh line, connections to the city are difficult in making.

Inspector Livingstone, driven by Chauffeur Priest, had proceeded to Hamilton, where he was joined by Constables Dick and Baugh, two cartons of what was believed to be, and what apparently was strong beer, were illegally purchased by the officers, and consumed, later, leaving Chauffeur Priest, the three had driven the car out of Hamilton a short distance, where it was wrecked in a ditch.

TOUGH

The farmer has been getting only 31 per cent more for his crops from the average acre of land than he got in 1913. But he has been paying 86 per cent more for the things he buys than in 1913.

These figures, from National Industrial Conference Board, tell the whole story of the farmers' plight. The scales will balance in time. But not by any sudden event, situation or legislation.

ORANGE ORDER IS IN CANADA OVER A CENTURY

Brought Here by British Soldiers in the Nineteenth Century.

EARLY HISTORY.

Actual Records Up to 1824 Have Been Lost and Definite Date Unknown.

This year marks the centenary of the establishment of the Orange Order in Canada, according to actual records. It is believed that the first warrants were brought to the Dominion by the British soldiers who took part in the War of 1812, but the exact date of the institutions of the Order in Canada is not definitely known. It is known, however, that the first Orange lodges operated under travelling warrants brought out by Imperial soldiers, some from England, and some from Ireland, early in the nineteenth century. Civilians could join military lodges In those days warrants were issued to individuals and the records have been lost. Military lodges then existed in Halifax, St. John and Charlottetown long before civil warrants were issued. The earliest record is of a lodge held in St. John, under a warrant brought there by the 7th Regiment of 1824.

A lodge under the auspices of a British regiment met in Montreal in 1825, and was attended by Old Country Orangmen who had settled in Montreal. Among them were William Burton, Arthur Hopper, Francis Abbott and John Dyer, who determined to open a "civil" lodge. Burton, a merchant, had occasion to visit Dublin every year and he was instructed to secure a dispenssation from the Grand Lodge of Ireland. In 1827 he obtained from the Earl of Enniskillen, at that time Deputy Grand Master of Ireland, the necessary powers, in addition to which authority was given to grant warrants to open lodges in other parts of the colony. This latter power was exercised in 1828 when a warrant was issued to Robert Birch of Richmond, Carleton County, Ontario A number of Montreal Orangemen travelled up the Ottawa River in open boats to institute the Order in the woods of Carleton County, which to-day is one of the Orange strongholds.

In Upper Canada

In Upper Canada, the Order apparently originated earlier, as processions were contemplated in 1826. According to the reports of the first meeting of the Grand Lodge of British America, held in Brockville January 1, 1830, there were 13 County Lodges, 25 District Lodges, 103 Primary Lodges and 11,242 members enrolled in the Order. There were large settlements of Irish Protestants all over Ontario, particularly in the eastern portion of the province and in Peel, Simcoe and Halton Couties. The Town of York, now Toronto, was an early Orange centre and still has a lodge in existence, Nassau No. 4, which was opened September 16, 1831, while the city was still called York.

English and Irish warrants were brought to Canada by many of the Masters who migrated, and who in the early days of Orangeism here were the custodians of the warrants In November, 1829, there arrived in Montreal an Irishman named Ogle R. Gowan, from the County of Wexford, who had been conspicuous in the Grand Orange Lodge of Ireland When he set about to unite the Orange forces in Canada he encountered some difficulties, but in a few months he succeeded in organizing the Grand Lodge of British America The Duke of Cumberland was made Grand Master; Ogle R. Gowan, Deputy Grand Master; Lt.-Col. J. K. Hartwell, Grand Secretary; Capt. George Crawford, Grand Treasurer and Rev. R. Elms, Grand Chaplain Under Lt.-Col. Ogle R. Gowan, M.P. the Order grew rapidly and lodges were formed all over Ontario. Numbers 4, 136, 137, 140, 212, 275, 301, 375, 387, all still active in Toronto, were organized before 1840. The first warrants issued by the Grand Lodge of British America were for the organization of two Primary in Brockville.

PATENTS PROTECTED

"Considerable interest has been aroused in radio circles over a report that a recent U.S. Court of Appeals decision has been unfavourable to Major Armstrong, inventor of the famous regenerative circuit.

This decision—which is being appealed by the Westinghouse Company of Pittsburgh—concerns only the issuing of a second patent in addition to the one already held and sustained against the De Forest Telephone and Telegraph Company. In Canada this question has already been settled by the granting of two patents—No. 216,321 corresponding to U.S. Patent No. 1,113,149 and another, No. 216,322 fully covering the question still under dispute in the United States. Both the Canadian Patents are owned by the Canadian Westinghouse Co."

PHILADELPHIA, July 11.—(Canadian Press). — Charles Evans Hughes, Secretary of State, was elected president of the American Bar Association at the close of the business session of the convention here yesterday. PENSIONS.

With the soldier bonus a certainty, talk is developing about pensions to World War veterans later.

Here is the precedent: It was not until 25 years after the end of the Civil War that pensions were paid to all disabled vets. And it was 17 more years before pensions were offered to all honorably discharged vets 62 years or older.

Pensions for World War veterans may come later on, despite cash bonus or insurance. Few will have their bonus five years from now.

Paul In Possession

By RUBY AYRES

Copyright, 1924, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate

The story this far:

When John Collinge died, he left behind him his adopted daughter, Wanda Griffin, a headstrong, passionate and overbearing girl, and his son Paul, with whom he had quarreled, and who had gone abroad. After the death, Paul comes home for the reading of the will, and to Wanda's surprise she finds she is disinherited, and that he is the heir. Paul dislikes Wanda intensely because of her behavior, and tells her that she must leave the house immediately; she refuses and, in order to stay there, pretends to be ill. At last matters reach a crisis, and Paul orders Wanda out of the house. She goes up to London with Mrs. Garnet, her one friend, with whom she is to live. The day after Wanda arrives Clare's brother, Harry, the black sheep of the family, arrives unexpectedly. After a week Harry asks Wanda to marry him, but she refuses. Paul unexpectedly arrives at Clare's apartment.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XXIV—JEALOUS—

"Why have you come anyway?" Wanda asked bluntly.

"How ungracious! Why should I have come, except to see you?"

"Is that why you wrote to Clare instead of me?"

Clare moved uneasily.

"Dear Wanda——" she began, but the girl cut her short.

"I do hate humbug and pretense!" she said.

"Nobody has humbugged you," Paul said calmly. "I did not write to you because I thought that you would destroy my letter unread, knowing how you detest the sight of me. Another time I will take the risk."

"Please don't. I would much prefer you to write to Clare."

Clare interrupted: "Isn't this all very silly?" She rose from the tea table. "Harry, Mr. Collinge wants to speak to Wanda—shall we leave them?"

"He hasn't anything to say that you can't all hear," Wanda objected, but Clare insisted.

"Well, what do you want?" Wanda asked defiantly when they were alone. Paul was lighting a cigarette.

"I suppose you don't mind smoke?" he said rather cynically. "Seeing that Mrs. Garnet's brother is smoking the most foul pipe it has ever been my lot to endure."

"I prefer a pipe to a cigarette," Wanda answered.

Paul took her literally.

"I did not know you smoked either."

She frowned and turned away, and he said again: "However, we don't want to quarrel so soon. How are you?"

"Quite well, thank you."

"And—happy?" he asked rather nervously.

She gave a hard little laugh.

"As happy as I ever shall be away from my home."

"Grey Chumley is not your home."

She made no answer, and he said after a moment:—

"Come, Wanda, be friends with me! I did really come to see you today, whatever you choose to believe, and I really wrote to Mrs. Garnet because I thought you would not even read a letter from me, let alone answer it."

She answered flintily that she could not understand why he should wish to see her.

Paul flushed.

"I'll make an admission, then, in the hope of convincing you. I've missed you most confoundedly since you went away."

She stared at him with incredulous eyes.

"Missed me! My dear Paul, you don't expect me to believe that, do you?"

"It's true, whether you believe me or not."

She shrugged her shoulders.

"Perhaps you have come to ask me to play the prodigal, and return home, then?"

"No. I'm going to stay in town for a couple of days myself, and take you out a bit."

"No, thank you."

"You're not very polite. Perhaps if I include Mrs. Garnet and her brother in the invitation also you will consider your refusal."

"So that we can pair off nicely, I see!" Wanda felt intensely angry without knowing why. "Thank you, you can take Clare by herself. I am sure she will be delighted. If you have nothing else to say, I——" She moved to the door, but he followed and caught her arm, scanning her flushed face with a queer expression in her eyes.

"Why, you're not—jealous of Mrs. Garnet?"

"Jealous!" Wanda's eyes flashed fire. "Jealous of Clare! Please don't flatter yourself that you could make me jealous of anyone."

Paul released her at once.

"I beg your pardon."

Then all at once something seemed to be lifted from her heart, something that was like a veil, tearing away all pretence with which she had buried her real feelings.

She was jealous of Clare! She was jealous of her, miserably jealous.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

A TRIP TO JAPAN

They could see a tiny Japanese maiden.

"Tira loo, tira loo, tira loo!" called Johnny Jump Up softly. "Wake up, Nancy and Nick, and come and get your magic shoes. We are going on another adventure."

"Where to?" asked Nick excitedly, hopping out of bed and starting to put on his clothes.

"You'll find out, you'll find out, you'll find out!" sang Johnny Jump Up, dancing about on the window-sill in the moonlight.

Nancy was dressed first, and put on the tiny shoes the fairy handed to her. But Nick was only a second behind her, so eager was he to be off.

And oh, how tiny they became the instant the magic shoes touched their feet. So little that a lightning bug passing by called out: "Good evening, beetles, how did you get away up here?"

One, two, three, four, five! In just as long a time as it takes to count that many, they were down the wall and standing in the magic garden where the stiff yellow daffodils stood like fairy lamp-posts, and the blue bells went tingalingaling.

"Come with me," cried Johnny Jump Up, and bouncing over to a cherry tree covered with blossoms, he began to climb toward the branches.

Up went the Twins after him.

And there by the light of the moon they could see a tiny Japanese maiden no bigger than a humming bird.

She had on a little straight dress of bright silk, embroidered in coloured flowers, and a wide sash that tied in a big bow behind. Her black hair was piled up high on her head and stuck full of little fans and she carried a paper parasol.

"Oh, are you a fairy?" cried Nancy.

"Yes," nodded the tiny maiden, "a Japanese fairy from far Japan. It is a lovely place on the other side of the world, and that is where Johnny Jump Up is going to take you to-night. I brought three tickets for you."

"All rightee, if you say so," said Johnny Jump Up, turning a somersault. "Have you seen the titmouse anywhere? We can't go unless he takes us."

"Oh, I'm here," called a sleepy voice. "I've been waiting ever since the sun went down. Every other self-respecting bird was in bed hours ago. All I got was forty winks and I never can get rested under fifty."

"You can sleep when you get back, lazybones," chirped Johnny Jump Up merrily. "Hop on, Nancy! Hop on, Nick!" And giving a little jump, the fairy man hopped on, too.

Away flew the titmouse, and they all waved good-bye to the little Japanese fairy in the cherry tree.

After crossing a very wide ocean, they came to Japan. The sun was shining, because, being on the other side of the world, it was day.

"Oh, Japan's all pink!" cried Nancy, looking down from her place on the bird's back.

"It is now, for their cherry blossoms are out and they are pink instead of white, as ours are," said the fairy.

Just then the titmouse yawned. "I think we'd better be going home," he said. "I want my other ten winks of sleep."

FOUR BOTTLES CORRECTED SERIOUS STOMACH TROUBLE

Oliver Mathieu Spent Small Fortune Trying To Help Wife.

"I can tell the world that my wife and myself think Tanlac is the best medicine that ever was made," recently declared Oliver Mathieu, well-known railroad man, 73 Delinelle street, Montreal, Que., Canada.

"In 1908 my wife strained her stomach in such a way that she became a physical wreck. She suffered such intense stomach pains at times she could not help crying, and got so nervous and weak at one time she could not lift hand or foot.

"We had paid out money for treatment and medicines so long without results that it looked like her case was hopeless. But, finally, in 1922, after my wife had suffered for 14 years, I bought her Tanlac and four bottles of the medicine restored her health and strength completely. She gained 10 lbs., and has not had a sick day since. In fact, she is the picture of health and I will back up this statement to anyone."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Laborite Scores Colleague Playing Golf With Duke

LONDON, July 10.—The recent golf match on a miners' course between the Duke of York and Frank Hodges, civil lord of the admiralty, was severely criticized by Merthyr Tydvil, when he presided at a conference of the National Federation of colliery enginemen, boilermen and mechanics.

"I must yield to the temptation of criticizing a one-time fiery representative of the proletariat, who has been falling over himself to play golf with a real live duke," said Mr. Jones.

"Not that I object to the man playing golf with the duke. What I do object to is the hyprocrisy of the whole thing.

"One of the most damnable features in public life is the hypocrisy of public representatives, and we are paying a heavy price in permitting this to go on without protest."

INSPECTION OF ROTARY' WARDS

Fourteen Crippled Children Examined by Specialist From Toronto Hospital.

DECIDE ON TREATMENT

Children from the by-ways of life, those who go limping down the lanes of the world while their brothers and sisters walk the highways with free steps and erect posture, were being examined Wednesday night by a specialist from the Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto. In the upper examining room of the local branch of the Provincial Health Laboratories, Dr. Edward Robertson, expert in children's diseases, felt their crooked bones and decided with quick ease just what should be done with the fourteen boys and girls, ranging in age from four months to sixteen years of age, who were brought for his inspection by members of the Rotary Club and several interested ladies, who used their cars to convey the children to the place of examination.

At the last meeting of the Rotary Club, Dr. A. W. McPherson, chairman of the committee which has had in hand a survey of the city for the purpose of determining the number of crippled children in its precincts, announced that the survey had been completed, sixteen cases had been discovered, and that an expert from the Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto would examine the children and decide on the proper treatment for each individual. Assisted by Dr. A. Y. McNair, Dr. A. W. McPherson and three nurses, Mrs. George McCartney, Miss Gwen Peat and Miss Ann Long, the examination progressed, with several doctors, including Dr. J. A. Morgan and Dr. N. D. Buchanan, dropping in during the evening to observe matters.

Children Cheerful.

An attribute of these children, noticeable in every instance, is their cheerfulness, and a quality of uncomplaining fortitude. Truly, Number One, the four-month-old twin boy, just nine pounds in weight, with his extreme hair lip and his cleft palate, wept tumultuously against his mother's breast as the doctors looked at his little distorted mouth, and a second small baby, with a cheerful reddish topknot above his bright blue eyes, just fourteen months old, also protested vigorously when the doctor handled the ugly marks on his little right foot, where an operation had been performed, in a vain effort to straighten the small limb, but the majority of them were quiet, patient little creatures. Little five-year-old Number Thirteen even chuckled gaily at the prospect of having his "supernumerary" toe eliminated by way of the knife. He was an extraordinary little thing, who had large ideas at his entrance into the world, and came along with an extra toe on each foot and an extra finger on each hand. On the hands, the sixth digit had been removed, also the unnecessary toe on the right foot, but the left foot still appears with six neat little toes, and one will have to be lopped off.

Number Fourteen, too, a cunning wee boy of four, with a happy smile that included everybody in the group, was not at all afraid of showing his tiny crippled left hand, where a thumb and little finger remained free, and the remaining three fingers bunched together in a shapeless mass in the centre.

History of Cases.

For the abnormal conditions that had their result shown in the warm upper room last night, where anxious mothers related histories of various cases and the doctor examined with careful, patient attention, every individual, the dreaded infantile paralysis was the origin of many. Like a thief that stalks in the night must be this shade that finds its victims in the young and defenceless, for several of the cases disclosed conditions where the children had gone to bed as apparently normal as usual, to wake with a paralyzed limb. Little twelve-year-old Number Nine, a nice, dark, intelligent-looking little girl, with a "dangle foot" that refused to allow her right heel to touch the floor as she limped along, had infantile paralysis when she was two years of age: Number Five, a bright child of fifteen years, with a cruel spinal curvature that brought out the bones of her back in abnormal fashion, had an attack of infantile paralysis at eleven months of age. For seven months, she did not walk, and then the trouble seemed to disappear. Only a year and a half ago, it came back, "when she was taking music lessons," so this pretty young girl, quite healthy-looking otherwise, is deformed.

Infantile paralysis at three years caused the trouble with Number Ten, a girl of sixteen years of age, dark, foreign-looking, with patient expression and dark curls, and the same insidious disease, when she was just four, brought two "claw" feet to Number Eleven, now eight years old, a charming small maiden, who smiles and shakes her little bobbed head as she demonstrates her sidelong gait for the watching physician.

Down the stairs, to see if she can put her heel to the floor, the physician sends Number Twelve, whose right leg is three-quarters of an inch shorter than the other, from paralysis when she was six, just six years ago.

Club feet, noticeably in the right limb, are the main items among these crippled children, several of whom have already had one or more operations, and several of whom will face other operations in attempts to relieve their conditions, but there are other things as well.

Spinal Curvature.

A case of spinal curvature, fortunately not serious as yet, is that of Number Four, a manly little lad, with enticing black hair and dark blue eyes, who puffs out his little chest as the doctor commands him to "stand up straight." He is just six years old, and has already spent a portion of his life in heavy plaster of paris jackets, "that make him thin." Measles lurk in the background of the history of this case, where the first symptom was noticed last September, when the small boy started holding his head sidewise.

Another small boy of seven has feet that show congenital deformity, the soft bones staying in position under pressure, slipping back to their bulky distortion when the doctor lets them go.

Number Two also is congenital, a little girl of ten, with yellow hair and blue dress, a silent small thing now, but capable, as one observer well remembers, of being the popular jester, the fun-maker, of a group of children at the Jackson Park Camp, when they gather for their afternoon lunch under the trees. Here are two twisted feet and a lame hip, but no trace of sadness in the small creature's face as she trundles back and forth across the floor.

Another little eightyear old girl, with a blue hair ribbon in her dark brown locks, tries to turn her foot out at the doctor's behest, but the muscles refuse to respond to her wish, and even the prick of a sharp pin does not bring much recoil from the lifeless flesh. The trouble is in the right foot here also, caused by a cut from a tin can when she was three years old. A four-year old girl, with a fair Dutch cut to her bobbed locks, has a shrunken left leg, curved outward at an acute angle.

A noticeable element in most of the cases is the history that discloses disease or accident of some sort at tender years. From birth to four or five years of age, these little things must be at the mercy, evidently, of many malign influences that flower out in later years.

For them all, there was comfort in the doctor's words. Masked under Latin phrases, comprehended only, evidently, by his companion physicians, were his decision, but in every case help was promised. For the little lad with slight curvature, special exercises were the main recommendation, while appliances of various kinds and, in some cases, more or less serious operations, were recommended for the others. For each and everyone, something may evidently be done to make the lot in life of these children more bearable. They and their mothers looked at the kindly, attentive man with hope in their eyes, but little questioning. That was one very noticeable thing, the lack of questions. They did not ask what might be done or question the fate that had befallen them. Apparently distorted conditions such as these breed a very high quality of patience and cheerful submission absent from many of the minor complaints of nuerotic individuals willing at most times to give any newcomer a full 'organ recital' of their real or fancied ailments.

Helpful Work.

It was not possible, either, when watching the careful attention given these children, some of whom at any rate would not be able, if left to the resources of their parents, to do much to better their conditions, to refrain from thinking of the really constructive work that the Rotary Club is doing in this regard, and of the intensive following out of the golden rule that marks their Good Samaritan efforts to ameliorate the lot of the halt and the lame in the children of the city.

The Rotary Carnival, which takes place on Thursday of next week, the 17th inst., is expressly designed to gather in funds to help in the work of the committee having the interests of croppled children at heart.

UNION BILL IS NEARLY THROUGH

Only Two Sections Remain to be Disposed of in Section 28.

OTTAWA, July 11 (Canadian Press). — The Church Union Bill was nearly through the committee stage when the Senate adjourned the consideration of it last night.

Only two sections still remain to be disposed of, Section 28 containing some declarations or principles in regard to union, and Section 10, which deals with non-concurring congregations.

Two amendments are before the Senate dealing with the method of voting under Section 10. Both provide for the circulated ballot. The first moyed by Senator Ross was the same as that moved in the House of Commons by William Duff, which provided for the redistribution of the ballots by delivery or by mail, under certain regulations.

The section sponsored by Senator Pardee provides for the distribution of the ballots by registered mail.

The provisions of the Bill itself contemplate a vote at meetings of the congregations.

When the Bill comes up for the second reading in the Senate, Senator Gillies said that the union among Methodist churches or Presbyterian churches in the past was no argument for union along distinctly different churches now.

He declared that the General Assembly at Owen Sound was not representative of the sentiment in the Presbyterian Church or the question of union. Instead of church union assisting immigration, he felt it would work an injury, as Scottish people would not come to a country where their Church did not exist. Union leaders had become dictators, and refused church members the right to vote.

Senator Robertson said that the progress of church union in the West was due chiefly to the expectation of organic union throughout Canada. The people in that country were waiting anxiously for the consummation of union.

He thought it was unfair to use the term "dictator" toward the unionist leaders who sought harmony in union and the betterment of the churches.

THE CARBON KNOCK

Motorist Will be Relieved by Simple Explanation of Popular Term.

What actually happens during what is popularly termed a carbon knock?

Here is an explanation, taken from Lubrication, an oil trade journal:

"After the motor has run a few moments, some of the carbon deposits become red hot. Part of the fuel entering the cylinders during the suction stroke is in contract with this hot carbon during the suction and compression strokes and its temperature is raised to a point where spontaneous ignition takes place before the timed electric ignition occurs. There is a consequent rise in temperature and pressure due to combustion, which is further increased by the still upward moving piston on the compression stroke.

"We have now present in the combustion chamber the idea locnditions for 'cracking' the fuel. The fuel (gasoline) of to-day is rather chemically complex in its make-up and when 'cracked' breaks down into more simple compounds, some of which are highly detonating and others less so.

"When the 'cracking' occurs the less stable compounds detonate, setting off the others in the order of their stability. All this, of course, is distinguishable by the ear as a knock, or, as it is called in England, a 'pink'."

MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

In the long run a man-made law will prove ineffectual if it breaks an economic law.

In the United States there are 48 States Legislatures and the Congress grinding out about 12,000 new statutory laws each year and about 12,000 new decisions are permanently recorded annually.

Judges are trying to interpret statutory laws which have no clear meaning, because they are the results of political compromise, and neither party wanted the intention of the other to be clearly evident.

Economic law is composed of a few relatively simple principles of cause and effect. It is not made through political compromise. It already exists. It can't be tampered with nor misconstrued, because its meaning is clear to any one who will take the trouble to study it out.

It might be said to be the result of centuries of study in the "School of Hard Knocks." How could a law evolved by political compromise be superior to an economic law?

If an economic law is broken, sooner or later the penalty will be paid in full, even though artificial conditions and man-made laws may temporarily delay reckoning.

NO CURE FOR VICTIM OF THE DEADLY COBRAS

Nature Provides a Remedy, Formongoose, the Cobra's Enemy.

You would die within a matter of minutes if bitten by a cobra, the most deadly of serpents. This hooded snake kills thousands of people a year in India alone.

Doctors for centuries have sought a remedy that would counteract the cobra's poison. They have not found it.

And yet there is no remedy, waiting to be discovered.

You've heard of the mongoose, about the size of a ferret. It fearlessly attacks and kills the cobra. Occasionally it is bitten. Die? No. It dashes into the jungle, obtains something that counteracts cobra venom—probably a plant—and returns as if it had never been a victim.

The mongoose by instinct knows the remedy.

That remedy awaits discovery by man.

The solution of every problem lies waiting in nature. Nature has a balance for everything —a cure for every disease, a remedy for every poison. It's all by the basic law that for every action there is an equivalent reaction.

The very existence of a problem means that a solution of the problem exists.

There is no problem without a solution, no barrier that cannot be climbed, no handicap or obstacle that cannot be overcome.

Obviously, it is foolish for us ever to allow ourselves to be discouraged. There is a way out of all trouble—if we will only fight doggedly to find it.

All of man's discoveries and progress are nothing more than copying and adapting things and principles that already exist in nature. The principle of the steam engine is the principle of the erupting volcano. The flying machine is a copy of birds and insects.

Knowledge is simply the discovery of what already exists in nature —the application of basic principles to our needs. The wasp was the original paper maker. The bee building its honeycomb and the beaver constructing his dam utilize about the same structural principles as man. The spider's web furnishes the idea for a fish net.

The list is endless. We create nothing in the way of knowledge. We simply discover and apply things that already exist in nature. Lucky is the man who lives close to nature, for she trains him to think straight.

WHAT'S RIGHT KIND OF LOUD SPEAKER?

Solenoid Type With Wood Horn Considered Most Efficient.

There are three kinds of loud speakers

1. Those by which a simple headphone is attached to a born by means of clamps.

2. Those that have a telephone recevier at the base of the horn, or attached more closely than the first class.

3. Those built on the solenoid principle in which the currents act on a coil placed in the field of a strongly energized magnet.

The last is most proficient, although the other two are effective sound producers. The difficulty with them is that strong signals cause the diaphragm to strike the magnet and produce rattles. Also, when the plate voltage is high a direct current flowing through the magnet exerts a strong pull on the diaphragm and causes distortion.

In the solenoid type the gap between coil and diaphragm is constant and fluctuations of current do not change the impedance of the circuit. Thus, no matter how weak or how strong the signals, the sounds are not distorted.

The shape of the horn, it has been found by experiment, should be straight, rather than curved and the opening has to be regulated in size in porportion to the length.

Wood is the best material. Papiermache also is good. A metal horn gives a brassy overtone and produces vibrations in itself.

JUICY

Last year the American people ate more meat than ever before. The average during 1923 was nearly 170 pounds for every man, woman and child, or almost half a pound a day. A European, accustomed to being able to afford meat only once or twice a week, will consider this proof-positive of great national prosperity.

As far as the health is concerned, meat should be eaten sparingly in hot weather. That's when it does its damage.

CANADA FEATURES EMPIRE PAGEANT

Canadian Program Reveals Dominion's History at Wembley.

LONDON, July 10. — Canadian Press. — Details have now been learned of the great Empire pageant at Wembely from July 21 to August 30. Canada will take a prominent part in this pageant, a representation of some of the landmarks in the history of the Empire. Canada's programme covers the period of her early history from 1604 onwards.

The prelude depicting Jacques Cartie's activities in the New France will show him setting sail from St. Malo on April 20, 1534, reaching Newfoundland, making a circuit of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and his return to France on September 5, 1534, taking with him two Indians. His second voyage on May 19, 1536, his landing at Quebec, and pushing on to Hochelaga, the site of what is now the city of Montreal, and his taking possession of the region, will all be shown in the prelude to the pageant.

The programme of the pageant proper is in six scenes, the first covering from the first permannet French occupation in 1604 of a small island on the Ste. Croix river down to the cession of Acadia to Great Britain in 1713, the capture of Louisburg in 1758, of Quebec in 1759, and of Montreal in 1760. New France as Canada was then designated, will be reproduced in miniature, the culture, manners and customs of Old France, from which its population was wholly drawn. The Sieuro de Monts, de Champlain and de Maissenuve, Governors Montmagny, Courcelles and Frontenac, Bishops Laval, St. Valier and Pontbriand, explorers Joliet, La Salle and La Verendrye, Misionaries Fathers Brebeuf, Lalemant and Marquette will pass before the spectators.

In scene two will be given a representation of the English and the French armies of Wolfe and Montcalm who met in battle on the Plains of Abraham on September 13, 1759.

The arrival in Canada of over 35,000 United Empire Loyalists who during and at the conclusion of the American War of Independence gave up all their possessions in the original 13 Colonies in order to continue to live under the British flag, is shown in the third scene.

In scene four will be depicted the principal characters of the war of 1812-14 between Canada and the United States. Here will be seen Commander-in-Chief Sir George Prevost, Sir Isaac Brock, Sir Gordon Drummond, General Proctor, Sir Jas. Yeo, Col. de Salaberry, the Indian Chief Tecumseh, Col. Morrison and last but not least the heroine Laura Secord.

"The Fathers of Confederation" are the subject of the fifth scene. Here will be shown Sir Etienne Tache, Sir John A. MacDonald, Sir George Etienne Carter, Geo. Brown, Sir Oliver Mowat, Sir Charles Tupper and others.

In the closing scene will be represented the founding of the Hudson's Bay Company in 1670, and the extension of its factories towards Rupert's Land and the Pacific Ocean; the founding of the rival Northwest Co., and of its quarrel with the Earl of Selkirk's colonists on the Red River leading to the murder of Governor Semple, on June 19, 1816; of the fusion of the Northwest and Hudson Bay Companies in 1821; the Northwest Royal Mounted Police; the Canadian Pacific Railway and the National Railway; British Colmbia, and the development of the Prairie lands, the Empire's greatest granary.

NEIGHBORS IN POLICE COURT

Park Street Residents in Altercation Over Cutting of Shrubs.

Two Park street residents appeared in police court today who have lived side by side for many years and who both declared that up to the time of the altercation which resulted in this morning's police court's case, they had always been the best of friends.

Dr. J. D. Deyell reported to the police some time ago that a neighbour had been trimming and cutting his shrubs. On that occasion the matter was disposed of summarily by His Worship Magistrate Langley without requiring the defendant to appear although she had been served.

It was thought that no more would be heard of the matter but this morning Mrs. I. Morris was charged with wilfully and without colour of right destroying twenty or more trees or saplings belonging to Dr. J. D. Deyell.

Mrs. Morris, an old lady was not represented by counsel and was attended in Court by her daughter, who was her only witness. She plead ed not guilty, when His Worship read the charge.

Dr. J. Deyell the first witness for the crown stated that a driveway ran between his and the defendant's prop erty. The driveway is on the Morris property and the line, dividing the properties which had been surveyed a few days ago was situated just along the line of the driveway on plaintiff's side. Just inside that line the row of lilac trees which he alleged were cut by the defendant, were growing about one foot south of the line on his property. He did not see the defendant cut the trees but depended upon an admission which he alleged he had heard the defendant make in the presence of his wife, on which occasion he said that she put her head out of an upstairs window and said: "I have destroyed them again for you." He further stated that he had never had an ill-word with Mrs. Morris in his life.

Mrs. Deyell corroborated his evidence in reference to the admission made by the defendant.

When Mrs. Deyell was asked by the Magistrate for what reason the defendant had cut trees that were not her own, she replied "I don't know, you ask her. We have always been the best of friends."

Mrs. Morris was reluctant in taking the box on her own behalf, but when told by the Magistrate that he could only take cognizance of what she would say under oath, she proceeded to the box and was duly sworn.

The defendant refused to ask the in formant any questions in cross-examination when allowed that privilege by His Worship remarking that "I don't want to have anything to do with him."

"I didn't do anything to make these people angry and never left my own cottage to do anything," Mrs. Morris told Crown Attroney Hatton "I had a man working for me and they complained so much about the trees I just had the man cut them down."

The witness was not clear on dates and it was with considerable trouble that the Crown Attorney obtained her sworn statement.

She denied ever having made any admission to either Dr. or Mrs. Deyell and declared that she had cut no trees on any property but her own.

Her daughter, Miss Etta Morris when aclled to the box threw more light on the matter. She explained that the shrubs were inside the surveyors' line on the Morris property and that since the lilacs were pulled she had run over the place where they grew with the lawn mower. She stated that she knew of no trees or shrubs out or pulled by her mother on the Deyell property.

The Crown Attorney asked for a remand so that he would have an opportunity of using the evidence of the surveyor who surveyed the property.

His Worship in adjourning the case until Tuesday, remarked that he was not sure whether the surveyor's testimony would help or not, for if trees were cut under color of right there is no redress in a criminal court even if the trees were situated twenty feet in on the prosecutor's property.

WOOLLENS VICTORIOUS.

"Y" Girls Were Four Runs Short When the Game Ended.

A soft ball game with a cricket score, was fought out last evening at Central Park, between the Woollens and the Y. W. C. A., the former winning by the score of 32 to 28. Both teams were right there when it came to batting, but neither showed anything startling in the fied.

Miss Gimblett, on the rubber for the "Y" girls, turned in a very good game but was hit rather hard while her team mates gave her ragged support.

Miss Patterson for the Woollens, pitched steady ball throughout but was not up to her regular form.

Batteries: Woollens, Miss Patterson and Miss Mann. Y.W.C.A.: Miss Gimbett and Miss Andrews. Umpire A. Delahaye.

THE K. OF C. OUTING FOR THE ORPHANS

Twenty-five Small Boys of St. Vincent's Orphanage Go to Cobourg.

(Contributed.)

Yesterday Peterborough Council Knights of Columbus were hosts to some twenty five of the little boys at St. Vincent's Orphanage, treating them to an outing to Cobourg. Cars were provided when the little fellows and some eight or ten of the good sisters in charge were taken down to the Orphanage grounds at Cobourg, a most ideal spot for an enjoyable outing. The orphanage grounds there comprise some three or four acres right on the lake front and slope gradually to the beach, and they certainly make an ideal spot for a picnic or social. The Cobourg Knights very graciously looked after some twenty-five of the little girls at the Cobourg institution, and a most enjoyable time was provided for all the little tots. Ball games and races kept the little ones busy for most of the afternoon, after which all sat down to a most enjoyable spread of eatables and refreshments, furnished by the Knights, and the little ones certainly had their fill of ice-cream and candies. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, accompanied by Very Rev. Monsignor McColl, graced the occasion with his presence, and Rev. Fathers Costello, O'Brien, and Corkery were also present. The good sisters in charge were most anxious to make everybody and everything most enjoyable, and were profuse in their thanks to the Knights for their kind consideration of the little ones under their charge. Those who kindly loaned cars for the occasion were Messrs. W. S. Merrell, Thos. McQuillan, J. J. Duffus, W. J. Koster, Frank Hourigan, J. R. Corkery, and James Geraghty.

Mr. J. J. Dorris had charge of all the arrangements, and was ably assisted by Dr. Kennedy, Grand Knight of Cobourg Council.

STRAWBERRY SOCIAL

Held by the Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church.

The strawberry social, held by the Baptist Young People's Union of Gilmour Memorial church, last evening, proved a very successful affair, and was attended by nearly four hundred people, who partook of an excellent supper served on the church grounds, and listened to an enjoyable programmme indoors later for which the pastor, Rev. W. S. Edgar, acted as chairman.

The president of the B.Y.P.U. Mr. Stanley Grant, was general convenor of arrangements.

The programmme incuded short addresses by Rev. P. H. Neville, pastor of the Bridgenorth Methodist church, and Commandant McElhiney of Toronto; also several loudly encored readings by three young ladies, Miss Irene Breckenridge, Miss Jean Hamilton, and small Phyllis Moore, vocal solos by Miss Daisy Murray of Springville, and Mr. Alan Milburn, and several good selections by the Senior Band of the Salvation Army.

Owing to the absence of an auctioneer, the autograph quit, which was to have been auctioned off, remained with the owners until a later occasion.

A REAL HIGH-PRICED BABY

LONDON, July 11. — Geoffrey Russell, a sturdy, good-looking youngster of three, playing with other youngsters in a London park stands out from them because:

First—He is the most expensive baby in modern British, and perhaps, world history.

Second—He is the central figure about whom has pivoted the most sensational and scandalous divorce case tried in modern times in London.

Third—He is the full-established heir to the baronetcy of his grandfather, Lord Ampthill, a former viceroy of India, and, therefore, if he lives, destined to be head of the great governing clan of the Russells.

At present these things don't mean anything to him. He lets his parents do the worrying and the scrapping And his mother, who has charge of him, can't make up her mind.

"I don't know,' 'said Mrs. Chris tabel Russell to me, 'whether I will shape his education with a view to putting him in the army as is usual with young men of good family or whether I will be an ultramodern English mother and train him for business—despite his future title. Fortunately there's plenty of time to thing about it.

"The more pressing question is what I will do with my own future. For the past three years, at the same time that I have been fighting this case, I have also been conducting a very prosperous hat and gown business right in the heart of Mayfair. But now I have reecived a very tempting offer to go on the stage.

"I can't make up my mind. I have been fighting for so long that I am just a bit weary."

Here is the story in brief of that famous fight:

In November, 1921, fashionable London was startled when it was learned that Hon. John Hugo Russell, eldest son and heir of Baron Ampthill, one of the produest men in the House of Lords, had filed suit for a dissolution of his marriage with Christabel Russell on the ground of misconduct with a man unknown, in consequence whereof a child was born on Oct. 15, 1921.

Two men whose names were given were also cited as correspondents.

The jury found the defendant not guilty as to the two men whose names were given. It disagreed as to the charge about the unknown man.

This was in July, 1922, after a nine-day trial.

In February, 1923, after an 11 day trial ,the husband won, securing a divorce decree nisi. In this second trial the defendant was again accused of misconduct with an unknown man and also with a new per son whose name was given.

The jury found that she was not guilty of misconduct with the man who was named, but found the charges true as the unknown man. It seemed a shocking verdict and ap peal was at once lodged with the Court of Appeal.

By this time half the important lawyers at the London bar were engaged on one side or the other. The Court of Appeal dismissed the wife's appeal July last after two days' hearing.

But this determined woman—fighting for her own honor and for the name and future of her son—had just begun to battle. She instructed her attorneys to take the case to the supreme tribunal of the kingdom—to the Law Lords of the House of Lords.

Last March this august body for four days heard the arguments on law points. And on May 30 last by a vote of three to two they sustained the wife.

Lord Birkenhead, who presided and who gave the principal finding, said the whole case boiled down to one point—unless the evidence given by the husband, who was the petitioner, was receivable, there was no evidence of misconduct proper to go to the jury at all. He held that the husband's evidence should not have gone to the jury. In this he was sustained by Lords Finlay and Dunedin.

And now unless the husband can produce entirely new evidence to sustain his charges the case is settled forever.

The case so far in lawyers' bills and court charges has cost $250,000.

RADIO KILLS BIRDS

Members of the United States Biological Survey report the death of thousands of birds annually due to radio. They are not electrocuted, but they meet death by crashing blindly into aerials.

INSULTED, SAYS THE DOG CATCHER

Magistrate Langley had a brisk day in police court. No sooner had he temporarily disposed of a quarrel between two old Park street neighbours when James Gates, City Dog Catcher, appeared to press the charge which he had laid against Morris Abramson for using grossly insulting language towards him on the morning of July 7 in the vicinity of Inverlea Park.

Mr. Abrahson was defended by Mr. W. F. Huycke while Mr. Gates conducted his own prosecution.

Mr. Gates declared that on the morning of the 7th that the defendant while riding a bicycle over Smith street bridge hailed him by prefixing several very strong adjectives to his name. Mr. Gates was standing in Inverlea Park at the time and Mr. Abramson was going east on the bridge.

On his return he related that the defendant shouted "Ha, ha, ha," at him.

Continuing he told His Worship that he was surprised to be greeted by such an expression and yelled back at his adversary "I'll make you pay for that."

Mr. Huycke asked Mr. Gates if he know Mr. Abramson and he replied that he only knew him by sight.

Mr. Huycke —"Is it customary for you to be called such names by comparative strangers?"

Mr. Gates —"No."

Mr. Huycke —"Did this man hold any grudge against you."

Mr. Gates—"Yes, I warned him about riding on the sidewalk with his bicycle."

Mr. Huycke—"You are not policeman and have no authority to do that."

Mr. Gates—"Yes, I have as a citizen."

The defendant emphatically denied ever having made the alleged remarks to Mr. Gates and said that on both occasions when he passed him, while riding on the bridge he hailed him by shouting "Hello, Jimmy Gates."

Mr. Gates then assumed the role of counsel for the prosecution and with folded arms stepped forward and said to the accused "Don't you think you ought to be ashamed of yourself to stand up there and tell all them lies."

"I never lied," the witness emphatically replied.

Mr. Huycke submitted to His Worship that the evidence was contradictory and that the Crown had refused to establish any case.

"Anything to say," the Magistrate asked Mr. Gates?

"Nothing except that I have told the truth and he has told a parcel of lies."

"Is there any more reason why I should believe you than the accused," His Worship asked.

"Yes," Mr. Gates replied, "for if he didn't call me what I said he did I wouldn't have summoned him."

"Case dismissed, without costs," said His Worship.

Mr. Huycke then announced that the counter charge brought by Mr Abramson against the City Dog Catcher would not be pressed.

His Worship proceeded to inform Mr. Gates of this fact.

"I should think he would, after getting out of the one I laid so easy," was the cool retort of Mr. Gates.

PASSING AMENDMENTS.

It is Difficult For Farmer to Get Release Under Bankruptcy.

OTTAWA, July 11. — (Canadian Press). — The passing of amendments to the Bankruptcy Act of special application was recommended unanimously by the Commons Banking Committee this morning. Under the existing law it has been found in the west that it is very difficult for the farmer to get release under bankruptcy order as the courts have held that he must put up $200 as security for fees of trustee before he can take advantage of the Act under legislation recommended by the committee in provinces where a debt adjustment officer has been appointed by the province. The farmer may take advantage of his services without fees, though it is provided that he "shall be entitled to his lawful disbursements."

TO-DAY'S QUOTATIONS AND OPINION AND REVIEWS OF THE MARKETS.

MINING MARKET.

The mining market was much the same as the past few days. Hollinger showed some good buying; stocks like West Dome Lake were weak but even this strengthened up toward noon.

The Toronto and Montreal markets were active with transactions spread over a large range of issues. Natonal Breweries came in for a good deal of attention and got up to a new high for the movement. Very heavy trading took place in Brazilian traction. Toronto rails were active; no volume of any importance was done in any of the others.

NEW YORK MARKET.

The New York market sold off right from the opening this morning, continuing the reaction that set in during the late hours yesterday despite this some issues sold at their top figures and remained at their best prices. The low priced rails came in for a good deal of attention on the reaction and prices were bid up at noon. We expect to see a renewal of the decline before the close.

PENSIONS MAY BE PERMANENT

Bonus Recommended to be Absorbed Into Basic Pension Rate.

REPORT TO COMMONS.

OTTAWA, July 11. — (Canadian Press). — The House of Commons Committee on Soldiers' Pensions in its third report tabled in the House of Commons this afternoon recommends that the existing pension bonus of fifty per cent. be absorbed into the basic pension rate. This would make the permanent increase in the rate of pension for single totally disabled men from $600 to $900. The committee concurs for the most part with the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Re-establishment in regard to legislation affecting ex-soldiers and their dependents.

The report recommends that a "meritorious clause" which provides for grants to exceptional cases, be limited to those cases which appear to be "specially meritorious." Such cases should have the approval of the Governor-General in Council as well as the Board of Pension Commissioners and Federal Appeal Board. The report recommends an amendment to the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Act to overcome technical objections raised in respect to the appointment of such staff as is required to meet special conditions arising in carrying on the work of the Department.

WHERE TO PARK CARS.

In view of the number of visitors who will be in the city to-morrow, and of the fact that the Market Square will be occupied part of the day, the Board of Education has given the use of the Central School grounds, with entrance off McDonnel Street, and of the grounds in the rear of the Collegiate Institute, with entrance off the lane to the west of the grounds, for the parking of motor cars.

WIRELESS IN ARCTIC.

The Oxford University arctic expedition is to be fully equipped with wireless transmitting and receiving apparatus. The sledding party which will explore the islands north and east of Spitzbergen will carry both types of apparatus, and the airplanes will be armed with radio.

CAN THE PETES DERAIL FLYING QUINTE OUTFIT?

Crucial Game in the Second Half Race at Riverside Park To-morrow.

OLD RIVALS CLASH.

Belleville Have Won Seven in a Row and Expect a Victory Here.

Can the Petes stop the flying Belleville Grand Trunks in to-morrow's big game at Riverside Park?

That is the question that is agitating not only Peterboro fans but ball enthusiasts all over the Central Ontario League circuit, who realize that if somebody doesn't de-rail the Moguls soon they will be so far in front in the gallop for the second half honors that the race will be virtually over at the half-way post.

Winding up the first half, the Trunks won four games in one week, and would have tied the Ponies for the first half honors if they had any help from the Petes.

And then they started the second half just where they left off the first, winning their first three starts, giving them seven wins in a row.

They admit they were off color in Belleville Wednesday, but expect to come back to-morrow with a win that will place them right at the heels of the Trunks and in a good position in the race.

It will be a battle of right-handers, Oulette, the Belleville "iron man," opposing Heckman, and it should be a tidy tussle.

Hundreds of visitors here for the Orange celebration will see the old rivals clash, and for their benefit and also to allow the fans a chance to see the procession, the game will be called at 3.30 o'clock.

QUAKER OATS TROUNCED VETS IN SOCCER GAME

The Vets Were One Goal Ahead in the First Half.

SCORE TWO TO ONE

Two Clever Goals by Wyllie and Williams Won Two Points.

The Quaker Oats gave the G. W. V. A. a set-back last evening in the Senior Soccer League when they won two valuable points by the score of two goals to one before a fair attendance of spectators at the Oval.

Missed an Open Goal.

The Vets lost the toss and were hemmed right against their own goal when Mayette completely baffled Wasson, then crossed an open goal, where Frock was at a disadvantage as T. Williams tapped a ball past the upright. A corner kick travelled the same way a few minutes later. A raid by the Vets' right wing resulted in Pellow having to fist clear. At the other end Williams broke through on his own, but Wasson gave away a foul which Craig landed high over the bar. Frost at centre-half was playing a sterling game. He travelled up the field, passed forward to Griffine, who tested Pellow with a low ground shot, but the goalie kicked clear.

Griffine Opened Scoring.

Dilatory play by Butler left Griffine the opportunity to score as he shot hard and fast along the ground that Pellow couldn't handle. At this period of the game the Quakers were supreme, but unfortunate in front of goal. They played combination, dribbled and passed across the goal time and again, but kicked past carelessly instead of steadying themselves to shoot. Half-time—Vets, 1; Quakers, 0.

Half-Time.

On resuming Richard turned out at outside left to complete the Vets' team. Mayette at outside right was always dangerous and placed a beautiful corner kick that Frick had to jump up in the air to fist clear at the same time as a number of heads were waiting the ball.

Quakers Equalized.

After five minutes of play the Logan and Mayette combination kept the ball moving nicely. The outside right passed along the ground amongst a sea of legs. Logan shot hard, Wasson checked, until Wyllie caught on to beat Frick all the way for the equalizer.

Quakers' Winning Goal.

Both goals were narrow escapes, until a complete movement by the Quakers' forwards left the Vets' defence in a quandry. Wyllie beat two players in succession, and running in on Vets' goal, Frick checked him cleverly as the ball rolled back out to Williams, who put the Quakers ahead with a low grounder amidst great excitement.

Six Forwards Tactics Used.

After this sudden the Vets pressed continuously against the Quakers' defence, and Honor at full back outplayed the Vets' forwards in every attack, and T. Craig, who was moved around to fill up the weak spots, put up an excellent brand of soccer. The Vets' six forwards tried repeatedly to even up the score, but the final whistle sounded, announcing the Quakers winners by two goals to one. Full-time—Quakers, 2; G.W.V.A., 1.

Goal-scorers — Quakers, Wyllie and T. Williams; Vets, Griffine.

G.W.V.A.—Frick, goal; Crowe and Wasson, backs; Underwood, Frost and Bertard, half-backs; Wade, Clark, Griffine, Gash and Richards.

Quakers—Pellow, goal; Honor and Butler, full-backs; Terrace, Craig and Walker; Mayette, Logan, Wyllie, Wilson and Williams, forwards.

Referee—J. L. Howarth.

ENGINEERS ARE INTERESTED IN PETERBOROUGH

Journal of Engineering Institute of Canada Boosts This City.

LOCAL FIRMS.

Peterborough is Prominently Mentioned in News and Advertising Columns.

Peterborough receives good advertising in the current number of The Engineering Journal, which is a special edition of three hundred and sixty pages covering and elaborating the World Power Conference proceeding at Wembley. The advertising is the one hundred per cent. kind, not paid for by the city but telling in the manufacturers' words of the many lines of engineering supplies that are made and built in Peterborough.

The William Hamilton Company Limited has a full page, illustrated with two cuts, advertising the equipment manufactured in the big Peterborough plant. Twenty-eight processes and equipments are mentioned as part of the diversified output of this factory.

The Canadian General Electric Company Limited has three pages devoted to the Peterborough plant, including photographs of the exterior of the plant here, the interior, and the huge 54,000 Kv.a. generator built for the Hydro Electric Power Commission. The first picture is captioned "Bird's eye view of our main electrical works at Peterborough, Ont., covering 46 acres." It is pointed out that of the forty units installed at the Niagara Falls electrical stations twenty eight were supplied by this company. The generator built at Peterborough are among the largest water wheel driven machine in the world.

In the news columns of the magazine too, Peterborough is prominently mentioned in connection with its electrical development schemes. A night view of George street is given as illustrating the ideal lighting system, and of this the accompanying letter press says: "The tendency is to obtain the maximum illumination on the road surface, and at the time to allow a sufficient percentage of light in the upward plane, thus beautifying the general appearance of the street at night."

District Represented

The district too is represented in an advertisement of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Co., Limited and in discussion of the Trent system of water power development with illustrations and plans covering the entire system. A beautiful photograph is included of the Healy Falls development plant on the Trent River, where 16,800 h.p. is developed.

All of the papers presented at the World Power Conference by eminent Canadian engineers are given in this number of The Engineering Journal ,and despatches from the scene of gathering of thirty-one nations at Wembley indicate that the strides of Canada in power development in all fields is being followed with world-wide interest.

P. Manning of Peterborough is named as Associate Editor of the Journal.

HAMILTON IS ON SAME AS OTHERS

Name of City Placed on Large Map at British Empire Exhibition.

MONTREAL, July 11.—(Canadian Press).—"Hamilton was on the map all right and it was there in large letters," commented H. R. Charlton, manager of the advertising bureau of the Canadian National Railways, when his attention was drawn yesterday to a despatch from Hamilton to the effect that George C. Coppley, former mayor had succeeded in placing the name of Hamilton on the large illuminated map which is displayed in the Canadian National Railways' exhibit at the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley.

"As a matter of fact," continued Mr. Charlton, "Hamilton was placed on the illuminated map in exactly the same sized letters as used for Montreal, and I cannot understand what Mr. Coppley is being given credit for.

RITOLA LOWERS WORLD'S RECORD

Steeplechase Over 3,000 Metres in 9 Minutes, 33 Seconds.

ABRAHAMS LOST.

OLYMPIC STADIUM, COLOMBES, July 10.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The tragedy of yesterday's events was the defeat of Harold Abrahams, Cambridge crack sprinter who finished last in the 200 metres, which was won by Jackson V. Scholz of New York. The glory of the day was the worlds' record established by Finland's "iron man", Willie Ritola, who did the 3,000 metres steeplechase in 9 minutes, 33 3-5 seconds.

The United States won two out of three of the day's finals when Dan Kinsey of Illinois defeated Atkinson of South Africa for the laurels in the 110 metres hurdles. The United States team thus has won six first places, Finland has taken four and Great Britain, two.

Broken by three days of fierce running, Harold Abraham's defeat in the 200 metres was forecast. His British running mate, Liddell, was out-paced by two United States runners and took third place in the race. Paddock showed first in front after the bark of the gun. As the dozen racers sped before the stand he increased his lead and the 150 metre mark found him with two feet of a lead on his flying compatriot, Scholz. The New Yorker increased his pace here, however, and they seemed to be making a dead heat. Just before they crossed the line Paddock turned his head, breaking his stride almost imperceptibly. Scholz broke the tape but Paddock was so close he was proclaimed winner by the crowd as he faltered and sank to the ground. However, the announcers boomed out the fact that Scholz had won in the Olympic record time of 21 3-5 seconds. Abrahams, who had taken the measure of the world's best sprinters for three days without equal, was forgotten in the cheers.

In the steeplechase, Ritola, who started off Sunday by breaking the world's 10,000 metre, was running for his fourth consecutive day, but seemed as fresh as when he started out to make Olympic endurance history. This gruelling race over hurdles, obstacles and water jumps, gave Finland's point score a big boost, for Ritola's countryman, Katz, finished second, seventy five metres behind the winner, while another Finn, Ebb, took fifth place, after being beaten out for fourth by Marvin Rick, New York A.C.

The steeplechase has only been run once before in the Olympics.

LIDDELL BROKE WORLD'S RECORD FOR 400 METRES

COLOMBES, France, July 11. — E. H. Liddell, Great Britain, won the final of the 400-metre run. Liddell again broke the world's record, his time being 47 3-5 seconds. D. M. Johnstone, of Montreal, was fourth.

GOVERNMENT HAS CONTROL OF THE REBEL SITUATION

Revolt Was Not Purely Military, But Has a Political Aspect.

PROGRESS GOOD.

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 11 (United Press). — The Government has complete control of the situation, a brief communique of the revolt in Sao Paulo said to-night.'

It was indicated, however, that the remaining rebel strongholds have not yet been reduced, although they are surrounded by loyal forces.

Apparently the rebels are in two groups, in the Luz Military Barracks, near the big Luz railway station, and the Santa Ana Barracks, about ve miles away.

A rigid censorship continues, and any estimate of the total dead and wounded is impossible. It is probable the figure will never be given out.

Late official advices confirm the reports that the revolt was not purely military, but has a political aspect.

The names of the political leaders involved, however, are not mentioned in the official communiques.

Government forces are in complete controlof Santos, and apparently there at any time .

Government forces have been using Santos as a base of operations ever since the fighting started, and have transferred all prisoners to that city, from which they are brought to Rio de Janeiro on naval transports.

The Senate and the Chamber of Deputies to-day adopted resolutions declaring their complete support of the Federal Government, President Barnardos, and the Sao Paulo State Government.

The noon communique said:

"Military operations against the Sao Paulo rebels are following their normal course. The progress of the loyal troops continues satisfactorily, while the Sium of the rebels become more difficult hourly.

"The number of desertions from the rebel camp is increasing.

"Governor Carles De Campes continues in Sao Paulo, and his loyal state troops are co-operating with the Federal units."

CAMP CLAN ALPINE HELD LAWN SOCIAL

Dancing on the Lawn Took Place After Supper and a Jolly Time Was Spent.

A very successful lawn social was held yesterday evening, under the auspices of Camp Clan Alpine, No. 36, of the Sons of Scotland, on the beautiful grounds of Worthy Chief J. Grierson. Mr. and Mrs. Grierson were hosts of the evening. Tea was served on the lawn, of which a large and appreciative company partook. Dancing on the lawn followed, an eightsome reel in which the most of the company took part opened that part of the night's entertainment. The Misses Hemphill followed with the Highland Fling. These clever little ladies captivated their audience with their light and graceful dancing. Quadrilles and waltzes and other ballroom dances followed. At intervals during the evening various members of the company contributed to the evening's enjoyment. Bro. Bob Hendry sang and told stories in his own inimitable style. Bro. A. Clark led the community singing and contributed a solo. Piper Milne showed his versatility by piping for the Highland numbers on the programme and then singing a comic song. Bro. Grierson caused considerable laughter by his rendering of a humorous Scottish reading. Messrs. S. Parkins, J. Parkins, Wm. Taggart, and D. Anderson, with their string and concertina combination, provided the music for the ballroom dancing and entertained the company with an instrumental quartette beautifully rendered. Ice-cream and strawberries were handed round later in the evening by the Misses Grierson, assisted by Master Joe Grierson. Bro. H. Richmond successfully performed the duties of M.C. Bro. A. Jackson closed what was aptly termed by one of the company as a "braw Scottish nicht," by moving a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Grierson for the very enjoyable evening. At the close of the evening the entertainment committee intimated that they would probably put on another evening in the course of the next two weeks, and advised the members to watch the back page of The Examiner for the date.

Robertson Birks is Now Leading the List, With Bill McPherson Second.

In the Rotary bicycle contest, in which the various boys and girls are working energetically, the two boys, Bill McPherson and Robertson Birks, are keen rivals for premier place. On Wednesday, Bill McPherson had first place, while young Birks was second. To-day the order is reversed, with Robertson Birks leading the roll call, and Billy McPherson coming after him. Archie Cocks, Walter Ridley, George Barns, Sam. Dewhirst, Chas. Clark, John Wilson and Charley Joyes come next, in order as named, and, in the girls' section, Eileen McCoy leads, followed by Helen Souie, Georgia Haggis and Margaret Ridley.

JONES PLAYS HOBO IN LATEST PICTURE. "THE VAGABOND TRAIL"

Fox Star Does Fine Work in Film at Strand—Marian Nixon Gives Excellent Support.

"The Vagabond Trail" is the story of Donnegan, a red-headed hobo who was redeemed through love for a girl. It is full of tense, dramatice interest and contains much action as well as considerable humor.

The audiences which have seen it at the Regent all have been extremely well pleased, as they could hardly fail to be with Charles Jones starring and Marian Nixon playing the lead in so excellent a production.

Jones, good in any role, is exceptionally well cast as this reckless and fearless vagabond. Jones will always be at his best on a horse with a six shooter in either hand. And so was Donnegan.

Marian Nixon makes a very appealing Lou Macon —well worth the sacrifice Donnegan makes for love of her. She always makes an effective leading woman for Charles Jones because her petiteness contrasts so strikingly with his massive strength and her light-hearted gayety with his rather ponderous seriousness.

They are supported by an exceptionally good cast including Frank Nelson, George Reed, L. C. Shumway, Virginia Warwick and Harry Lonsdale.

The story is by George Owen Baxter and adapted to the screen by Doty Hobart.

William Wellman, who handled the direction, has done a great deal toward bringing into it all the western atmosphere possible. Milligan's dance hall is perfect in every detail as is the western saloon, the main street, the post office and all the rest.

AT THE ROYAL.

TOURNEUR'S "BRASS BOTTLE" IS EXCELLENT ENTERTAINMENT AT ROYAL

Maurice Tourneur has a hitherto unsuspected gift for high comedy.

This is the most important bit of news to come from the Royal Theatre this week. In "The Brass Bottle" the First National picture which opened there yesterday the great Frenchman reveals a new angle of his talent. With much of the intense drama, the mystery, the eerie that has fascinated his followers in the past, "The Brass Bottle" has yet another element—fantasie.

In previous pictures the "poet-producer" has relieved his intensely dramatic sequences with chuckle provoking bits. In "The Brass Bottle" he gives sore laugh-muscles a chance to rest while the spectators' interest is gripped.

Photographically the picture gives Tourneur the opportunities he always seeks. There are gorgeous scenes in a palace from the Arabian Nights — fountains, latticed door-ways, turbaned Nubians, veiled dancing girls, bejeweled enunchs, rich tapestries, swinging lamps, velvet hangings. There is a caravan — camels and howdahed elephants with luxuries of the Orient—issuing from the fog in a London street. There is a jazz-genie leaping in a cloud of smoke and fire from the bottle in which he has been imprisoned for many thousand years There is an angry mb storming through the night to the country home of an English gentleman whose maid has been mysteriously slain. There is an axe, wielded by unseen hands, beating down a door.

But despite its strongly melodramatic note, the piece is a farce-comedy, a fantasie without measure of doubt. Giggles, chuckles, hearty laughs that punctuated the showing last night made that certain.

And oddly enough , for a motion picture, there isn't a bit of action in the whole seven reels that could be called funny. There isn't a single comedy prop; not a foot of slapstick. The laughs come from the situations.

As for the cast—Ernest Torrence probably captures the honors in his weird role of Fakrash-el-Aamash, an Arabian Nights' genie.

Harry Myers as a sort of second "Connecticut Yankee" runs Torrence a close second in the race for honors With serious mien he provokes laugh after laugh as he finds himself in ludicrous situations. Charlotte Merriam romps through her ingenue part with ease.

The cast is replete with well-known names ,which means finished actors. There is Tully Marshall, Barbara La Marr, Ford Sterling, Otis Harlan, Sam De Grasse and Roy Coulson.

AT THE CAPITOL.

NOTED ARTISTS AND SPORT CELEBRITES TO BE SEEN IN FILM

Film fans who laugh daily at the antics of Barney Google and Spark Plug, Abe Kabibble and Jiggs will have an opportunity to see the creators of these famous cartoon celebrities in "The Great White Way," Cosmopolitan's big new surprise picture, which opens at the Capitol Theatre on next Monday.

Woven around life in New York, the new film has in its cast some of the most famous artists and cartoonists in the country. Among those whose pen and pencil sketches have become famous the world over and who will be seen in the picture are: Billy De Beck, Harry Hershfield, George McManus, Nell Brinkley, Fay King, Hal Coffman, J. W. McGurk, Winsdor McCay and others

In addition. "The Great White Way" brings to the screen other famous Broadway celebrites including Damon Runyon, Irvin S. Cobb, Earle Sande, H .C. Witwer, Ned Wayburn "Bugs" Baer and Joe Humphreys. The professional cast features Anita Stewart, T. Roy Barnes, Oscar Shaw and Tom Lewis. E. Mason Hopper directed the film, which was adapted to the screen by Luther Reed from H. C. Witwer's story, "Cain and Mabel."

With Constance Talmadge in "The Dangerous Maid," and the always popular Harold Lloyd in the comedy, "Eastern is Western," there is a good programme at the Capitol Theatre for this week-end.

The feature, "The Dangerous Maid," is one of those romantic historical dramas that takes its audience back to the days of powder and patches and ruffling gallants. Constance Talmadge and Conway Tearle have the stellar roles in the adaptation of Elizabeth Ellis' story, "Barbara Winslow, Rebel."

It is an entertaining feature with plenty of atmosphere of the historical type, and the manners and customs of bygone, colorful days reproduced faithfully around a story based on the adventures of a rebel and his sister, the fair Barbara Winslow of Durford. Constance Talmadge, although she poses considerably, makes an excellent figure as a fugitive from justice, assisting her rebel brother to escape from the clutches of the king's men. She presents the same faultless and serene demeanor at all times, but there is a good deal of modern zip in the scenes which depict her rather tumultuous courtship.

"The Dangerous Maid" is an interesting tale of the days when knights were bold, and men strutted about in fine laces and feathered bonnets. The power of the "high justice, the middle and the low," was centred in the hands of the king and his ministers, and they used it for their own devices. The infamous "hanging judge," the powerful and unscrupulous Judge Jeffreys, wit hhis "insatiable thirst for blood," occupies a prominent position in this picture, with Colonel Kirk, his right hand man, as the villain of the piece.

When the fair Barbara Winslow of Durford masquerades as a man, in an attempt to save her brother, a rebel, from the clutches of the King's men, she has some notabe adventures with the handsome Captain Prothero, played by Conway Tearle.

Harold Lloyd is as funny as usual in "Eastern is Western," a comedy in which he becomes involved in hilarious situations that include a Ku Klux Klan meeting, and a session with some lovely dancing girls.

SHOW GIRL HAS BIG INSURANCE

Carries Fifteen Policies, She Says, Because of Her Dangerous Stunts.

DANCERS INSURE.

One of the young ladies engaged in a hazardous stunt in the amusement aggregation now camped in Riverside Park, remarked last night that she carries fifteen insurance policies. She said that sometimes it takes a great deal of her earnings to meet the payments on her policies that are securely locked up in her home, somewhere in the United States.

Life insurance is popular with show people, as is indicated by the immense sums for which performers insure their lives, and many also carry large sums in accident insurance, protecting them against the loss of limbs essental to the performance of their stunts. A partnership insurance arrangement with the two famous dancers, Adelaide and Hughes, as just been closed by which they are protected with $50,000 life insurance each.

The partners carry on business as dancing instructors, each being essential to the success of the undertaking. This form of insurance is becoming very popular with the theatrical profession, providing as it does, a large cash fund on the death of either partner in a team.

WORLD WIDE RADIO.

Whole World Will Be Served by Single System.

LONDON, July 11. — (Canadian Press).—The whole civilized world will eventually be served by a single system of radio broadcasting, it was predicted to-day before the world power conference in joint contribution made by W. J. Brown, of the metropolitan cities, Great Britain, and Dr. W. H. Easton, of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company of the United States. The system, it was stated, would be based on the use of inaudible short waves sent out by large stations and caught by small local stations which would re-broadcast them on audible wave lengths.

Heckman is still leading the Peterborough hitters with a mark of .361 in fifteen games, while Max Swanston has hammered his way into the .300 class and into second place. The Petes' backstop shares with Legon the honor of making the most hits, each having 18 to his credit, while Swanston is also second in run-getting. "Hap" Harrison is another regular who is batting his way to the top, the big first sacker's five hits in eight times up in the last two games placing him close to the charmed circle, while he leads the Petes in driving in runs, supplying transportation for eleven counters. Swanston is second in this department, sending in nine counters with timely hits. Only five regulars—Heckman, Swanston, Legon, Harrison and Holyman—are batting above the .250 mark.

FROM BATBOY TO A MAJOR LEAGUER

Howard Freigau, of the St. Louis Cardinals, Realized Boyhood Ambitions in Three Years.

NEW YORK, July 10. — Jumping from batboy to regular third baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals in three years, Howard Freigau realized the greatest of his boyhood ambitions in much less time than he ever dreamed he would. He told the story when the Cardinals were at the Polo Grounds on their recent eastern invasion.

Freigau related that he first attracted the attention of Branch Rickey, the Cardinals' boss, when he was playing high school baseball. At the end of his high school course he received offers from several colleges, but on the advice of Mr. Rickey went to Ohio Wesleyan. There he began studying for an A. B., but before he finished his course he became a B. B. (batboy), because the college diamond did not give him enough baseball.

Manager Rickey had engaged Freigau during the summer to look after boys admitted to the St. Louis park, and when the Cardinals went on the road Freigau went along as batboy so that he could continue his study of big league baseball without hurting his status as an amateur player.

Freigau, however, had ruined that status by playing semi-pro games on Saturdays and Sundays and, when the athletic authorities at Ohio Wesleyan heard of this, the youngster was advised that his playing days on college diamonds were over. The player communicated the information to Manager Rickey, who immediately signed him as a player.

"That was in 1922," said Freigau. "Last year I made myself as handy as a could, and this year I made the grade as a regular."

LOCKWORKS WIN FROM EXAMINER

Newspapermen Scored 8 in Last Frame, But Lost Game 11 to 10.

FIGHT ALL THE WAY

Scoring eight runs in their half of the seventh the Examiner tied up the game with the Lockworks, only to lose out when the Lockworks batted out their half of the seventh. The finals score was 11-10. The last innings was played in darkness and the ball was hardly distinguishable.

By their victory last night the Lockworks are now leading in the first half with four wins and a loss. The Westclox have three wins and a loss and if the Quaker Oats defeats them in their game, which is the last of the first half the Lockworks will win first half honors. But, if the Westclox turn in a win with the Quakers the two teams will be tied for first half honors. The Lockworks only loss was to the Western Clock.

The Lockworks deserve credit for their win last night and they played real ball. They would have won the game long before they did but with an eight run lead Manager Burke decided to give Donnely a chance on the mound. He was wild and 2 hits with four walks gave the Examiner 6 runs, and he was yanked in favor of Conqors who had started the game. Connors was cold at the go in and two runs were scored but as soon as he warmed up he held the newspaper gang. Two runs were scored off him before the side was retired.

Both teams turned in some bad fielding, the Examiner being the worst offenders. The errors of both teams accounts for the largeness of the score.

Connors started for the Lockmakers and Donnely took up the burden in the sixth only to have Connors come back and save the game in the seventh. Scates started for the newspaper crew and Marchen finished.

The Examiner scored two in the first on a walk, a hit and three errors. They did not score again till the seventh when they registered eight runs on four walks, two hits and four errors.

The Lockworks scored five runs in the first on two walks, two hits and four errors. They scored two more in the second on a couple of hits and errors. They did not register again till the fifth when they scored two more runs on a hit and four errors. They scored another in the sixth and came through with the winning counter in the seventh on one hit and an error the catcher being unable to see the last ball pitched on which the batter fanned but the ball went back to the grandstand and the winning counter came in.

The lineups are as follows:

Lockworks—Thorndyke, cf; McDugal, 2b; Hunt, 3b; Collins, c; Jobbit, ss; Hunter, rf; Nicholls, lf; Black, 1b; Conors, p, lf Donnely, p, lf.

Examiner—Baker, rf; Dugan, 3b, c; Taylor, 1b; Franks, 2b; Marchen, c, p; Clarke, cf; Collins, ss, 3b; Grey, lf, rf; Scates, p,ss; Dewhurst, lf.

Score by innings:
Lockworks .... 5200211—11
Examiner .... 2000008—10

NURMI CROWDED DAY WITH TWO BIG TRIUMPHS

Finland's Distance Runner Raced to Spectacular Victories in Two Events.

BROKE RECORDS

Pickard of Canada Took Fifth Place in the Pole Vault.

OLYMPIC STADIUM, Colombes, July 11.—(Canadian Press cable.)—Within two hours yesterday afternoon Paavo Nurmi, Finland's great distance runner, raced to spectacular victories in the 1,500 and 5,000 metre events, breaking the Olympic records at both distances and winning an Olympic triumph such as no individual has ever achieved before.

Nurmi captured the 1,500 metre run against a fine field, in 3 minutes, 53 3-5 seconds, clipping off 3 1-5 seconds from the old record, but failing by 2-5 of a second to equal his own world record. He won the 5,000 metres from his fellow countryman, Willie Ritola, in 14:31 1-5 seconds, beating both the Olympic and world record by several seconds.

The United States demonstrated superiority in the pole vault and hammer throw, the remaining finals of the fifth day of the Olympic competition, and lengthened their point lead over the nations in the duel for international athletic supremacy.

The glory went in double measure to Nurmi, was also shared for the day by the young United States stars, Fred Tootell, Boston A.A., who captured the hammer throw by a decisive margin from his countryman, Matt J. McGrath, New York A.C., veteran of four Olympics, and Lee Barnes, the 17 year old California high school boy, who won the pole vault laurels in the jump-off with his coast rival Glenn Graham, after they had tied for first place at a height of 3.95 metres, (12 feet, 11 1-2 inches), which equalled the Olympic record. In this event Pickard of Canada was fifth.

Dark Horse Won.

A hero sprang to the front in Joseph Imbuach, unsung and unheralded Swiss whirlwind, who won his heat in the second trials of the 400 metre run in the world record time of 48 seconds, a performance which came with startling suddenness.

A crowd of nearly 25,000, the largest since the opening day, assembled in the expectation of witnessing the greatest of struggles of honors in the epic Olympic battle, and they were not disappointed. They saw, and paid deafening tribute to, probably the greatest single day's athletic achievement in memory, when Nurmi swept over the line winner, in his second effort of the day, of the 5,000 metre run after a thrilling race with his fellow countryman, Willie Ritola, who earned no small share of the glory himself when, competing for the fifth straight day, he pushed his more illustrious team-mate to a record in a finish which saw the two Nordick stars only one yard apart.

Perhaps even more amazing than Nurmi's triumphs, which seemed a foregone conclusion, were the marvelous statmina and speed of Ritola, already twice a victor in record time, who, though racing 26,000 metres in five days, yet had power to run stride for stride with the world's fastest distance man.

Nurmi's 1,500 metre victory was so decisive as to rob it of the spectacular elements of the longest race.

Nurmi slowed up crossing the finish line, looking over his shoulder at Scharer, a Swiss star, who came from the ruck, to take second place in the last few strides from Stallard, Great Britain, who collapsed at the tape just as his team mate, Lowe, the 800 metre winner, came through to capture fourth place.

The 5,000 metre run was a three-cornered affair for nearly two-thirds of the distance with Elvin Wide, the Swede, keeping pace with Nuprmi and Ritola, far ahead of the rest of the pack. But through the final stages the two Finns fought it out alone, while Wide, thoroughly beaten for the second time in the Olympics by his Scandinavian rivals, was lucky to save third place.

After Wide, the pace setter for five laps, had been shaken off, Nurseemed also would distnace Ritola and giving the champion another hollow victory.

But Willie of the iron heart and iron legs rallied, after slipping ten metres behind, and over the last lap matched stride for stride with his countrymen. For a fraction of the route, rounding the last turn, it looked as though Ritola might make good his bid for a third victory, and shatter Nurmi's hopes; but the latter had reserved enough to keep a stride ahead to the tape in a finish that had the throng on its feet in a bedlam of cheering.

These triumphs saw Finland's fortunes in the high tide, but though the chief contender against the United States for Olympic laurels ran up 31 points yesterday afternoon, the United States, tallying in all four events and monopolizing the pole vault and hammer throw, added 41 1-2 to their score.

Thus, with three days left, the United States holds the total of 176 1-2 points to 103 for Finland. Great Britain is third with 46 1-2, and Sweden fourth, with 24 1-2.

Washington Down.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—(Canadian Press).—Washington lost clear claim to the American League leadership yesterday for the first time since it attained that position June 24, by losing the first game of a double-header to Detroit, 12 to 10, after thirteen innings. The defeat sent the Senators into a first place tie with New York, which won two games from Chicago. The second game went only five innings to a 3-3 tie, because of darkness. Scores:

JUVENILES PLAY OFF ON SATURDAY

Championship of the First Half is at Stake and a Good Game is Assured.

The championship game for the first half of the Juvenile series will be played on Saturday afternoon at the Exhibition Grounds, between the Maple Leafs and the Curlers. Both teams have met twice before this season, the Leafs winning one to nothing in their first game while the Curlers won from the Leafs by the score of 3 to 1 on Tuesday evening. The Curlers' win on Tuesday night tied up the first half and a play-off is necessary. Both teams are full of confidence and the Leafs with a strengthened line up expect to hand Alex Kay's hopefuls a trimming while Alex Kay who has nineteen men to pick from will surely trot a smart team on the field for the fixture.

NURMI CAPTURES DOUBLE VICTORY

Two Hours After First Victory He Won 5000 Meter Final Race.

COLOMBES STADIUM, July 10 (Canadian Press). — Paavo Nurmi, the great Finn, crowned himself with glory as a double Olympic winner, and one of the greatest distance runners of all time, when two hours after winning the 1,500 meters in Olympic record time, he won a thrilling victory in the 5,000 meters from Ritola, his fellow-countryman, setting another Olympic and world's record.

Fred Tootell, United States, won the hammer throw for the United States, and the United States also won the first two places in the pole vault.

JOHNSON GREATEST?

Jimmy Dunn, Cleveland manager who made a world champion of Johnny Kilbane, says Jack Johnson the negro, was the best heavyweight champion he ever saw.

GOLF KINGS CAN'T WIN TWO IN ROW

No Professional or Amateur Has Repeated Since 1913.

BY JOE WILLIAMS

The golf champions, as usual, are being bumped off with uniform regularity this season. Bobby Jones was unable to repeat in the American open, although he was a bang-up second to Cyrli Walker, the winner. Arthur Havers couldn't do it again and the British open went to Walter Hagen for the second time in three years.

Roger Wethered was unable to duplicate his 1923 success in the British amateur. Doris Chambers had the same experience in the British women's tournament. James Ockenden watched his French open title pass into the hands of Cyril Tolley. So far not a single major champion has been able to repeat this season.

Three major championships remain to be determined in America, professional match play, men's amateur and women's amateur. What will be the fate of Gene Sarazen, Max Marston and Edith Cummings, respective champions? It will be more than a mild suprise if any of the three should win.

Once in a while a champion does repeat, but not often. Sarazen, come to think of it, repeated last year in the professional event. Golf as she is golfed today is entirely too clusive a proposition even for the genius to master over a prolonged stretch. It is not the fixed science that tennis, baseball or billiards is.

The top-notcher is not always among the leaders when the sands in the bunkers grow cold. What's more, the fields are growing bigger and tougher. Instead or three or four stars the defending champion must fight off a dozen or more. There aren't more than five strokes difference between the best golfer in the land and the 19 others that rank closest to him.

Johnny McDermott was the last professional to win two titles in a row. The Philadelphia scored successively in 1911 and 1912. Jerry Travers was the last amateur to repeat, winning 1912 and 1913. There have been no repeaters in these events in the last 10 years. It is significant that golf has enjoyed its greates growth during this same period. This may forecast that the repeater has passed for all time.

SLAUGHTERED

Autos in New York City in a year kill 413 children under 16 years of age and injure 11,252. The victims over 16 include 464 killed and 21,915 injured.

With very few exceptions, these accidents could have been avoided by proper caution on the part of both motorists and pedestrians. With car registrations increasing swiftly, compulsory caution is inevitable—probably by gearing machines down at the factory so they can't exceed a speed of 15 miles an hour.

Mrs. A. G. Hawthorne sister of the bride acted as bridesmaid while Mr. Nelson Foy supported the groom.

After the ceremony a dainty lunch con was served at the home of the bride. The young couple left on a motor trip to Toronto and Hamilton on their return will reside in Peterboro.

BANK INSPECTION GOES TO SENATE BY SMALL VOTE

Looked For a Time as Though the Government Would be Defeated on Amendment.

THIRD READING.

Conservative Leader Referred to "Selfish Grasping Adventures" on Bank Directorates.

OTTAWA, July 12.—(By Canadian Press).—A bill providing for Government inspection of Canadian banks passed its final stage in the House last night and now goes to the Senate. There were several Progressive amendments and in one instance, it looked for a time as though the Government would be defeated. This was an an amendment by E. J. Garland of Bow River, providing that loans by banks in excess of ten per cent of their paid up capital could not be made without the unanimous approval of the directors. Conservative and Progressive leaders alike voted in favor of the amendment and it was ony defeated by 69 to 57, twelve votes from the opposition side (eight of them Conservative) going with the Government. Another Progressive amendment was defeated by 94 to 42.

His motion, Mr. Garland said, would prevent unwise loons which could be negotiated by a quorum of three directors.

Mr. Robb said it was noticeable that those who were pressing for bank inspection were not assisting in the passing of the bill yesterday afternoon. No good purpose could be served by Mr. Garland's amendment He indicated the difficulty of summoning directors from a long distance in order to have unanimouse decision on some particular loan.

Mr. Shaw pointed out that the amendment only applied in the event of the loan being in excess of ten per cent. of the paid up capital.

Right Hon. Arthur Meighen said that too much destriction of banks would have the effect of making it hard to get bankers to do any business at all. Nevertheless he felt that the Garland t amendment perhaps went to the heart of the real trouble about the banking business to-day. It was not the shareholders of a bank that depositors needed to be protected against. It was the "selfish grasping adventurers" who got themselves on bank directorates and proceeded to play havoc with the assets who really victimized the depositors and shareholders alike. Unless he heard something to indicate that there was a flaw in the Garland amendment he felt like supporting it. Providing it took the right road to mending the weakness which it referred to, he had more enthusiasm for it than for the particular legislation now under discussion.

POPE RATIFIES AN ANNULLMENT

Boni de Castellane Civilly Divorced and Former Wife Re-wed.

IS NOW FREE.

ROME, July 12. — (Canadian Press)—Pope Pius yesterday ratified a decision handed him by the special commission of Cardinals which he had appointed to examine and decide the Boni de Castellane-Gould case, whereby the religieus marriage of the present Duchess of Talleyrand the former Anna Gould, to the Marquis Boni De Castellane is annulled.

Shortly after he and the former Anna Gould were divoreed, Count Boni De Castellane tried to obtain from the Vatican an annulment of their marriage but failed. After she had married the Duke De Tallyrand, Count Boni renewed the application. He was quoted as saying the situation was anomalous with the church still considering Anna his wife, although she had been civilly divorced and re-wed.

The Origin of Orangeism And Some of Its History

With the celebration in Peterborough today of "The Twelfth" by the Orangemen from all over this district is recalled a long history that reaches back to the years 1680 and 1795. In those years there existed in Ireland a body of Protestant enthusiasts known as the "Peep-of-day Boys," and from this organization the Orange Lodge as it is known today developed. The first Orange Lodge was established in Loughgoil, County Armagh, Ireland, on September 21, 1795.

The name of the Association, of course, is taken from the Prince of Orange, William III, honoring him for his maintenance and defense of the Protestant faith.

William was the posthumous son of William II or Orange, and the eldest daughter of Charles I of England. In 1686 he became head of a league of German Protestant Princes whose object was to curb the power of Louis XIV of France, who in turn had as an ally James II of England.

On November 5th, 1688, William, Prince of Orange, landed in England at the head of an army of 15,000 composed of English and Dutch. His success was rapid and bloodless and James fled to France. On December 18th the Prince entered London in triumph and was subsequently proclaimed King with the title of William the III of England. The adherents of James held out for some time in Scotland, and for two years in Ireland, but the Battle of the Boyne fought on July 1st, 1690, between a combined English Scotch and Dutch force commanded by William in person, and an Irish army with James at its head, marked the end of the struggle. Save Derry and Enniskillen, all Ireland declared itself for James, who was defeated and routed at the Battle of the Boyne, and two days later sailed in a frigate for Brest, to the land of his exile. The mess of an English regiment to this day retains a relic of the Boyne. The spurs worn on the battlefield by Major Toby Purcell, who led the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, are still preserved by the corps, and are always in possession of the senior major for the time being.

The Boyne, where the great historical Battle of the Boyne was fought, is a river rising in the Bog of Allan, and flowing through Kildare, King's county, Meath, and south to the Irish sea.

The Orange Association

Organized in 1795, by November 1798, the Orange Society reached the dignity of a Grand Lodge of Ireland, with a Grand Master and a Grand Secretary and a formal establishment in the metropolis; and in the following years the organization extended over the entire Province of Ulster, with ramifications in all Protestant centres in Ireland.

In 1808 the association extended to England and a Grand Lodge was founded at Manchester, from which warrants were issued for the entire Kingdom.

The seat of the English Grand Lodge was tranferred to London in 1821.

In 1813 the Grand Lodge of Ireland was dissolved, but its functions were discharged vicariously through the English lodge.

In 1827 the Royal Duke of Cumberland was elected Grand Master for England, and on the re-establishment of the Irish Grand Lodge in 1828 he was proclaimed Imperial Grand Master.

In 1829 and subsequently, lodges were organized in Wales, Scotland, Canada, the Mediterranean and in other colonies, and today the avowed principle of the Orange Association is the maintenance of religious freedom and individual equality.

WHEAT EXPORT HAS IMPROVED

And Vancouver, For First Time, Has Bigger Tonnage Than Montreal.

CANADIAN PORTS.

OTTAWA, July 12. —(Canadian Press).—For the first time on record the exports of Canadian wheat via the port of Vancouver, have exceeded the exports via the port of Montreal. For the ten months ended June 30, 1924, the wheat going out from Vancouver amounted to 50,691,096 bushels, as compared with an export for the same period at Montreal of 47,262,196 bushels.

The exports to overseas countries via Canadian seaports show considerable improvement for the ten months ended June 30, 1924, compared with the same ten months of 1922 and 1923 The proportion of the total exports of wheat to overseas countries going via Canadian sea ports in 1922 was 26 per cent.; in 1923, 35 per cent. and in 1924, 45 per cent.

FIVE MEN ARRESTED.

Believed to be Dangerous Thugs— Shot Two Detectves in Bank.

WINNIPEG, Man. July 12.—(Canadian Press).—Five men believed to have been associated with Percy Hoggey, who shot and wounded two members of the Winnipeg detective force on Thursday in attempting to avoid arrest were rounded up by the police yesterday.

Moggey, according to the police was the leader of a desperate gang of thugs which has been operating in Winnipeg and district for some time. The men under arrest are: Bill Bodnar, a 15-year-old youth; George Budick, Norman Davison and two others who gave their names as Brusvic and Jeffreys.

They will face a series of charges when arraigned in police court.

DOMINIONS STAY OUT CONFERENCE

MacDonald Thinks Inclusion Would Indicate Favoritism of British Group.

MET COMMISSIONERS.

LONDON, July 12.—(Canadian Press).—The meeting between Premier Ramsay MacDonald and the Dominion High Commissioners in London yesterday to discuss the question of Dominion representation at the Inter-Allied Conference to be held in London on July 16 in connection with the Dawes' report on reparations lasted over three hours.

Although nothing official has been issued about the meeting, it may be taken for granted that the Premier advanced a number of objections to direct participation by the various Dominions in the coming conference and urged that such participation would be deemed by other countries as unduly favoring the British element at the conference.

The High Commissioners have resolved to submit to their respective governments all the views advanced at the meeting.

While the meeting decided nothing definitely as to participation by the Dominions in the conference of July 16, it may be taken as a certainty that Premier MacDonald intends to maintain his present attitude against Dominion representation.

POLICE CHIEFS WOULD CONTROL REVOLVER SALE

R.C.M.P. Commissioner Has a Plan For Co-operative Action Along This Line.

POLICE IDEALS.

Officer Must Have Only One Paymaster and Be Scrupulously Honest.

OTTAWA, July 12. — "There is no doubt that something shoud be done to contol the enormous number of revolvers loose in the country," Colonel Courtland Sternes, Commissioner of the Royal Canadain Mounted Police, declared before the convention of the Chief Constables' Asseciation of Canaad here yesterday.

Col. Starnes thought there was not much use of legislation controlling revolvers being passed in Canada unless the country knew what the United States was doing in the matter.

"I would suggest," Col. Starnes remarked, "that the executive of the Chief Constabes Association take the matter up in this way: That representatives of the various police forces in the large cities, Federal, Provincial, Municipal, along with the customs officials, get together, and study the problem, and make recommendations. I believe the Minister of Justice would be glad to take notice of any such recommendations."

The need of action to control revolvers was urged by Colonel Starnes during the reading of his paper on "Co-operation." Col. Starnes spoke of the ideals of a police force, and declared that a policeman should be scrupulously honest and have only one paymaster. They should be actuated by a spirit of elation rather than by rivalry. Overlapping and trespassing on each other's field should be avoided, but one force should help the other.

Speaking of the large number of cases handel by the R.C.M.P., Col. Starnes said that the volume of work had considerably increased in recent years. The number of cases handled in 1920 totaled 12,000. This total had jumped to over 16,000 in 1923.

Supt. A. W. Cawdron, of the Criminal Investigation Branch, R.C.M.P., read a paper prepared by Inspector of Detectives Guthrie of Toronto, on "Criminals, The Police and the Public." In his paper, Inspector Guthrie spoke of the ingenuity of criminals. Some of the best business and professional men in the country were made to look foolish by some criminal. What a valuable asset criminals would be to the community if they employed the same brains for legitimate purposes!

The duty of every citizen was to protest against the releasing of criminals, Inspector Guthrie continued. There were numerous instances of individuas who had committed serious crimes being released before completing their sentence or allowed to leave court on probation without supervision.

Past President, Supt. Rogers of Toronto, in his paper on "Extradition," dealt with various phases of extradition and emphasized the need of making evidence in extradition proceedings, as short, clear and concise as possible.

By unanimous decision of the convention, ex-Staff Inspector Robert Gregory of Toronto, ex-High Constable R. A. Boyle of St. Catharines and ex-Chief Slemon of Brantford, were made life members of the associations.

HOSIERY TO SHOW.

Finds Business Good.

A general merchant living a few miles from the city, reports his business in June the briskest he has experienced in many months. His collections were more than satisfactory, and the total volume of business exceeded that of June, 1923, by a considerable margin.

A year ago he had a truck cruising the country for eggs. This year he was too busy to visit the farmers, but his egg trade apparently did not decline, for two weeks ago today he handled one thousand dozens. He finds his affairs running smoothly and profitably, ahead of last year's, and much better than some gloomy reports from other sections indicate.

AN ORANGEMAN INSPIRED HIM IF ANYONE DID

Senator Donnelly Defends Himself Against Allegations of Partizanship.

ON CHURCH UNION.

An Anonymous Letter Created a Stir in the Senate— Widely Circulated.

OTTAWA, July 12 (Canadian Press). — An anonymous letter on church union created a stir in the Senate yesterday afternoon.

Senator Robertson brought it up on a question of privilege.

"About fifteen minutes before the House met to-day," said Senator Robertson, "an honourable member of this House came into my room and showed me a typewritten memorandum that has been circulated among some members of this House. I have since learned that it has been suggested, in some quarters at least, that I knew something about the origin of this anonymous communication that has been handed to some honourable members respecting a subject that was under discussion yesterday (church union). The typewritten memorandum is one that, to my mind, should be absolutely condemned, and that we should all deplore, as I am sure we do. It reads as follows:

"'Watch how the R.C.'s like Lynch-Staunton and Donnelly come out against union. That is inspired. You know the feeling in the West in favour of it. Can you not say a word to offset Gillies?'

"This bears no address, and bears no signature. I want to say that so far as I am concerned and so far as anybody that I know connected with the forwarding of the Bill referred to is concerned, that they not only have had nothing to do with such work as that, but they absolutely and most unqualifiedly condemn anyone who would interfere or make such statement or reference.

"There are no gentlemen in this House whose views I would respect more than those of Senator Donnelly and my friend Senator Lynch-Staunton of Hamilton; and I want to say here what I said to the gentleman who brought me this copy, that I think that sort of tactics—and similar tactics were indulged in a few weeks ago when the Bill was discussed in another place—ought to be condemned, and if the originator could be located, he ought to be severely reprimanded."

Talked to Orangeman.

Senator Donnelly: "As my name has been mentioned in what the Senator has just read, I wish to say that as far as anything I had to say being inspired, the statement is entirely false. I have never discussed the Church Union Bill with any clergyman belonging to the Roman Catholic Church in any way, shape, or form. I have never received a suggestion from any layman of the Roman Catholic Church as to what stand I should take in this matter.

"If I received any inspiration at all, I might say that ten minutes before I spoke in this Chamber, a personal friend of mine of thirty years' standing, a prominent Presbyterian, met me at the door, and did talk the matter over with me. I am not going to give you his name, but he is a man who has been very prominent in the Orange Order for a great many years. So that if I received any inspiration that was the source. The gentleman to whom I refer is an old personal friend of my leader here (Hon. Sir James Lougheed). I just wish to emphasise that I never discussed the matter in any way, shape, or form with any clergyman of my Church."

THE WEATHER.

Highest temperature yesterday, 84 degrees; lowest last night 54 degrees. The morning of "the Twelfth" gave every prospect of a fine day for the celebration here. By way of reminiscence it may be noted that the last celebration held here was in 1920. The weather was threatening, and sharp showers fell at 11 a.m., and also at 3 in the afternoon. Four years previous to that date (in 1916) the Orangemen paraded here in one of the hottest of hot days. The thermometer was up to 93 degrees until late in the afternoon. 1912 was fine, and comparatively cool; 1908 was also fine, but somewhat warm, with temperature of 87 degrees. The year 1904 witnessed a very heavy thunderstorm on the Twelfth. Rain came down in torrents, and the noise of the thunder alternated with that of the big drum. That it rained is evidenced by the fact that the total was 1.98. The Twelfth in the year 1900 was a beautiful day for the celebration here. The Orange officials have taken out 'rain insurance' for this afternoon between noon and 3 p.m., with the Hartford Co., but there is little likelihood of them collecting aything.—W.P.

FRENCH REVIEW DEBT PAYMENTS

Settlement Must be Just. Not Mathematical, Says Herriot in Chamber.

GERMANY MUST PAY.

PARIS, July 12. — (Canadian Press).—The joint text drawn up in Paris by Prime Minister MacDonald and Premier Herriot during their interview in connection with the Inter-Allied London conference represents all the progress that has been made up to the present toward an accord between France and Great Britain, the French Premier declared before the Senate yesterday, explaining his negotiations with the British Prime Minister. He said that the Chequers interview bound neither country.

Replying to interruptions concerning Mr. MacDonald's declaration in the House of Commons on the Inter-Allied debts, M. Herriot repeated the substance of the Chequers conversation, which was confirmed in the joint text of the Paris interview, in the course of which Mr. MacDonald agreed that both Governments should study the question in a spirit of equity.

Senator Dausset, who preceded M. Herriot, declared that the Dawes plan surely reduced Germany's debt to the Allies and that France consequently was justified in asking a reduction of her Inter-Allied war debts. He asked the Premier if he was taking steps in that direction, and also whether he had in view an early funding of the war debts without which the stability of French currency is impossible.

M. Herriot answered that he was powerless on the question of the war debts and could only appeal to the spirit of equity of the Allies, which he had done at Chequers. He agreed with Senator Dausset that it was impossible to stabilize French currency before the debts which were hanging over the country were disposed of. But, he added that no other means of action than a repetition of the argument that in the common fight into which the Allies had put their resources in common, France was the heaviest losers.

Senator Raymond Poincare, former Premier, interrupting, said that the Americans, when they were ready to ask for payment of the sum owing to them, would surely propose arrangements running over a considerable number of years, "and as long as we continue to pay, Germany must be made to continue to pay us."

"The Inter-Allied debts ought not to be settled mathematically but justly," M. Herriot added.

The Dawes plan, he said, would continue to be called "the Dawes plan" in honor of "the most devoted and disinterested of the experts." He thought, however, that the Bonar-Law proposition of January, 1921, offered better terms.

BILL PROHIBITS MAKING ILL-WILL

Offence to Publish Matter That Causes Hostility Between Classes.

PREVENT TROUBLE.

OTTAWA, July 12.—(Canadian Press).—The bill introduced in the House yesterday afternoon by S. W. Jacobs (Liberal, George-Etienne Cartier, Montreal) proposes an important amendment to the Criminal Code in regard to the publication of false and seditious matter. The bill aims at preventing the publication of such matter when published with the intention of producing such feelings of ill-will and hostility between different classes of a community that a breach of the peace is likely to follow or lawful business pursuits to be interfered with.

Under its provision everyone is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to two years imprisonment, "who prints or publishes matter with the intention of producing, and which produces or has a tendency to produce, such feelings of hatred and ill-will between different classes of residents in Canada, or between residents in Canada and any class of persons intending to become residents in Canada, as may or is likely from the nature of such matter to incite any person to commit a crime in disturbance of the peace, or any breach of the peace, or to prevent such resident or class of residents engaging in lawful and peaceable pursuits, and any person who prints or publishes such matter shall be deemed to intend the consequences which naturally follow from the printing or publication of such matter at the time and in the circumstances in which the matter was printed or published."

Owing to the approach of prorogation, it is unlikely that the bill will advance far this session.

JULY TWELFTH BRINGS A BUSTLE TO PETERBORO

Four Year Cycle Turned a Stream of Loyal Orange Celebrants Into City.

SCORES OF LODGES.

Early Risers To-day Found Streets Already Crowded and Prettily Decorated.

Very different from the celebration of one year in which six men, two women and a boy took part is to-day's big Loyal Orange demonstration in Peterboro, with scores of lodges taking part and thousands of brethren crowding the streets.

Nobody knows at what time the visitors left their beds, but long before city folk arose the roads leading to the Orange mecca of the day bore their hundreds of cars packed with members of the Order, and by nine o'clock this morning it was a difficult matter to steer an automobile through the dense traffic on the main streets. And for that matter it was no easy thing to push a way through the crowds that thronged the sidewalks.

At 5.30 this morning a gramaphone on George Street awoke the early echoes with a stirring rendition of "Boyne Water," and followed it up with other Orange and patriotic marches. Half an hour later the first fife band paraded down George Street, and the day's big doings had officially started. From then on impromptu parades were the order, a little body of Orangemen accompanying one of the bands to meet every incoming train with its quota of brethren.

Since the demonstration was held in Peterboro last, in 1920, hundreds of cars have made their appearance, where formerly scores were wondered at, and to-day the highways probably carried as many visitors as did the railroads.

Railroads Busy.

In spite of the large numbers carried by the cars, however, the railroads were still busy. The Norwood Orange Lodge was the first group to make an appearance on George Street. They arrived on the 7.35 C.P.R., and were welcomed by the Caledonian Band, which led them in their march.

The fife and drum band from local Lodge 1175 welcomed the visiting lodges as they arrived at the C. N. R. Station on the morning trains. Marshals J. J. Cunningham, Chas. Wright, J. H. Spence and W. J. Hancock, representing local lodges, were also present, astride white steeds, in readiness to direct the strangers.

Representatives of the Order from Lindsay, Omemee and Lakefield arrived at 8 a.m., and were led by a local brass band to the Armouries.

Cobourg was represented by the Maple Leaf and Baltimore lodges, comprising men's, ladies' girls' and boys' groups. The Cobourg special pulled in about 9.30 a.m., just one hour late, and besides the Cobourg lodges brought Orangemen from Port Hope, Campbellcroft, Fraserville and Millbrook. It was estimated that 300 arrived from Cobourg alone, headed by the famous Kiltie Band.

The majority of the streams contain at present but a small quantity of sluggish, muddy water, and in some water courses and lakes, islands which no person knew were there have appeared, so rapidly has the water fallen.

Martyr's on Altar of Medical Science

Little Victims at the Peterborough Laboratory Under Observation.

The little guinea pigs and the black squirrel that are destined to serve as testing fields for various inoculations as time goes on, and that have their home in a special compartment of their own at the local branch of the Provincial Health Laboratories, appear to be in a cheerful state of mind. It is not at all likely that the public at large is worrying to any extent over the happiness or otherwise of these invaluable little creatures, but an Examiner Scribe had an opportunity of observing them, and was much struck by the absence of gloom in their demeanor. For small things whose inevitable fate "hangs heavy, heavy overhead" and who can't fortell with any degree of certainty as to whether they will draw a last breath under the influence of a dose of spinal meningitis germs or from an inoculatin for typhoid, they are remarkably lively specimens. Even the one small black squirrel, whose reactions to a certain type of virus are now the subject of thoughtful consideration, seems quite oblivious to his fate.

Just what peculiar influence overshadowed the cradling of these little things in a matter for intriguing of the imagination. Why should one guinea pig, for instance, go the casuall way of his kind, carefree and unhampered, while another achieves a martyr's crown, so to speak, by becoming a victim in the cause of advancing scientific investigation? Albeit unwillingly, because they certainly do not offer themselves in the cause, still they are sacrificed in scientific research, and there is a certain atmosphere of interest attach ing to the tiny creatures peering out of their cages with black and red eyes. Some are like little Herkshires in color, dark and wiry, others are tawny colored.

A devotee of the cult of the Hindoo might consider that such scientific victims had arrived at a high level in their march through various incarnations, is the belief of the followers of Vishnu and Siva. Just how they would view the reparation for previous sin made by a victim on the altar of science is a matter for conjecture.

MEMORIAL FOR CAMPBELLFORD

I.O.D.E. Interested in Work of Securing Something Suitable For Town.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 12. — When the war broke out the ladies of Campbellford organized a Chapter of the I.O.D.E. so as to be in a position to carry on a systematic work on behalf of the men from this district who went overseas. Of that organization Mrs. E. J. Free was the first Regent, a position which she held for a number of years. Another lady who served as Regent was Mrs. J. P. Archer, who was succeeded in that position by Mrs. W. H. Ashton, the present official. Mrs. A. Haig has discharged the duties of secretary for several years, and these officials have always been assured of the active and loyal support of all the other members. While the war was in progress every effort was made to brighten the lives of the men who were at the front, in trench or hospital, and when peace was declared the work that the I.O.D.E. had undertaken was directed to a campaign to care for the widows and orphans, and to those who had been disabled in the service of the Empire, and to raise funs to erect a fitting memorial to those who had been left behind under the white crosses on Flanders' fields.

What Has Been Accomplished.

The I.O.D.E., assisted by the members of the Bemersyde, the Junior Chapter, of which Miss Hazel Atkinson is Regent, has been able to raise by their own exertions the sum of $1,500 for a war memorial.

The Town Council supplemented this at the beginning of 1923 by a grant of $500, and duplicated this donation in January last, so that the total amount now available is $2,500.

What Form of Memorial.

There has always been a difference of opinion here as to what form this memorial should take, but Councillor Johnston brought the matter to an issue recently when he introduced a resolution in the Council, providing that plans for a Town Hall be prepared by a firm of Peterboro architects, who would also furnish an estimate of the cost. After the plans had been secured the resolution, which was adopted, provided that a by-law be submitted to the taxpayers, the proposed building to be erected as a memorial, a tablet, carrying the names of the fallen heroes, to be set up or some other recognition of their service to be made.

The Present Status.

The Council appointed a special committee, consisting of Mayor Meyers, Councillors Johnston, Kingston and McDonald, to confer with the I.O.D.E., and one meeting was held, when it was decided to ask the Seymour Council to co-operate. A favorable answer to this request has been received, and a joint meeting of the three bodies will be called at an early date.

The Veterans Interested.

Within less than a year the veterans of this town have taken part in three services when monuments in memory of their fallen comrades were unveiled—at Trent Bridge, Hastings and, no later than last Sunday, at Norwood. Naturally they wonder why Campbellford, the largest community of them all, should be the last to move in this direction.

Veterans May Organize.

When the veterans returned from Norwood they held a meeting in the officers' quarters in the Armoury when the question of forming an independent organization of returned men was discussed. Another matter to come before them was the proposed memorial building, and the sentiment appeared to be unanimous against the idea. A memorial, in the opinion of the veterans, should take the form of a monument, and not be linked up with any public utility which would rob it of its significance.

The veterans are inclined to leave the settlement of the nature of the memorial to the general public, the majority of whom, when the matter was presented to them as a financial problem, would turn it down as meaning an increase in the debenture debt. There are, they believe, only three classes in the community competent to deal with this subject—the mothers and other relatives of the dead, the returned men who understand better than any non-combatant possibly can, the sacrifices that were made by their fallen comrades, and the members of the I.O.D.E., who from the first have worked so unselfishly on behalf of the movement.

For Those Who Mourn.

Capt. Hyland was one of the most outspoken at the meeting of veteranе, and one most in favor of organization. A monument, in his opinion, is the proper memorial, and he advocated that a small plot of land near the centre of the town be purchased for a site. This could be fitted up as a park and furnished with seats, where mothers and widows could sit around the monument, which would in effect mark the graves—although these graves be thousands of miles away—of so many departed friends. Capt. Hyland can see little in a public building that will cause the minds of the people to revert to the sentimental associations a memorial is designed to perpetuate.

Want Camp in Campbellford.

An organization of veterans could accomplish something worth while in securing the annual camp of the Northumberland Regiment for Campbellford this year, the town which is now the headquarters of the Regimental Band, and of the Signal Corps. Such an affair would bring hundreds of visitors and thousands of dollars to Campbellford, as well as being an excellent advertisement of the town's natural advantages.

AT YOUNG'S POINT.

Bride Recently From England Married in St. Aidan's Church.

YOUNG'S POINT, July 12.—A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock July 9th., in St. Aidans' Church when Malinda Barrick of Harrogote Yorkshire, England, became the bride of Mr. Frank Bell of Douro, Rev. J. L. Hughes officiated.

The bride who recently came from England entered the church on the arm of Mr. Andrew Wilson to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Hughes, and looked very pretty in her wedding gown of ivory merle satin with customary veil and wreath of daisies with maiden hair fern. She also wore a beautiful rope of pearls, one of her wedding gifts and carried a boquet of Ophelia roses.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wilson where a dainty buffet luncheon was served.

After a very pleasant evening spent in music and social intercourse the happy young couple left amid showers of rice and good wishes for their future home in Douro.

Mrs. Bell arrived from England on the steamer "Montrose."

Mrs. H. Bronson and her two sons have gone to Mount Julian where they intend spending the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Browning visited in Peterboro on Thursday.

Mrs. Fortier accompanied by her daughter, Miss Mona, spent July with her sister, Mrs. Kearney.

Mrs. McDonlad of Lindsay was in the village on Friday.

Mrs. Alex Spence was in Peterboro on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lamponia of Windsor, who have been visiting the latter's brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Ellsworth left for home yesterday morning after having spent a pleasant week.

Miss Linda Barrick of Harrogate Yorkshire, England spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson and Miss Phelan were visitors at the Lakeview House on Tuesday.

Mrs. Collar was in Peterboro last week.

NEWS OF MARMORA.

Chicken Supper Served to a Large Crowd of Visitors.

MARMORA, July 12.—A delightful chicken supper and strawberry festival was held on the grounds of Holy Trinity church, North Marmora, on Tuesday evening.

Those in charge worked hard to serve the large crowd in attendance. Many journeyed from Marmora and Deloro to patronize this popular event.

In addition to the supper there was a refreshment booth and fish pond.

Mrs. G. R. Hartley, of Marmora, sang two excellent solos. Rev. Mr. Redding of Bannockburn, supplied music, both on the piano and bells. A very enjoyable evening was spent by all.

BACKWARD.

Most problems of economics adjust automatically if given enough time.

High sugar prices tempted Cubans to plant a larger crop for 1924. The larger crop smashed the wholesale market price.

Overproduction is the surest, quickets way to lower cost of living. (Also to lower incomes).

COMMUNITY PICNIC HELD BY FARMERS

Farmers From Dummer and Douro Motored to Rice Lake For the Day.

WARSAW, Juy 11. — The annual community picnic held by some of the farmers of Dummer and Douro, was celebrated this year at Serpent Mound at Rice Lake. Fourteen automobile loads stared from Miller's Corners, and went by way of Indian River, Allendale and Keene, south to beautiful Rice Lake, where Mr. R. Turner of Peterboro, has his summer home.

The picnicers were shown every courtesy by Mr. Turner, who gave the ladies and gentlemen who wanted to go in bathing the use of his garage and boathouse for dressing rooms.

There were both old and young at the picnic. The ages of Mr. Anderson, Mr. Payne and Mr. Edwards corbined would come very near to the two and a half century mark, all the way down to Master Kenneth Drain, six months old.

Over 70 persons sat down to dinner and tea, which was served by the ladies of the arty. After dinner the bathers furnished qute a lot of amusement for the rest of the party. Some very chic bathing suits were worn, and thanks are due the gentlemen who so kindly and efficiently taught the ones who could not swim.

After tea was served Rev. Mr. Atkinson gave a short address, in which he said he was sure he voiced the thoughts of all present in saying how much he had enjoyed himself, and as it was the first community picnic he had ever attended it said he hoped that it would not be the last.

It was suggested by Mr. J. A. Crowe, as all were in favor of making the picnic an annual affair, officers should be appointed to look after it. Mr. (Rev.) Atkinson put the motion to a vote, and the following were appointed:

Pres., Mr. J. A. Crowe; vice-Pres., Mrs. Arthur Edwards; secretary, Mrs Robert Moore.

It was then decided to hold the next community picnic at Hiawatha.

After a vote of thanks to the ladies for the bounteous provision made for the inner man, baskets were packed, cars cranked, then ho! for Home and the Cows.

IN ALL THE WORLD NO CAR LIKE THIS

Jewett families know the joy of a motor car
that's not a toy

WHEN a family buys a Jewett they marvel at the vast difference between the ordinary light, flimsy, under-powered car—a "toy"—and Jewett's husky weight and power.

Any trip they want to make, they make in comfort and on time! No "babying" of the Jewett—no question about mastering strange roads or hard hills.

Jewett remember, has full fifty horsepower. It weighs 2850 lbs.—200 to 400 lbs. more than "light" sixes. Has 6-inch-deep frame—all-steel universal joints—Paige-Timken axles front and rear. A ruggedness inviting confidence.

At anywhere near $1645 Jewett Six has no equal. Never before such power, strength, sheer ability, roominess, convenience. We can prove to you the truth "in all the world no car like this."

SATURDAY, JULY 12, 1924.

THURSDAY'S TRAGEDY.

The community was shocked at the tragedy which cast its gloom over the Masonic outing on Thursday.

It is the irony of fate that on an occasion such as this when the steamer "Stoney Lake" was carrying a complement of men, with not a woman or child on board, the first fatal accident in the history of this well-known steamer should take place, when many thousands of children on hundreds of Sunday school and other picnics have been transported in perfect safety on the craft that has so long been commanded by Capt. William Scollard.

The record of the "Stoney Lake" has been remarkable in so far as immunity from tragedy is concerned.

Thursday's drowning accident apparently was a mishap that could not have been anticipated, the unfortunate young man falling off a portion of the steamer not usually accessible to passengers.

NO PLACE FOR FISH HOG.

Rice Lake, according to all reports, is enjoying unprecedented popularity this year with an unusually large amount of fishing being done.

The motor car brings this famous fishing ground much closer to large centres than it used to be, and the result is a constant influx of visitors.

The increase in popularity of the district is a welcome one because tourists spend money, and when money is in circulation everybody benefits to some extent at least.

But a double responsibility evolves out of the increase of visitors.

It should be seen to that sportsmanship dominates the fishing operations at Rice Lake, and secondly, that the stock of fish is constantly replenished.

The word should go out that Rice Lake has no welcome for the fish hog—for the man whose idea of sport is to catch a boat-load of fish and leave them to rot in camp or take them home in hundreds.

There are some of these enemies to sport at every fishing ground, and friends of Rice Lake should be on their guard against their operations at that favourite fishing ground.

The law allows a certain number of fish to be legally caught, and the limit must be observed if the present good fishing is to continue.

The prosecution of a few offenders would have a very beneficial effect.

HANDLING THE TRAFFIC.

In handling motor traffic during an occasion such as today's Orange walk it seems to the Examiner that the simplest and most effective method of solving the problem is to divert all vehicles off George street in the business section during the parade.

This was done last year at Cobourg with entirely satisfactory results.

Policemen simply diverted every car that attempted to go up or down the main street into a side street and the procession was given a clear right-of-way while the spectators who lined the streets had an uninterrupted view of the lodges and bands.

This seems the only effective way of dealing with motorists, many of whom use very questionable judgment in attempting to drive through crowded streets, or very questionable taste in stopping their cars in a position to block the view of people who have been waiting for hours to see the procession.

The majority of drivers on occasions of this kind are merely out to view the paraders, and they should be restrained from endangering the safety of or interfering with the pleasure of their fellow-citizens.

Close George street to traffic during parades like today's and the result will be satisfaction for the public generally.

The motor car has its usefulness in the general scheme of things, but it has no place in the business section during an Orange procession, or any other big event of a similar nature.

WOULD YOU LIVE LIKE GUS?

Here's a man who has never talked over a phone, seen a movie, heard a radio, chewed gum, eaten ice cream, worn a collar or ridden in a train or auto.

And he's 70 years old.

Meet Gus Bishop of Liberty, Mo.

Gus lives in the house where he was born. That house and a few miles of territory surrouding it are his empire. Kansas City is only 20 miles away. But Gus has only been to K. C. once. That was 60 years ago.

Immanuel Kant lived much the same sort of life. And yet he was one of the great metaphysical philosophers.

Why marvel at Gus? Abraham Lincoln never talked over a phone, saw a movie, heard a radio, chewed gum, ate ice cream or rode in an auto.

Lincoln did travel. He did wear a collar. He did ride in a train.

But a large part of his life was spent in the simplicity that has always surrounded Gus. And it was the most important part of Lincoln's life—the time when he was, by contact with nature and books and straight-thinking friends—developing his spiritual nature that made him famous.

Movies, autos, radio, trains and all the rest of the long list of "marvels" are not basic things in life. They are simply forms of conveniences and diversion—tools for accomplishment and the relaxation that is necessary while our bodies' batteries are recharging for more accomplishment.

The main functions of life are growth, maintenance of health, mental and spiritual development, marriage, rearing a family and making a living. Self-preservation and self-propagation, the scientists put it. The "marvels" of life are accessories or tools for these simple functions.

Most of us are surrounded by such a clutter of "marvels" that we check out into the Hereafter in a state of mental confusion as to just what has happened and what it's all about. Life is simple. Man makes it complex and confusing.

Our guess is that old Gus Bishop has forgotten more of the "real stuff" than will ever be learned by most people who utilize the "marvels" of our generation.

THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

Eric Liddell, the Scottish runner whose conscience refused to allow him to represent Great Britain in the 100-metre sprint at the Olympic Games because the qualifying heats were conducted on Sunday, proved yesterday that his speed is as sound as his moral courage by winning the 400-metre event, breaking the world's record for the distance.

Under the circumstances Liddell's triumph will be all the more welcome, and thousands of people throughout the Empire who honoured him for the stand he took will be delighted at his spectacular success against the world's best.

The United States, with a small army of contestants and scientifically trained and developed specialists in field events, may win enough points in the present games to claim the team championship, but so far as the track events in which public interest chiefly centres are concerned th eAmerican prestige is being sadly shaken.

At the shorter distances British runners have taken first place in three out of the four events, while at the middle and longer distances the sensational Finnish runners, Nurmi and Ritola, have shown a clean pair of heels to the American cracks.

Abrahams of Great Britain won the 100 metres, Liddell of Great Britain the 400 metres and Lowe of Great Britain the 800 metres. Only in the 200-metre event was the Union Jack not first, and but for the fact that Abrahams collapsed after his sensational performances that laurel, too, would likely have gone to the British team.

The American Olympic plan is to send a battalion of entries so that even if first place is not always won enough points will be secured to capture the points championship.

This is a business-like method, and is likely to succeed, but the spectacular feats of Abrahams, Lowe and Liddell for the British and Nurmi and Ritola for the Finnish team will doubtless be remembered long after the pole vault, broad-jump and other field successes of the United States team are forgotten.

"This is the greatest country on the face of the globe. Our young men in the games, individually and collectively, reflect the supremacy of America in all world affairs, whether it be financially or physical," boasts the New York American.

What is reflected by the fact that some of these young men have done nothing but follow the flying Britishers and the meteor Finns across the finishing line in all but one of the track events, the American may explain later on.

THE AMERICAN PRESIDENCY.

Our American neighbors have the great comfort of knowing that, no matter which party is victorious next November, they will get a good President.

This is on the supposition, of course, that they are able to elect a President at all. The intervention of La Follette, strengthened as it undoubtedly will be by the nomination of two Eastern men by the two great parties, may easily prevent an election, either by the College or in the House. In that case, the Vice-President—to be chosen by the Senate—must serve; so it is quite on the cards that the United States may at long last have a President Bryan.

But either Calvin Coolidge or John W. Davis will make a Chief Executive of whom the American people may well be proud. As we are outside the sphere of American politics, we may perhaps be permitted to say that it will make precious little practical difference in the government of the country which one is chosen. They both belong to what may be called the "conservative" wings of their parties. Mr. Davis is most ostentatiously labelled a West Virginian, but recently he has been earning his living as a New York lawyer, with a quite natural inclination to work for men who can pay big fees. This is bound to hurt him in the West; and even the selection of "Billy" Bryan's brother as his running mate will not wholly remove "the curse." It was just such a sin that rendered the great Elihu Root permanently unavailable.

Both candidates are made-to-order for La Follette. If the Progressive movement can ever cut any figure in a Presidential election, it ought to do it this year. Every State it can capture will be taken from the Republican column. If it appears to develop much strength as the campaign goes on, this feature of the situation is bound seriously to damage Coolidge's chances elsewhere; for the American people are quite likely to reason that, if La Follette is going to prevent the Republican nominee from securing an actual majority in the College of Electors, the only way to save the election from being thrown into the House and possibly into the Senate—with all the uncertainty and danger involved—will be to elect the eminently safe and sane Democratic nominee, ex-Ambassador Davis.

* * * *

The determination of the convention to nominate Senator Walsh for Vice-President was a deserved compliment to the plucky and industrious Montana lawyer who—almost single-handed—tore the cover from the shocking oil scandals. But Senator Walsh very wisely prefers his seat on the floor of the Senate where he can affect legislation, to the dim glory of merely presiding over the deliberations of that body.

Governor Bryan is bound to bring the Bryanite faction into line. Even the Spartan William Jennings will hardly withhold his active support from a ticket containing his brother. This was undoutedly the feeling that nominated the less-known Bryan. The Peerless One and his friends had to be placated after the convention had chosen for its standard-bearer one of the two or three men whom Mr. Bryan had black-listed. Next to "Al" Smith, Bryan probably dislikes Davis most.

By that same token, next to "Al" Smith, Davis undoubtedly has the best chance of carrying New York. He is a New York man. He is acceptable to Wall Street. If Governor Smith can transfer to him some of his tremendous personal "pull" with the voters in New York City, Davis may possibly capture the important and often pivotal delegation from this big State. His nomination, of course, resolidifies the South. But his weakness will appear in the Middle West. He is about the poorest candidate that the convention could have selected for such States as Indiana, Ohio, Nebraska and the more or less Radical bloc. And he must make some inroads in this region to be elected.—Montreal Star.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, July 12. — There was a good-sized run of cattle at the Union Stock Yards on Monday, and the trading was quite apathetic during the first two hours. The active operations of the exporters set the packers in action later and at the close of the day 3,800 of the 4,000 shipment had been disposed of. For the succeeding days the supply was not too generous with the result that the prices strengthened in butchers' steers and heifers anywhere from 13 to 30 cents a cwt. from the previous week. The exporters took upwards of 20 per cent. of the week's receipts of 5,800, and will be in the market again next week for a supply equally as large if available.

There was little, it any, change in the price of exporters from the previous week. For top loads $8.25 a cwt. was paid, and good choice steers brought $8.50. A large number of medium weights were bought and those not finished will be shipped as stores. These cost about $7.00 a cwt. For choice export heifers prices ruled from $6.75 to $7.25 a cwt. Choice 1,200 pound butchers for home use sold at $7.50 in quantity and up to $8.00 a cwt. in small select lots. Baby beeves sold well during the week, and for an extra choice one $10.00 a cwt. was paid on Thursday. The major part of these, however, did not get above $8.00 a cwt.

Medium and good butchers were stronger following Monday, and the former were up close to $7.00, and the better mediums $6.15 to $6.40.

Common killers with a showing of fat were good for $5.50, but the poorest ones went as low as $4.50. Butchers' cows in the bulk were easy, but occasional choice ones brought $6.00. Real good cows sold at $5.00 to $5.25. Medium, $4.00 to $4.25, and common cows $3.00 to $3.50 a cwt. Bulls were not in any great supply and held quite steady with prices in close proximity to that for cows.

The trade in stockers was unusually quick, and only a few loads were dealt in. Light 600-pound heifers, not breedy, were below $4.00 a cwt., and steers were not much above. A small number of feeders 800 to 900 pounds were dealt in at $5.00 to $5.50. There is no improvement in the milchers and springers, and none of these found a market above $75.00 each this week. The expectancy for next week is for steady prices with the demand largely concentrated on the good to choice butchers. Those only just warmed up on the grass, and by no means finished will encounter the usual difficult market for unwanted stuff.

Calves have been firmer, with an outlet for nine or ten loads in Buffalo, where tops are quoted at $12.50 a cwt. A few fancy calves sold during the week at $10.00, but the average good calf did not sell over $9.00 a cwt. Good mediums brought $8.00, and thin unfinished ones $5.00 to $6.00. Heavy grassers went at $3.00 to $4.00 a cwt.

0 Lambs are down around half a dollar a cwt. for the week, with tops at the close not better than 14 cents a pound. The receipts have been quite liberal as next week bucks will be discounted $2.0 0a cwt. Poor quality light lambs are selling from 10 to 11 cents and yearling lambs are about the same prices. Sheep are not too strong, and those out of the handyweight class are not better than 5 cents a pound. Ewes with good mouths are selling up to as high as 7 cents a pound.

Packers are getting a liberal supply of hogs and desire to get the price back to $7.50 a cwt. f.o.b. The market during the week has ruled from $7.75 to $7.90, but bids sent out at the week-end are only $7.50.

HOSPITAL WINS INDIGENCE CASE FROM TOWNSHIP

Clarke Township, in Durham County, Assessed $733.50 By Judge Huycke.

MOTHER OF FOURTEEN

Died in Bowmanville Hospital—Two Children Gave Her a Little Help.

In a decision handed down by Judge Huycke the Bowmanville Hospital is awarded its claim against the township of Clarke in Durham county for the care of Mrs. Charlotte Moore, mother of fourteen children, whose life of service ended in indigence. The award of $891 is reduced by the sum of $157.50 paid on account by Sidney Moore who showed some interest in his aged mother's distress. The balance is $733.50 which the municipality is ordered to pay with costs of the action. Proceedings are stayed until October 1st and twenty days after that date are allowed for appealing.

The written judgment follows:

The Bowmanville Hospital (plaintiff) and The Municipal Corporation of the Township of Clarke (defendant). Mr. D. B. Simpson, K.C., for the plaintiff, Mr. F. M. Field, K.C., for the defendant.

This is an action brought by the Bowmanville Hospital, which is a hospital receiving government aid under the Hospitals and Charitable Institutions Act, being R.S.O. Cap. 300. The action is brought against the Municipality under Section 23 of that Act. The claim is for care and attendance in the Hospital of Mrs. Charlotte Moore, who it is alleged was an indigent and a resident of the said Township.

The circumstances of the latter days of this old lady indeed are peculiarly painful. She was a former resident for many years of the Township of Cramake and was a mother of fourteen children, most of whom attained maturity. Her husband died a number of years ago and she went to live with various of her children after an interval, most of them being in the northwest territories and some in the United States. Two were residents in Ontario, Mrs. Mary E. White, wife of Samuel White, a farmer of Clarke Township, and her youngest son Sidney Moore, who is supposed to be somewhere in Ontario, but his present residence unknown. Sidney brought his mother to Mrs. White's, arriving there on the 21st of November, 1921. Sidney is an unmarried man for a time worked for a farmer living not far away. The old lady, Mrs. Moore lived in Clarke Township with Mrs. White from the 21st of November, 1921, up to the 12th of August, 1922, when she was taken to the plaintiff hospital. She remained there until September 24th, 1922, when she returned to Mrs. White's somewhat improved in health. She became worse and on the 29th October, 1922, she was taken back to the hospital and remained there a helpless paralytic most of the time from that date until the 14th of June, 1924, when she died.

One Son Faithful.

Sidney was not the only one of the man children who seemed to care or do very much for his mother. He paid for her care at the hospital the first period she was there and made various payments on account of hte second stay; he did not pay anything after March 8th, 1923. The daughter Mrs. White was invariably kind to the mother. It was Sidney who took his mother to the hospital on both occasions and arranged for her to stay there, and when through lack of work he went away he promised to send money for the support and maintenance of his mother as best he could. Communications have been sent to him to various last known addresses but he cannot now be found.

There is no dispute as to the dates of admission and death, or as to the payments made, or for the rates or charges in the hospital. The sole question is whether or not the Township is responsible.

Questions in Court.

Section 23 of the Act so far as applicable reads as follows:—"The corporation of the municipality in which an indigent person admitted to a hospital receiving aid under this Act is at the time of his admission resident shall be liable to pay the governing body of the hospital the charges for his treatment—" The two questions of fact that have to be determined are (1) Was she an indigent? and (2) Was she a resident of Clarke Township? Both questions I think must be answered in the affirmative. She resided continuously in this township nearly a year before her second admission to the hospital, which is I think ample to constitute her a resident. It is a much longer period than is provided by the regulations referred to in Collingwood vs Vespra, 25 O.W.N. page 399. These regulations were not before me except as in the judgment and I do not know what is their legal effect, but regardless of them I findthat she resided in the Township of Clarke for nearly a year before the 29th of October, 1922, and she had no other place of residence; that she was an indigent goes also without saying. She had no propertly of her own, and seemed deserted and neglected by all her children with the exception of the two referred to. Sidney paid all thta he was able to pay for a time and the reason for his discontinuance of payments is not shown. Mrs. White has no property of her own as was rather exultantly declared by her husband, a fairly prosperous farmer of the defendant township.

Paid at First.
